AGROS VBI NASCITVR ORNAT SERVATQVE

TO THE QUEENS MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

Most Dread Soveraigne,

YOU are graciouſly pleaſed to permitt YOUR obedient ſubjects to come into YOUR Royal Preſence, to give YOUR MAJESTY aſſurances of their Affection and Duty. Amongſt others who enjoy the Honour and Benefit of That Indulgence, I now humbly make my obeyſance to Your moſt Serene Majesty. I come with a heart full of Duty and Loyalty, to lay at Your ſacred feet the Hiſtory of the Exchequer of Your Royal Progenitours Kings of England: A Hiſtory diſplaying in ſome meaſure the ſplendour of That Imperial Crown, which from the Renowned Saxon and Normannick race rightfully deſcendeth to Your Majesty, and is placed by Divine Providence upon Your Illuſtrious Head.

It is Your Majesties felicity, that You are ſprung from Ancient Kings; and eſpecially, that You inherit, by the peculiar favour of Heaven, Their Royal Vertues. They, in their reſpective times in the courſe of ſeveral ages, were famous for their Wiſdom and Magnanimity, their Munificence, Juſtice, and Clemency. It was their Glory, to protect the Innocent, to relieve the Oppreſſed, to vindicate Right, to ſupport Religion and Vertue; in a word, to Rule Juſtly. And Theſe are the Royal Vertues, which ſhine-forth in YOUR MAJESTIES Perſon and auſpicious Government. By meaſures ſo becoming a Good Prince, YOUR MAJESTY is rendred truly Great, and YOUR people truly Happy.

But the influence of YOUR Royal Vertues reacheth even beyond thoſe large and mighty Nations which are ſubject to YOUR MAJESTIES Rule: It reacheth to Foreign Princes and States; To ſome of Which, YOUR Amity is no leſs Beneficial, than YOUR Arms are Terrible to Others. May it pleaſe ALMIGHTY GOD to grant

YOUR

YOUR MAJESTY a Long and Happy Reign, with an encreaſe of Proſperity and Glory. This is the ardent Wiſh and Prayer of

May it pleaſe YOUR MAJESTY,

YOUR MAJESTIES

moſt loyal, moſt obedient,

and

moſt devoted ſubject,

THOMAS MADOX.

To the Right Honourable

JOHN LORD SOMERS

BARON of EVESHAM,

PEER of GREAT BRITAIN.

MY LORD,

IT is obſerved, that the Science of Antiquities hath in this Laſt age been cultivated in England with more induſtry and ſucceſs, than in ſeveral ages Before. Of this, divers cauſes have been conjecturally aſſigned by Curious Perſons in their private Converſations. Some have thought, men have applied themſelves to this ſort of Study, Becauſe they found, upon taking a view of the ſtate of Learning, or at leaſt fancied, that moſt other Subjects were in a manner exhauſted, whilſt This had been extreamly neglected. Others ſuppoſed it was, Becauſe the Antiquaries, being led by a certain Curioſity or Ambition natural to Mankind, have been touched with a deſire of Knowing thoſe things of which the generality of Men are Ignorant. Others, That it might be owing to Accident, or that Turn and Viciſſitude in mens Humours and Diſpoſitions, which Time is wont to produce. For my part, though I do not oppoſe any of theſe Conjectures: yet I think Another probable Cauſe may be aſſigned: And That is, the Encouragement which hath been given to Theſe Studies, by ſeveral Perſons of Eminent Learning, and of Superiour Order in the Realm, in their reſpective times. It is, no doubt, a Great Honour to the Science of Antiquities, to have on its ſide ſuch Celebrated Names as It can boaſt of. Amongſt the Patrons it hath in the preſent age, Your Lordſhip may juſtly be placed in the Upper rank. But in regard the other Bodies of Learned men in the Civil Community may affirm each for themſelves, that You are a Maſter of Their Science; the Antiquaries muſt be content to have ſuch Share in Your Lordſhip, as is conſiſtent with the Juſt Claim of the Learned of other Faculties. I know, My Lord, the Lovers of Antiquities are commonly looked-upon to be men of a Low unpolite genius, fit only for the Rough and Barbarick part of Learning. But they are perſuaded, that ſuch an imputation cannot hurt them, whilſt they have on their ſide perſons ſo Polite and Accompliſhed, as (to omitt others) Your Lordſhip is univerſally known to be.

Although the ſubject of the Engliſh Antiquities hath (as I ſaid before) been pretty well cultivated of late years; it is ſtill capable of Great improvements. Conſidering therefore, that there are many Parts of it, which want a further illuſtration; I have pitched upon One (That of the Exchequer), which I preſume is well worthy of the Pains I have beſtowed on it. It deſerved indeed a more Skilfull Hand. But ſeeing Others Better qualified would not engage in the Undertaking, I Have. If I ſhould ſay I was incited to it by the fervent Zeal I had for the Publick Service (as men commonly ſpeak upon the like occaſions); I might expect to be credited as much as others uſe to be, who ſay the Same thing. But though it is true, that I had a Due ſenſe of my Obligation to ſerve the Publick, and a Deſire to acquitt my ſelf tolerably therein: Yet if, in the courſe of thoſe years which have been employed on This ſubject, I had not been ſometimes relieved by that Pleaſure which ſtudious perſons are wont to meet with in their Diſquiſitions, I am not ſure my Zeal for the Publick Service would, ſingly of it ſelf, have carried me through ſo Tedious and Toilſome a Work. It is ſufficient therefore, if I had Such a Zeal to ſerve the Publick, as an Honeſt and Induſtrious man ought to have.

Your Lordſhip hath at preſent condeſcended to bear the Perſon of the Reader. And I count my ſelf very fortunate, that it happens to be ſo. You being Maſter of that candour, and thoſe other qualities which they that write Books deſire to find their Readers poſſeſt of: I am willing to hope, that other Readers will diſpoſe themſelves to be ſuch as Your Lordſhip is: But if it ſhould fall out otherwiſe, I ſhall be the better guarded againſt the exceptions of ungentle perſons, in caſe my Performance be able to endure the Cenſure of Your Exact Judgment. But there are likewiſe ſome other things, which make my Addreſs to Your Lordſhip in this caſe the more Natural and Proper. It is not long, ſince You Preſided in a Court, wherein Equity and Clemency are Aſſeſſours to Juſtice (a). And in vertue of the Office of the Kings Chancellour, which You then held, You were in a ſort allyed to the Exchequer. For Your ancient predeceſſours in That Office uſed ordinarily to Sit and Act with great Power at the Exchequer, amongſt the Kings Barons There; as may be ſeen in ſeveral places in this Volume (b). I may be permitted to add, that Your Lordſhip, in concurrence with the Right Honourable and Right Reverend the Peers and Biſhops, Lords Committees appointed by the Houſe of Peers in Parliament, to Conſider the Method of Keeping Records in Offices, has laid a ſolid Obligation upon the Antiquaries. Your Lordſhips the Lords Committees have ſhewn a Vigilant and Prudent Care of thoſe Venerable Remains of Antiquity the Records of this Nation. You have deliberated together, to find out proper means for Keeping them Safely, and for rendring them Uſeful to the Publick, You have viſited perſonally ſeveral of the Repoſitories wherein they are laid, And have obtained from Her Majeſties Treaſury divers large ſumms of money (which out of Her Majeſties wonted Municence were readily granted) for repairing and fitting-up the buildings, where the Records are laid, and for other Services. This, My Lord, is a Publick Benefit to the Nation. Future ages as well as the preſent will be obliged to Your Lordſhips for it. And the great ſhare Your Lordſhip hath had in this affair, juſtly engageth not only the Antiquaries, but all other Curious and Inquiſitive perſons that are Lovers of Hiſtory, to make particular Acknowledgments to Your Lordſhip upon That ſcore: Which I now do, for my own part, with the moſt lively ſentiments of Reſpect.

In the next place, if Your Lordſhip pleaſeth, I will proceed to give a ſuccinct account of ſome things (proper for the Publick to know) touching this Book.

Book. I ſuppoſe it will appear that this Work is altogether New. The Hiſtory of the Exchequer hath not been yet attempted by any man. Some treatiſes have indeed been written concerning the Exchequer, or ſome part of it, or ſome ſort of buſineſs tranſacted There: which treatiſes may be good and uſeful in their kind: But they may rather paſs for general lines or sketches, than juſt diſcourſes: And I think one may ſay, without offence or diſparagement to any man, that they are infinitely Below the Dignity of the Subject. It cannot therefore be ſaid, that I do actum agere: the path I take, being hitherto, in effect, untrodden. For example. I have purſued my ſubject to thoſe Ancient times, to which, I preſume, the original of the Exchequer in England may properly be aſſigned. From thence I have drawn-down an orderly Account of it through a long courſe of years. And having conſulted as well the Books that ſeemed neceſſary to be looked into upon this occaſion, as alſo a very great number of Records and Manuſcripts, I have endeavoured all along to confirm what I offer, by proper vouchers fetched from thence; which vouchers are ſubjoined column-wiſe in each page, in a method eaſy and obvious to the Readers eye, ſave that in the 20th and the Four following Chapters of this Hiſtory, I was forced (to prevent exceſſive Length) to take-out of my written Copy the tenour of many Records cited, and in ſtead thereof to ſet-down barely the Term or Year with the Number of the Roll. I have alſo made it my choice to take my memorials, rather from Records and Manuſcripts not hitherto publiſhed, than from Printed books; that the Reader may be entertained with ſomething New, which he had not Before in his Study in Printed books, and with ſomething (I hope) equally curious with what he had There of this ſort. Upon which ground, I have taken as much care as I well could, not to reprint things that have been already printed in other books. However, I have been the leſs in danger of reprinting at unawares, becauſe my ſubject is in a manner new and untouched. The Records which I here vouch, were taken by my own pen from the authentick membranes; unleſs where it appeareth by my references to be otherwiſe; and except haply in two or three inſtances, which it is not material to recollect. And in giving an account of the Ancient ſtate of the Exchequer, I have for the moſt part contrived (as far as the ſubject matter would permitt), to make uſe of ſuch Memorials, as ſerve either to make known or to illuſtrate the Ancient Laws and uſages of this Kingdom. For which reaſon, the preſent Work may be deemed, not only a Hiſtory of the Exchequer, but likewiſe an apparatus towards a Hiſtory of the Ancient Law of England. 'Tis true, this Volume deſcends, from the Norman Conqueſt, no lower than to the End of K. Edward the Seconds Reign. It ſtops There, to avoid being too voluminous. But if I do not continue the Deduction to the Recent ages; it may be hoped that ſome other perſon will give it a Finiſhing hand: The moſt difficult and obſcure part of the Hiſtory (as I ſuppoſe) being already ſo far maſtered, that the Next volume or Continuation will (if I project right) be both more eaſy to compile and of a ſmaller ſize.

It muſt be acknowledged, My Lord, that amidſt the great variety of things recounted in this Hiſtory, there are ſeveral (incidentally mentioned) that appear to be very different from the uſage not only of the Modern but even of the next foregoing ages. This is to be expected from any Ancient Hiſtory. Some of theſe things were altered by expreſs ſubſequent Laws or Judicial acts: Some became antiquated, or diſuſed in courſe of Time; other new uſages being introduced in their ſtead. And yet, it was neceſſary to mention them, whilſt one is giving an account of the reſpective times antecedent to ſuch Alteration. He that writes the Hiſtory of any age, muſt repreſent things truly, as they were in the age of which he writes. That is a Rule which a Faithful hiſtorian cannot but obſerve. Beſides, it is likely to be moſt beneficial and inſtructive to the Reader, to be apprized of the Ancient ſtate of things as well as of the Modern: That by comparing them together, and by enquiring into the Cauſes of ſuch Alteration as was afterwards ſuperinduced, and the manner in which it was brought about, he may comprehend the ſubject-matter in its full extent. In truth, writing of Hiſtory is in ſome ſort a Religious act. It imports ſolemnity and ſacredneſs; and ought to be undertaken with purity and rectitude of mind. Wilfully to miſrepreſent, and to offer at putting fallacies upon the Publick, is to violate Common Faith and the decent Reſpect that is due to Mankind; In ſumm, it is the part of a man alienated from vertue and honeſty. As for me, I ſhall only ſay, that I have uſed all the care I could to avoid ſalling juſtly under That imputation.

I will now humbly acquaint Your Lordſhip, in what method I begann and proceeded in compiling this Work. Which I chuſe to make known; becauſe it will tend to ſhew, that I deſigned to act therein with Candour. The firſt part of my buſineſs was, to make as full a collection from Records as I could, of Materials relating to the Subject. Thoſe materials being ranged in a certain order in ſeveral books of Collectanea, I reviewed them, and weighing what they imported, and how they might be applied, drew from thence a general ſcheme of the projected Deſign. When I had pitched upon Chapters or heads of Diſcourſe, I took Materials out of the ſtock provided, and digeſted them in proper places under the chapters or heads aſſumed. In doing this, I uſed for the moſt part to write down, in the draught of this Book, the reſpective Records or teſtimonies Firſt of all (that is, before I wrote my own text or compoſition); and from Them formed my hiſtory or account of things; connecting and applying them afterwards, as the caſe would admitt. For I thought I ſhould by That means be held more ſteadily to the Rule I deſired to obſerve, which was, To give ſuch an account of things as might be elicited and drawn out of the memorials cited from time to time; and not to cite memorials and vouchers for eſtabliſhing of any private opinions preconceived in my own mind. As to the firſt part of my buſineſs, the collecting of materials, That, one may gueſs, was laborious enough. The labour, beſides the expenſe, of reſorting often and often to Repoſitories of Records in diſtant places, Of enoteing and copying Memorials from thence, And of peruſing a vaſt number of things, for a Few comparatively that one actually Collects: I ſay, the labour of this cannot eaſily be eſtimated by any man who has not had ſome experience of it. Inſomuch that I have often been put in mind of what Sir H. Spelman ſays upon the like occaſion, Grave eſt omnia ab archivis rimari, & incertum eſt quod non inde petitur (c). However I was the better ſupported under this Labour, by the encouragement I had from ſeveral Perſons of Honour and Worth whoſe Favour and Civility made my acceſs to Records and Manuſcripts as eaſy to me as the nature of the thing would permitt. I am extreamly obliged upon That account, to the Right Reverend Thomas Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter Dean of Weſtminſter, to the Reverend the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, to Dr. Greene Maſter of Corpus Chriſti College in Cambridg, to Peter le Neve Eſq; Norroy King at Arms, a Deputy-Chamberlain of the Exchequer; and eſpecially to the Right Honourable William Lord Viſcount Cheyne late Maſter of the Pipe-office, to Sir John Cooke Knight, Dr. of Laws, Dean of the Arches, preſent Maſter of the Pipe-office, and to Richard Topham Eſq; Keeper of Her Majeſties Records in the Tower of London. The Memorials or vouchers contained in this Work are taken from Records of the Higheſt nature; to wit, from the Great Rolls of the Pipe, the Memoranda of the Exchequer, and the Rolls of ſeveral ſorts in the Tower of London. All which Records, having been written by Publick officers and by publick authority, at the time when the things recorded therein were Done, carry in them a full and undoubted credit. Great regard is indeed to be had to the Annals or hiſtory contained in Regiſters of Churches; and in the Manuſcript collections of Ancient Writers; particularly in relation to things done in their Own life-time, or lying within their perſonal knowledg. But no doubt, the Publick Records of the Crown and Kingdom are the moſt important and moſt authentick of All. And Theſe are the Foundation which ſuſtain the whole Fabrick of this Hiſtory. A Foundation ſolid and unſhaken. In truth, the Superſtructure is Alike; It conſiſting of the ſame kind of materials. So that in the Fabrick there is nothing feeble except what is properly Mine; namely Diſpoſition and Workmanſhip. However, I hope I ſhall be the more eaſily pardoned for what may be amiſs; if it be conſidered, that with my own induſtry and expenſe, the materials here uſed were dug out of deep and hidden mines, the model of the Building was framed, the columns adjuſted, the ſtones ſquared, weighed and diſpoſed, in ſumm the whole Fabrick raiſed and perfected in ſuch manner as it is. I will confeſs to Your Lordſhip, that whilſt this Work was going forward, I was ſometimes moved with a ſort of Ambition; which, probably, will not be thought culpable. I am upon my guard, that I do do not ſpeak any thing before Your Lordſhip and the Publick, that may be judged inconſiſtent with decorum. My Ambition was, to form this Hiſtory in ſuch a manner, that it may be a Pattern for the Antiquaries to follow, if They pleaſe; I mean, purely in reference to the method of vouching Teſtimonies. For I think it is to be wiſhed, that the Hiſtories of a Countrey ſo well furniſhed with Records and Manuſcripts as Ours is, ſhould be grounded throughout (as far as is practicable) on proper Vouchers. And for my own part, I cannot look upon the Hiſtory of England to be compleatly written, till it ſhall come to be written after That manner. Upon conſideration of this matter, I muſt make a requeſt to the gentle Reader: to wit, That when he peruſeth this Book, he will pleaſe to read not only the Narration or Text, but alſo the Teſtimonies couched in the Margin: For They are, in my opinion, the moſt Valuable part of the Work; and by conſequence the moſt Worthy to be read.

(c) Gloſſ. p. 344. col. 2.

A few things, My Lord, may be here remarked concerning ſeveral paſſages in this hiſtory, which may ſeem to require explanation. As to the quotations made from the Great Rolls of the Pipe: it is to be known, that many entries are here cited, which are not taken out of the Great Roll in which the debt ſpecified in ſuch entries was originally or Firſt put in Charge. For example. Where a man Fined or was Amerced in a ſumm of money, ſuppoſe C l, and paid part of the Fine or Amercement, ſuppoſe L l in hand, and ſtood charged with the remainder, viz. L l, in a ſubſequent year: I have ſometimes cited the Roll of ſuch ſubſequent year. In That caſe, I held it ſufficient, to ſay, that the party Fined or was Amerced at L l. For it would have been too Laborious a thing, and was not Material in it ſelf, to trace the Debt (which, perhaps, might continue in Charge many years together) to the Roll wherein it was Firſt put in Charge: It being Equal (as to the purpoſe for which I make the Citation) to take the Entry out of the Roll of a Former or Following year. Again; ſome of theſe Entries may chance to miſlead Chronologers, unleſs they apply them cautiouſly. For it is frequent to find perſons ſtand Charged in theſe Rolls with Debts to the Crown, after the perſons Debtours were Dead. It being the Courſe of the Exchequer, that Debts, when once put in Charge pro Rege, ſhould be kept in Charge, till they are Paid or legally Diſcharged. And the manner or time of putting a Debt in Charge doth not ſeem to have been ſo certain and ſteady, but that a Chronologer may be either puzled or miſledd, if the thing he looks-for falls within a narrow compaſs of time.

In the Catalogue of the Barons of the Exchequer (in Chap. xxv.), the perſons named for Barons during the Firſt Period, are Such as at That time Sat and Acted at the Exchequer, and were Then uſually comprized under the Denomination of Barons. Beſides thoſe that I have ſet down, there were, no doubt, ſeveral others in moſt of the years. It is to be taken for granted that the Chief Juſticier, the Kings Chancellour, and his Treaſurer were Aſſeſſours at the Exchequer, although they happen not to be named in the Records of Some years: For they Sat and Acted There ex Officio. There were alſo in ſome years Other Barons who are not named in the Catalogue in thoſe years: As, when in the Records ſome Barons are expreſly named, and tis added Et alij Barones. Again, when ſome Barons are not named as Such in One year, and are named as Such in the year or years next foregoing and next following, In ſuch caſe it may be well preſumed, that they were Barons in the intermediate year wherein they happen not to be named. However, I have been ſo wary as to put None into the Catalogue, but ſuch as are expreſly named in the Records cited. And though I do not count the Catalogue eſſential to the preſent Hiſtory, but rather matter of ornament; I have beſtowed on it ſome pains; perhaps more than a Chapter conſiſting barely of mens names, may, in the opinion of many perſons, deſerve. In forming this Catalogue, and in ſeveral other particulars fetched from the Rolls of the Chancery, I had great aſſiſtance from my very Good Friend Mr. Holmes, Deputy-Keeper of the Records in the Tower of London.

At the end of this Hiſtory I have publiſhed a copy of the Treatiſe concerning the Exchequer, written Dialogue-wiſe and commonly aſcribed to Gervaſius Tilburienſis. The Treatiſe is very Ancient, and I believe, intrinſically Valuable. And That ſingly is a ſufficient reaſon for making it publick. But if I had not publiſhed it, there is cauſe to fear, it would have been asked, Why

I did not. As to the Treatiſe it ſelf, I have given ſome account of It, in the Epiſtle to My Lord Halifax which is ſet before it.

I have not, in this volume, given any hiſtorical account of the Records repoſited in the Exchequer. I think That may be more properly done (if there is occaſion for it hereafter) in the Continuation or Next Part; that is, at the end of the whole Hiſtory; in which place, it may be done in a ſeries once for all. But I, who am ſhut-up within Two Periods of Time, the latter whereof goes no lower than the reign of K. Edward II, cannot attempt to do it Here, without offending againſt the ſettled method of this Work. For there are many Records in the Exchequer ſubſequent to the reign of K. Edward II. But my method forbids me to treat of things that were Done or Recorded ſince That time. For ſundry reaſons I have thought it expedient to ſay ſomething concerning the moſt Ancient Great Roll of the Exchequer, namely That of Quinto Regis Stephani. My enquiries concerning It were at firſt deſigned to be included in this Prefatory Epiſtle to Your Lordſhip. But finding they would puſh me beyond the proper limits of an Epiſtle, I was obliged to put them into the form of a ſeparate Diſſertation. That Diſſertation I have placed in the Appendix at the end of this Hiſtory. It ſtands there amongſt tracts that are in Latin. And for the ſake of conformity, I have put it into That language. It is my requeſt, that I may have the honour of addreſſing it to Your Lordſhip.

In ſome caſes (as the Reader will ſoon diſcern) I have put-together a great many inſtances of the ſame thing. I take That courſe, the better to ſhew How the practice and uſage was: Which is to be ſhewn, not by a ſingle inſtance, but by repeated and continued ones. On the other ſide; it is likely ſome parts of this hiſtory will ſeem ſcanty and defective. And no wonder. For wherein authentick memorials are not extant or have rarely occurred, therein I think it proper to be either wholly ſilent or ſparing of diſcourſe.

For the ſake of ſome of my Readers that haply are not verſed in Ancient membranes, it may be convenient to notify here two or three things. In old times they frequently wrote only the Firſt Letter of a Chriſten-name; eſpecially in the caſe of perſons of high rank: as J. for Johannes, G. for Galfridus, W. for Willelmus, and the like. This they did, not only in acts of light moment, but even in the moſt important Records and Writings. So alſo they oftimes wrote mens ſurnames ſhort or abbreviated; as Bard. for Bardolf, Mald. for Malduit, Hum. for Humet &c. And they did the ſame in the names of Places. Again; they frequently wrote Capital letters in the middle or latter end of a word amongſt the Small letters whereof the word was compoſed. This was done even in things that were written with the utmoſt care and exactneſs: and this (if I obſerve right) is, here in England, often a mark of the great antiquity of the Hand: and how improper ſoever it may ſeem to be, many things thus written do look very fine and elegant. I would willingly have cauſed ſome inſtances hereof to be engraven for examples ſake; as I would likewiſe ſeveral other things occaſionally inſerted in this Hiſtory: but the expenſe of graving forbids me, who am unaſſiſted by the Publick in theſe Labours, to attempt it. They alſo commonly wrote Idem for Iidem; and ſometimes Æ diphthong for the ſingle E, as in Æccleſia Ædwardus &c; and contrarywiſe, almoſt univerſally e for æ in words of feminine gender, as mee, noſtre, for meæ, noſtræ &c; but ſometimes (in the ages next after the Norman Conqueſt) ę for e and for æ, as eccleſię ſuę for eccleſiæ ſuæ &c. Again; ſometimes they broke an entire word into two parts, as id circo, en countre, ki kunkes, &c: at other times they wrote two words joined as if they were one word, as pacisfracturam, Blachetoritonhundredum, fidedignos, &c. In fine; in the reigns of K. K. Henry III and Edward I, they ſometimes wrote rengnum, aſſingnare, &c, for regnum, aſſignare, &c; and the like. There are alſo many other ancient peculiarities of writing; too many to be recollected and inſerted here. I have mentioned theſe for inſtances; that they and other like may not be lookt upon to be miſtakes of the Copyiſt. The Reader is alſo to be advertiſed, that in many caſes where the termination of a word is doubtful, by reaſon the word is written contracted in the Record, I have added the termination in crotchets; as will appear in many inſtances.

When a Man, though a Native of this Iſland, comes freſh to peruſe a ſyſteme of Antiquities, or a piece of Ancient hiſtory of the ſame Iſland, he is like one newly landed in a Strange countrey. He finds himſelf in another climate. He obſerveth many things ſtrange and uncouth in Language, Laws, cuſtoms, and manners. The ſcene which I here diſplay to the publick may be New to many men. But it will not be So to Your Lordſhip; who are converſant in the Ancient hiſtory of this Kingdom as well as the Modern, and in the hiſtory of Foreign Countries as well as of our Own.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, to them who ſhall diligently read this Book, it will, I preſume, appear, that the Regal Exchequer of England was erected and contrived with great Wiſdom. The ſeveral parts of it are compact and correſpondent; various, yet orderly; ſtrong, yet finely compoſed. The aſſiſes and cuſtoms of it are grounded upon ſure and ſteady maxims. The buſineſs of it is manifold; and requireth great knowledg, induſtry, and experience in affairs; eſpecially in the Superiour Officers, who are to give motion to ſo great and noble a ſyſteme. The miniſters of it are numerous, but with mutual Controll; and have their reſpective functions regularly diſtributed, for the benefit and ſafety both of the Crown and people. In fine, the Conſtitution of it is admirable; and not to be altered or touched without great caution and mature judgment.

But, My Lord, whilſt I am buſied in illuſtrating Ancient Hiſtory, I foreſee an objection that will in all likelyhood be made againſt me. There are ſome perſons who ſeem habitually diſpoſed to ſpeak meanly of all parts of Learning which are not directly lucrative. They are apt to ſay, Of what uſe are theſe old antiquated things; give us what is more ſuitable to the age we live in; and ſuch like. But if we examine theſe allegations, they will, I ſuppoſe, be found to have no force. Every part of Learning is of ſome uſe. Though one man may not know or conſider the uſe of it, another man may. If no Books muſt be read beſides ſuch as treat of things which ſerve directly for profit or preſent uſe, all Hiſtory of Ancient times or of Foreign Countries may ſoon be laid aſide. No man of ſenſe has ever yet been found ſo hardy as to ſpeak expreſly in diſparagement of Hiſtory, or pretend that it was or is a uſeleſs thing. Hiſtory is an eſſential part of the encyclopædia: And ſo many handſome things have been ſpoken in praiſe of it by judicious men in ſeveral paſt ages, that there is no need to ſay any thing here upon the ſubject. Now Hiſtory may be ſaid to be twofold, Ancient and Modern. The former conſiſts of Antiquities; and cannot even in thought be ſeparated from them. It appears therefore, that the knowledg of Antiquities is a part of the Hiſtorical Learning, and cannot be impugned without impugning Hiſtory it ſelf. More particularly as to the objection which I have mentioned above. If the Gentlemen who object in That manner are Scholars, their own conduct is inconſiſtent with their objection in this caſe. They themſelves have beſtowed much time, labour, and expenſe, in learning Foreign Languages, and in reading Foreign Books. They have been converſant in Books written many ages ago, in Greek and in Latin, by Philoſophers, Hiſtorians, Philologers, Oratours, and Poets. They have willingly ſubmitted to this laborious ſtudy, in order to get a knowledg of the Laws, manners, rites, and cuſtoms, both ancient and ſubſequent, of the Greeks and Romans, in their naſcent, mature, or declining ſtate. Then, the preceptors of theſe Gentlemen told them, that by attentive ſtudy and converſing in well-choſen Books, men whoſe minds are capable of juſt improvements, learn the experience and wiſdom of paſt ages, and acquire ſuch a ripeneſs of judgment and comprehenſion in affairs, as qualifieth them to ſerve their Countrey. And then, they believed this to be true; as, no doubt it is. For reaſons of the like kind, they have travelled into Foreign Countries, where politeneſs is planted; to obſerve and learn their Laws, cuſtoms, and manners. But do the Political Conſtitution, Laws, and Manners of Ancient Greece or Rome bear a nearer affinity or reſemblance to Thoſe of Britain at this day, than the Ancient Conſtitution, Laws, and Manners of Britain do to Thoſe of Britain in the modern or preſent times? Are we concerned to know the manners and cuſtoms which were in uſe amongſt the Grecians and Romans many ages ago: and not concerned to know the cuſtoms and manners of our Own anceſtours, at a far leſs diſtance of time? Do we think it beneficial to be verſed in the hiſtory, both ancient and modern, of Foreign nations: and are we at the ſame time content to deſpiſe or neglect the ancient hiſtory of our Own? It is true, ſome Foreign hiſtories, eſpecially thoſe of Ancient Greece and Rome, are more valuable than our Own, conſidered ſimply in themſelves; the former being much better written: But That, (I preſume) is a conſideration which ſhould excite us, in general, ral, to cultivate the Hiſtorical Learning in Britain rather than to neglect it; and in particular, to imitate the noble patterns of this kind which the Greeks and Romans have ſet. It is alſo true, that ſome hiſtories may appear to be more uſeful and excellent than others, upon a compariſon made of them. Modern hiſtory (if equally well written) may be in ſome reſpects preferable to ancient, as being better adapted to preſent uſe. Nevertheleſs, when the ancient and modern are well conjoined, the hiſtory is more complete, than if it was barely ancient or barely modern. Becauſe it is of greater advantage to have things repreſented in their full extent, than only in parts. But what I ſaid at firſt will ſtill remain true, namely that Hiſtory whether ancient or modern, is of great uſe. Which is all that I do at preſent contend for.

Conſidering the great variety of the matters contained in this Hiſtory, and the niceneſs of ſome of them, I may be apprehenſive of the Criticks. But as I have taken care to produce from time to time coeval proofs for what I advance, and to avoid propoſing any thing as Certain, that is really Doubtful or fallacious; I have reaſon to think my ſelf ſufficiently guarded againſt any hoſtile attack. Criticks there are and will be as long as there are Writers. Men are generally ſo prone to the humour of criticizing, that ſometimes they fall into it without any ill-will, and as it were by Chance. The warmth which reading and ſtudy excite in the brain, may produce That diſpoſition. But the moſt general motive to it is, a deſire to ſhew ones own Superiority of Learning. This is in ſome degree excuſable, becauſe it is by nature or habit incident to mankind. But there is a latent fault. Let us recollect. It is chiefly by Books that the Lovers of Learning who are at a diſtance in Time or Place, have converſation with one another. And as in Free Converſations amongſt Gentlemen, no wel-behaved man claims Superiority by reaſon of his Titles or Eſtate: So alſo ought it to be in the Free Converſations of Scholars that write and read Books. There, no man ſhould affect Superiority: where mutual deference is more proper and becoming; in fine, where mutual entertainment and improvement, and eſpecially the Advancement of Learning, ought to be the principal motive and deſign. There are alſo ſome Readers who ſtop ſhort upon Writers, purely out of Diffidence. They are upon their guard againſt the ſurprizes of Errour; and will not give aſſent till they have examined and reviſed. Theſe men I do not fear: nay I embrace and eſteem them, as perſons that are in the Right path to Science. Pondering things of this ſort, I have bethought me of ſomewhat that I had formerly written in my Diſſertation introductory to the Formulare Anglicanum (which I had the honour to addreſs to Your Lordſhip), and of an exception that was ſoon after made to it by a very Learned Gentleman, Dr. Hicks, in his incomparable Book entituled, Theſaurus linguarum Septentrionalium &c. I would beg Your Lordſhips patience, whilſt I make a Digreſſion to ſpeak upon That ſubject. The Difference between the Doctour and me in That caſe is, I think, very ſmall. I have the honour to agree with him (without any previous communication had between us), in many particulars relating to the Diplomatick ſubject. And it would have been a favour ſuitable to the curteſy he uſes upon other occaſions, if he had eſſayed to reconcile my notion about the Charta to his Own. This the Doctour could have done Beſt by much. But ſeeing he hapned not to undertake it, I will. In order to ſtate the matter fairly, I have ſet-down, hereunder in the margin, as well the clauſe in my Diſſertation, as the Doctours words in his Preface (d).

But

(d) From the time of the Norman Conqueſt, thoſe which we now call Deeds or Writings, were generally called chartæ, charters. This name was brought into common uſe by the Normans; as Ingulf obſerves. Tis true, the word chartula dos ſometimes occurr in the Latin charters of the Anglo-ſaxon age. Whether thoſe Latin charters are Genuine and Originals, or whether they are not ſometimes only Tranſlations, made after the Conqueſt, I will not ſtay to enquire. But it ſhould ſeem, that Charta in this ſenſe was not a Received name in the Angloſaxon times. However, I think tis certain, that from the time of the Conqueſt, it became a word of General uſe: and ſo continued long after. Form. Anglic. in Diſſert. p. 3.

—— ita alijs in nonnullis a nobis forte differt, ut in præfationis ſuæ p. 3, ubi auctoritate Ingulphi fretus, vocem forenſem ſeu diplomaticam, chartam vel cartam, non uſu receptam fuiſſe apud Angloſaxones ſe exiſtimare ſcribit. Then the Doctour referrs to his Epiſtolary Diſſertation. Neque crede mihi, Ottleye, vel fingere animo poſſum τὸ charta

uſu

But the caſe is in ſhort This. I ſaid, “ That the word Charta was brought into Common uſe in England by the Normans; that it ſometimes occurrs in the Latin inſtruments of the Angloſaxon age; that Charta in this [viz. in the Anglonorman or Modern] ſenſe was not, as it ſeemed to me, a Received name in the Angloſaxon times; and, that from the time of the Conqueſt it became a word of general uſe, and ſo continues. Upon this the Doctour animadverts. In the firſt place, the Doctour, ſpeaking of my Formulare, is pleaſed to beſtow on me ſeveral encomiums; which are owing to his innate civility. Then he proceeds to ſhew ſome particulars wherein he agrees with me; and then the point wherein, he ſays, we differ. The ſumm of what he ſpeaks upon That occaſion is This: “ That I, relying on the authority of Ingulf, was of opinion that the Diplomatick or Law word Charta was not received amongſt the Angloſaxons; that he could not conceive why I ſhould think ſo, ſeeing cartula or kartula was in frequent uſe amongſt them; that, nevertheleſs, I affirm that it ſeldom occurrs in the inſtruments of donation which in the Angloſaxon times were written in Latin; that Ingulfs authority ought not to hinder us from believing that charta was often uſed by the Angloſaxons; that I, following Spelman as he did Ingulf, ſeemed to think, the Angloſaxon inſtruments that were in Latin, and wherein the word charta occurred, were not to be accounted Saxon exemplars, but Latin verſions of them, written after the Conqueſt; that he, the Doctour, could not be of That opinion, for a reaſon which he mentions in the 63d page of his Epiſtolary Diſſertation; and that I would do well to conſider, whether K. Edgars charter cited in my Formulare, was not really an Original, written in K. Edgars time. This, My Lord, is the caſe ſtated in ſhort. And this, as I take it, reduceth the matter in difference between the Doctour and me, in effect to This: Whether, charta, was frequently or only ſome times, uſed in Original Angloſaxon inſtruments; Or, whether it was a Received name in the Angloſaxon times, and in the ſame ſenſe or notation as in the Anglonorman. I will not ſpend time about the more or leſs frequent uſe of a word. But what I am going to ſay will, I ſuppoſe, in ſome meaſure reconcile the Doctour and me. The Doctour, in his Preface which I have cited above, proceeded (if I gueſs right) upon the foundation of what he had delivered in the 63d and 64th pages of his Epiſtolary Diſſertation. He ſpeaketh there, concerning certain Original Saxon Charters extant in the Cottonian Library and elſewhere. The word charta is found in ſome of thoſe charters. Upon the credit of their being Original Charters, or to ſecure their being reputed Such, he ſeemeth to have been induced to ſpeak in the manner he dos concerning the ancient uſe of the word charta. In point of bare fact and uſage, the Doctour was (for ought that I know) nearer to the truth than I was; according to the meaning in which he took my words, and in which it was natural enough to take them. But if I am permitted to explain my ſelf in the manner I have done juſt above and ſhall do hereafter in this Digreſſion, I preſume the matter may be brought to terms of accommodation between us. The Doctour ſeems to have taken the word charta in its moſt general ſenſe, as it is deduced from the ancient Latin: And I took it under a peculiar notation, as it is deduced from the ſucceeding Lingua Romana. Concerning which matter I muſt now humbly open my mind to Your Lordſhip.

Upon the declenſion of the Roman Empire, it came to paſs, by warrs, the migration of nations, or perhaps by the fate of things, that the language of ſeveral of the European Countries received a great alteration. This was remarkable in Italy, France and Spain. The Roman language was once planted in thoſe Countries; But in proceſs of time came to be very much depraved and altered; three ſeveral languages (Italian, French, and Spaniſh), reſembling yet differing from each other, having been formed out of It. When the Barbarick nations (I uſe That epithet, purely in complyance with the cuſtom of Speaking, and without any intent to offer diſreſpect to thoſe noble and potent nations which are wont to be comprized under That name), I ſay, when the Barbarick Nations came to ſpread themſelves over Europe and to gain empire, a diſtinction was made between the genuine language of the aforeſaid Countries and the Barbarick. The former, in oppoſition to the latter, was called Lingua Romana and Ruſtica Romana (e); and they that uſed the former were ſometimes for diſtinction-ſake called Romani (f). I will ſtraitway give an inſtance or two of this, in reference to the ancient language of France. But if we take the Lingua Romana Romanica or Romaneſca extenſively, as I ſhall do by and by, we may comprehend under it, as well That part of the French (for example) or Gallick language which was evidently, as alſo That which was not ſo evidently, fetched from the Latin, provided it was not of Teudiſcan original; and, in the ſucceeding ages, even ſome Teudiſcan words (g) which were aſſumed into it. The like, I ſuppoſe, may be ſaid of the Italick lingua Romanica, in relation to the Gothick or Longobardick. This diſtinction between the Gallick lingua Romana and the lingua Barbarica, is very ancient. When Louis and Charles, ſons of Ludovicus Pius, came to an agreement about dividing their fathers empire, they confirmed their agreement by mutual oath. Louis ſwore in the Lingua Romana, and Charles in the Teudiſcan. The Oath of Louis was in the words hereunder written (h). About the ſame time, the ſubjects of each Prince were ſworn in their proper language. The oath taken by the ſubjects of Louis was, in the lingua Romana, of the tenour underwritten (i). This was ſome of the lingua

The moſt ancient Spaniſh Compoſition (written in the Middle ages) that I have ſeen, is that which I have here ſubjoined. It is a piece of Spaniſh Latin, with ſome mixture, as I gueſs, of Mooriſh. It imports a diviſe or bequeſt made by Don Pedro Royz Knight. He gives to the Monaſtery of St. Peter of Arlanſa, his Knightly accoutrements and chatells, to wit his Saddle Morzerzel with the bridle, his ſword, belt, ſpurrs, target and ſpear, wrought ſwords, helmets, plain or unwrought ſwords, horſes, mules, apparel, his other ſpurrs and ſilver bridle. The words of this bequeſt, as they are ſet-down by Prudencio de Sandoval Biſhop of Pamplona, may be ſeen hereunder in the margin (l). There are alſo ſome Hiſpaniſms in the Letter or Writ of Don Alfonſo an ancient King of Caſtile, publiſhed by Monſieur Leibnitz in his Codex Diplomaticus (m). In the Tower of London there are two or three original Letters miſſive, written in Spaniſh by Princes of Spain, to K. Edward I of England after the Conqueſt. I wiſh I had ſome ancienter pieces of Spaniſh : but theſe are the oldeſt that I find at preſent. They are printed in Mr. Rymers Collections (n). However, I have (here in the margin) ſet-down the tenour of one of them more correctly (o). With Your Lordſhips leave, I will here ſubjoin a fragment of

of old Vaſconick French: Pieces written in That dialect being, for ought that I know, ſomewhat rare. I wiſh I could have found a more ancient ſpecimen of this kind. But ſuch as it is I have copied it pretty exactly. The original is written upon parchment in a good diſtinct hand: but is torn at the end of the lines, ſo that many words of it are loſt. It imports to be a Letter of Supplication written to Edward II King of England and Duke of Guienne, by the Mayor and Jurates of Bayone; praying him to take meaſures with the Poteſtad of Genoa, for reſtitution or amends to be made to certain Citizens of Bayone, for a Robbery or piracy and murder committed by ſome Genoeſe, upon the Ship St. Marie of Bayone (p). In reference to the Lingua Romanica, the caſe ſeemeth to have been much alike in the three Countries before mentioned. But this was peculiar in the caſe of Spain; namely, that their language, beſides the mixture of Gothick, hath had a great deal of the Mooriſh incorporated in it. And the Spaniards, probably from their great averſion to and hatred of the Moors, have been wont to call their native language Romance, in oppoſition chiefly to the Mooriſh. Inſomuch that with them Romance is uſed even at this day to ſignify the Caſtilian or genuine language of Spain. But concerning the Spaniſh I ſhall ſay no more here. In general; it may perhaps be worth the while for curious perſons to obſerve the nature and force of this Romance or Baſtard Roman whereof we are ſpeaking. In proceſs of time, it was (as hath been hinted above) ſettled in the three Countries beforenamed; that is to ſay, in three ſeveral forms; and was the language of thoſe Countries reſpectively. So it obtained the name of Romance or Romanick. The Inhabitants of theſe Countries, when they came to write in Latin, formed many Latin words out of their own Romanick language; or, if Your Lordſhip pleaſes, in the compoſitions or diſcourſes which they wrote in Latin, they frequently uſed Latin words in the diſtorted ſenſe which they bore in the Romanick. Theſe kind of words, or moſt of them, were originally Latin: Then were tranſmuted into Romanick, and thereby gained a new turn or notation: And laſtly were made Latin words (if I may be ſuffered to call them ſo) again, but with a new to wit the Romanick ſtamp. So that if we would underſtand the force and propriety of words of this ſort, we muſt not reduce them directly to the ancient Roman or Latin; but to the Romanick or Baſtard Roman, from which they received their laſt ſignature, and by means whereof they became impreſſed with That ſignification in which they are uſed by the Romanick writers. This matter may be illuſtrated by ſome examples. In Latin, in Romanick, proweſs (f). Charta in Latin, paper, and by metonymy a writing; in Romanick, a charter or diploma. Concerning this word charta, I will ſpeak more largely anon. To the liſt which I have here above ſet-down, may be referred a great number of other words, derived from Latin. but impreſſed with a new to wit the Romanick ſtamp. Of this ſort are, Advocatus — atio, Avoué, avocato, abogado; rendum, rent, rendita, renta; medietas, medium (g) meite moite, metà, mitad; diffidare — atus, deffire, diffidare, sfidare, deſafiar; data, done, data, dada (h); diviſa, diviſe, diviſa; curia, curtis, curte, cour, curia, corte; excidere, exci-exca-dentia, eſcheoir-eute eſcheite, exchaeta eſchaetta, caducità (i); dominium domanium demanium, domaine, dominio; Miles, militaris, militia [knighthood]; caballus, cheval, cavallo, chivaler, cavalliero, cavallero [Knight]; foras, for, fuor-i, fuera, foris meum ſtagile (k); forisfactum-ura, forfaict, intendere, entendre-dement, intendere-dimento, entendèr-dimiento; ſápere, ſaver ſcavoir (l), ſapére, ſauer, ſaputo, ſauido; ante, en avant, en avanti innanzi, inantea, da aqui adelante; cognitiones, cogniſances; ligeus -eantia -gantia; arreragium, vaſſallus; and many other, which may be recollected by perſons that are verſed in the language of the Middle and Lower ages. Again; under the name of Romance or Romanick taken in latitude, may (as hath been hinted above) be comprehended many other words, that are not (at leaſt not ſo nearly and evidently) of Latin original; in regard they became by Cuſtom ingrafted into the Romanick, and were alſo words of frequent or ordinary uſe. Of this ſort are, Spata, tallia, francus francheſia, bailium bailivus, catallum, bannum -itus, caſamentum marriage (m), felo -nia, ſiniſcalcus, Mariſcalcus, Baro a Noble Baron and Baronia, cuſtuma, plata, guardia, guerra, garcio, palefridus, warantum &c; and many of the terms uſed by the Feudiſts of the poſteriour ages, and by perſons that dealt in Heraldry, Chivalry, and Diplomaticks. Moreover, it is to be conſidered, that this lingua Romana taken (as I have ſaid) extenſively, was not ſettled at once, but in ſucceſſion of time; as in truth all language and cuſtom are wont to be. He that would enquire with exactneſs into the time and manner of its Settlement, muſt conſider the riſe and progreſs of it in each Countrey apart. He muſt take-in a great deal of Hiſtory, Chronology, and Language. He muſt write, not a preface only but, a Book. At preſent I do not attempt to ſpeak elaborately upon the ſubject. However, a word or two may be added concerning the Lingua Romana of France and England. I am not prepared to ſet-forth, in What manner or in What compaſs of time, That Dialect was introduced and ſettled in the Kingdom of France. And I look no further now than the reign of Charles the Great. Soon after his reign we find this Dialect There. Let us, if Your Lordſhip pleaſes, ſuppoſe it was working towards a Settlement in That Countrey for three or four hundred years after; viz. from the eighth to the eleventh or twelfth century; or perhaps for a longer or ſhorter ſpace of time. On the other part, this Dialect (if I obſerve right) came Late into our Iſland of Great Britain. It came, (as it ſeemeth) from France to England; but moſtly at ſecond hand: the Normans having received it from the French, and the Engliſh at firſt or for the greater part from the Normans. It is true, we find ſome few words of this dialect ſcattered here and there in the Writings of ſome Engliſhmen, earlyer than the time of ſettled communication between England and Normandy. Perhaps That might be, by

by reaſon that ſuch Engliſh Writers had been abroad in the Court or Kingdom of France or in Italy, or had been inſtructed by or correſponded with ſome perſons that were by birth or education French or Italick; or perhaps it might be from ſome other cauſe. But upon the moſt exact obſervation that I have made, it doth not appear to me, that this dialect was commonly or generally uſed in England before the Norman times. There are, I ſuppoſe, few or no footſteps of it in the Angloſaxon language. But from the tenth to the twelfth or thirteenth century, it was grown into familiar uſe amongſt the Inhabitants, eſpecially the more literate, of this Iſland. It may require many inſtances and much diſcourſe, to make This out to perſons who are haply unconverſant in diſquiſitions of this kind. Let each man ſatisfy himſelf therein by reading of ancient books and membranes. Now I will go on and finiſh what I intended to ſay here about the word charta. The charters (if one may ſo ſpeak) of the Roman Emperours, were commonly called Mandatum, reſcriptum, Imperiale, Divinum, Regium, Divale; literæ Imperiales, ſacra juſſio, diploma &c: The charters or inſtruments of private men, Libellus, literæ, epiſtola, ſyngrapha, chirographum &c: moſt uſually libellus; as libellus mutui, venditionis, ratihabitionis &c. Afterwards, in the days of the Longobardick, Francick, and Alemannick Kings, the word charta came into common uſe in Foreign Countries, and was in proceſs of time ſo generally received, that it ſeems to have ſupplied the place of libellus it ſelf (n). In England, about the 9th and 10th century, the word charta is found in ſome inſtruments or writings: For example; In That of K. Edgar dated A. D. 978 (o); in thoſe mentioned by Dr. Hickes (p); and in others. To recapitulate. I have before ſet-down charta as a Romanick word: and will now give the reaſon why I did ſo. The reaſon doth in ſome meaſure reſult from what I have juſt now ſaid. Although charta is a true Roman word: yet we do not, I think, find it currently uſed, even in Foreign Countries, for a diploma or inſtrument, till the Romanick ages. Then, as I ſuppoſe, it received the Romanick ſtamp; and hath ever ſince uninterruptedly been uſed in That ſenſe by Notaries, Diplomatiſts, and Formularians. In reference to England, there ſeems to be cauſe to date the entrance of the Romanick language from the time of K. Edward the Confeſſour. He had been Abroad in Normandy; and likewiſe in the Court of France (q). In His time That dialect entred lightly; from and after the Norman Conqueſt it came to be compleatly ſettled Here; that is, to be generally received and uſed by Engliſhmen, eſpecially in ſuch of their compoſitions as were written in Latin or French. It is true, inſtruments and writings were, as Dr. Hicks hath rightly obſerved, ſometimes called by the names of Charta, karta, and cartula, before the times of which I am here ſpeaking. Thoſe words are found in many Latin charters which were entred ſince the Conqueſt in Regiſters or Chartularies of Churches, I ſay, in charters that import to have been made or written between the year of Chriſt 950, and the year 1050. I do not ſay they were not uſed Before. But there are two or three things to be conſidered in this caſe. In the firſt place, a great many charters of the Angloſaxon ages deſerve to be weighed and examined before they are admitted for genuine. But let us ſuppoſe that thoſe Angloſaxon charters are genuine, wherein the words charta and cartula are found. In the next place, thoſe charters might be written in England by ſome Clerks or Scholars who came from Foreign parts. For though the Romanick dialect in general was not yet brought into England; yet by reaſon of a communication which probably there was, between the Engliſh Clerks or Notaries and the Foreign, eſpecially thoſe of the Roman Court, ſome Romanick words relating to the Diplomatick or Notarial art, in particular Thoſe about which we are enquiring, might eaſily be introduced into England in thoſe times. Laſtly, it is to be conſidered, that in Engliſh or Angloſaxon there were no words anſwering, by immediate or direct verſion, to charta or chartula. The caſe was otherwiſe with the French, Italians, and Spaniards. They, from ancient time, dealt in the Lingua Romana: and therefore had in their own language words, ſuppoſe charte or chartre and carta, derived from the Latin, charta. On the other part, in Angloſaxon, an inſtrument or writing was uſually called boc, lanꝺboc, ȝeƿꞃıꞇ-e, and cƿẏꝺe; names very different from Latin and Romanick. The words boc and lanꝺboc have been uſually rendred in Latin, Codex, codicillus de terra; ȝeƿꞃıꞇ ſcriptum; and cƿẏꝺe teſtamentum. In the Anglonorman times, charta as it ſeems ſucceeded in the room of boc and lanꝺboc; and Breve, ſcriptum or reſcriptum, in the room of ȝeƿꞃıꞇ. To conclude. I have here, by way of eſſay, placed the words charta and cartula amongſt others of the Romanick dialect: whether rightly, let the publick judg. What hath been ſaid may ſerve to ſhew, that the matter in difference between the Learned Dr. Hicks and me, was fit to be amicably compoſed. If what I have offered will not perfectly compoſe it, I ſhall reſt ſatisfied in this, that I have endeavoured to do it, in a manner ſuitable to the juſt eſteem I have for his perſon. It is alſo ſome contentment to me, that by diſcourſing about the Charta, I have gained an opportunity to treat of the Romanick dialect. Wherein I have been the more copious, partly becauſe That dialect hath not hitherto been ſufficiently illuſtrated (r), and partly becauſe what I have ſaid concerning it, may be, as I ſuppoſe, of conſiderable uſe (if rightly applied) to explain ſeveral Laws and cuſtoms that were, as it ſeemeth, introduced into divers Countries of Europe in the Romanick ages. Now I muſt beg leave to notify one thing, in relation to my conduct in this matter. I thought it would ill become me, even to ſeem to write againſt the Doctor, without firſt conferring with him upon this ſubject; ſeeing I have the honour to be acquainted with him. And therefore before I began to print theſe ſheets, I made known to him the ſubſtance of this Digreſſion. And he hath given me leave to declare, that he aſſenteth in the main, to what I have here ſpoken concerning the Romanick Dialect. He hath alſo aſſured me, that when he wrote the General Preface to his Book, he would have conferred with me about the charta, before he committed That Preface to the Preſs; But that the urgent inſtances of ſome perſons who ſubſcribed to his Book, and an uneaſy ſtate of health, forced him to omitt That and ſome other things. Of theſe matters, hitherto.

There is another thing which affects me with a greater concern than the ſubject of the Digreſſion abovewritten ever did. In my Diſſertation (p. 10.) placed before the Formulare it is ſaid, The Earl of Warwick gave ſeiſin of lands to the Priory of Lewes, per capillos capitis ſui &c. Inſtead of the Earl of Warwick There, it ſhould have been the Earl of Warrenne. That miſtake crept into the print by this means. In the Great Roll there cited, it is written abbreviated Comes de Warr. Now Warr. ſtanding either for Warrewico or Warrenna, the copyiſt hapned to write it Warrewico. Which was an eaſy and pardonable miſtake; for it is well known that Warr. ſtands a hundred to one oftner for Warrewicum than for Warrenna. When the Diſſertation was printing-off at London, I was Sick in the Countrey. So the miſtake was not perceived till the Formulare was publiſhed. But I fear my Digreſſions have exceeded the proper bounds. I now moſt humbly take my leave; having the honour to declare, that I am, with deep Reſpect, CHAP. I.

(r) Monſieur Du Freſne of immortal memory, in the preface before his Latin Gloſſary, viz. ſect. 28, & ſeq. and in That Gloſſary ad vocem, Romani, hath treated of the lingua Romanica, learnedly and elaborately; as he uſeth to do. Nevertheleſs, I made it my endeavour to hammer and form my notions upon That ſubject as it were ex propria minerva. And I conceive I have here ſet it upon the right baſis; in extending it, not to the Gallick Countrey only, but alſo to Italy and Spain.

I. IN this Volume I deſign to repreſent the Ancient State of the Exchequer of the Kings of England. And I propoſe to do it in this Method: Namely, to begin at ſome given Period, and deduce from thence an Hiſtorical Account of Things, according to the Order of Time. I am ſenſible, this Method will be accompanied with great Labour and Difficulty: However, That has not deterred me from making choice of it, becauſe it is likely to be moſt Satisfactory and Advantageous to the Reader. But in regard the Kings Exchequer had an immediate relation to the Kings Court, and was a Member of it (as will hereafter appear): Before I come to treat expreſly of the Exchequer, I muſt endeavour to repreſent the Ancient State of the Palace or Court of the Kings of England. Which I ſhall do with all convenient Brevity. And as in our Enquiry concerning the Exchequer, we mean to aſcend no higher than to the Norman Conqueſt: So, our Enquiry concerning the Kings Court ſhall commence at that Time.

II. By the Kings Court, we may here underſtand his Palace, or the Place of his Royal Reſidence, where he was atttended by his Nobles and Great Men. The King had many Palaces within the Kingdom, and uſed to hold his Court and celebrate the high Feſtivals of the Year at one or other of them, as he thought fit. So the Hiſtorians frequently take notice, that at ſuch a Feaſt he held his Court at ſuch or ſuch a Place. It is ſufficient for my preſent Purpoſe, to conſider the Kings Court in general, as holden in the Place of his uſual Reſidence. In which reſpect, his Court and Palace are ſaid in a Charter of K. Stephens (a), to have been at Weſtminſter. At his Court, and more eſpecially at ſome ſolemn Times in the Year, he held his Great Councils, and ordinarily tranſacted ſuch Affairs, as were of great Importance, or required Pomp and Solemnity, according to the Cuſtom of the Times. There he was attended by his Barons and Knights, who were to accompany him in his Wars and Expeditions. There Coronations, Marriages and Knighthoods of the Kings Children, and Solemnities of great Feſtivals were celebrated. There, was placed the Throne or Soveraign Ordinary Court of Judicature, wherein Juſtice was adminiſtred to the Subjects, either by the King or his High Juſticier. There, was the Confluence of the Nobility and Prelates, who uſed to be near his Royal Perſon. And There, the Affairs of the Royal Revenue were managed, by the King himſelf, or (moſt uſually) by his Juſticier, Barons, and Prelates, employed therein by his Command. This may ſerve for one View of the Kings Court. To vary the Proſpect, let us take a View of it another way. The Realm of England was anciently deemed one great Seigneury or Dominion (b); of which the King was Soveraign or Chief Lord; having will be exemplified hereafter in This Volume; and ſome in This and the Two next Chapters. In order to ſet before the Reader a more Particular and Diſtinct View of the Ancient Court of the Kings of England, it will be neceſſary to recollect ſome Ancient Memorials concerning it, during the Firſt Six Reigns next after the Conqueſt. I would rather have taken thoſe Memorials from Records: But ſeeing there are no Records for great part of thoſe Reigns now extant that will give ſufficient Light to the Subject, I ſhall be obliged in this Caſe to make uſe of Hiſtorical Books; and muſt be content with what is to be found There. Let us ſee then, what ſome of the Hiſtorians have delivered to us, concerning the Kings Court, the Manner of holding it, and the Affairs tranſacted there.

III. King William I. in the Sixth Year of his Reign, held his Court at Wincheſter in the Feaſt of Eaſter. There, the Great Cauſe between Lanfranc Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Thomas Archbiſhop of York, concerning the Primacy, was begun and ventilated. At the Whitſontide following, the King held his Court at Windſor. And there that Cauſe was determined, in the Preſence of the King, and of divers Biſhops and Others (h). In the 19th Year of his Reign, at Chriſtmaſs he held his Court at Glouceſter, at Eaſter at Wincheſter, at Whitſontide at London or Weſtminſter; And Knighted his Son Henry, And took Homage of all the Land-holders of England, to whoſe Fee ſoever they belonged, and afterwards Fealty; And then, having raiſed great Summs of Money upon ſuch of his Subjects as were really or colourably obnoxious, he went into Normandy (i). In or about the Year 1085, at Chriſtmaſs he held his Court [with his Nobles †] at Glouceſter; where he gave Biſhopricks to Three of his Chaplains, viz. To Maurice That of London, to William That of Thetford, to Robert That of Cheſter. In the next Year, he commanded the Prelates, Barons,

In the Year 1101, K. Henry I. held his Court at Chriſtmaſs at Weſtminſter, and at Eaſter at Wincheſter (s): And ſo he did alſo the next Year (t). At the Michaelmaſs following he held his Court at Weſtminſter. There, were preſent all the Chief Men of England, both of the Clergy and Laity (u): And Archbiſhop Anſelm held an Eccleſiaſtical Synod (w), wherein many Canons pertaining to Religion were made, and ſeveral Perſons were deprived of their Paſtoral Staves and Dignity (x). In the Year 1103, at Chriſtmaſs the King held his Court at Weſtminſter; And in Eaſter at Wincheſter; And raiſed upon the People manifold Gelds or Tributes (y). In the Year 1104, the King held his Court in Chriſtmaſs-time at Weſtminſter, in Eaſter at Wincheſter, and in Whitſontide at Weſtminſter (z). In the Year 1105, at Chriſtmaſs he held his Court at Windſor; and raiſed This Year many Tributes (a). In the Year 1106, at Chriſtmaſs he held his Court at Weſtminſter; And before the Lent following, at Northampton; And thither his Brother Robert came to him out of Normandy, to get Reſtitution of ſome Lands which the King had taken from him; but went away again without Succeſs. At Eaſter the King was at Bathe, and at Whitſontide at Salisbury; for that he was unwilling to hold his Court beyond-Sea (b). Either this Year or the next, about the beginning of Auguſt, there was a Great Aſſembly of the Biſhops, Abbots, and Barons in the Kings Palace [at Weſtminſter] (c). In the Year 1107, at Chriſtmaſs the King was in Normandy, at Eaſter he held his Court at Windſor, and in Whitſontide at Weſtminſter. Afterwards, about the beginning of Auguſt he held his Court at Weſtminſter; where he filled up a great many vacant Biſhopricks and Abbotricks both in England and Normandy; So many, that

Daughter Maud to Henry Duke of Saxony. And called a Great Council, about ſettling the Laws, and compoſing the Difference between Him and Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury (x). A while afterwards the King called together the Clergy and People of the Realm at Clarendon. There the King commanded all the Earls and Barons of the Realm, to go forth and recollect the Laws of K. Henry his Grandfather, and to reduce them into Writing: Which was done. Then the King commanded the Archbiſhops and Biſhops to ſet their Seals to the Writing. Some Difficulty being made about That; he cauſed thoſe Laws to be written in a Chirograph, and one Part thereof to be delivered to the Archbiſhop (y). Theſe things were done, as it ſeems, in the Kings Court; for it is ſaid, that the Archbiſhop withdrew from the Court (z) under the Kings Diſpleaſure. In the Year 1165 (11 Hen. II), the King called a Great Council at Northampton. The Archbiſhop ſent Word to the King that he would not come to Court, till the King had cauſed the Men and Horſes, which he had put into the Archbiſhops Hoſtels, to be removed. The next Day after the Council met, the Archbiſhop came to the Kings Court into his Chapel. The King challenged him to Anſwer before Him for a Wrong done to John His Mareſchal, who had complained that he could not have Juſtice done him in the Archbiſhops Court, touching certain Land which he had Claimed There to hold of him by Right of Inheritance; in which Cauſe the Plea had long depended There undetermined. The Archbiſhop alleged certain things in his own Defence, and inſiſted that the Proceedings in That Caſe in his Court before his Juſtices, were according to Law. But the Barons of the Kings Court adjudged the Archbiſhop to be in the Kings Mercy. Accordingly he was Amerced Five Hundred Pounds; And thereupon departed from the Court, and fell Sick (a). Soon afterwards he went to the Kings Court, bearing his Croſier in his Right Hand. The King ſent and ordered him to come and render ſtraitway an Accompt of all his Receipts of the Kings Rents received by him whilſt he was Chancellour; and particularly, of Thirty Thouſand Pounds of Silver. The Archbiſhop anſwered, That he had accompted for the ſame already, and was acquitted thereof at the Kings Exchequer; and therefore would not Plead or Anſwer for the ſame again. Whereupon, the King commanded his Barons to paſs Judgment upon him forthwith, for that being the Kings Liege-Man, he refuſed to ſtand to Right in his Court. Accordingly, they adjudged him to be impriſoned. Which Judgment was Declared to him by

Caſtile and Navarre, a Charter containing the Judgment given in His Court in the ſaid Cauſe (m). In the Year 1179 (25 Hen. II), at Eaſter the King kept his Court at Wincheſter: And afterwards, held a Great Council at Windſor; And appointed Juſtices Itinerant (n). In the Year 1184 (30 Hen. II), at the Kings Court at Worceſter, Gilbert de Plumtun Knight, was accuſed before the King of a Rape, by Ranulf de Glanvill Juſticier of England; the Juſticier would have condemned him (unjuſtly, as the Hiſtorian relates) and he was adjudged to be Hanged. But the King being moved with Pity, and knowing that the Juſticier had done this out of Envy, ſpared his Life (o). In the Year 1185, the King kept his Chriſtmaſs at Windſor. There came into England Heraclius Patriarch of Jeruſalem, and ſome of the Chief of the Hoſpitalers and Templars, with a Letter from Pope Lucius to the King, deſiring Aid for the Holy Land. On the Firſt Sunday in Lent, the King, the Patriarch, and the Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, and Barons of England, and William King of Scotland, and David his Brother, with the Earls and Barons of his Land, met at the Kings Court at London, to conſider of this Affair; And, after Deliberation had, came to a Reſolution therein (p). In the Year 1188 (34 Hen. II), the King called a Great Council of the Biſhops, Abbots, Earls and Barons, and many others as well of the Clergy as of the Laity, at Gaintington. There he cauſed to be recited certain Ordinances which he had lately before made in his Countries beyond-Sea, for a Diſme in Aid of the Holy Land. And thereupon, he ſent ſome Perſons both Clerks and Laymen, into all the Counties of England, to Collect the Diſme, according to the ſaid Ordinance. Out of each City of England he cauſed the moſt Wealthy Men to be choſen, viz. out of London Two Hundred, out of York One Hundred, and out of other Cities a proportionable Number according to the bigneſs of each, and to be Preſented before Him at Times and Places appointed for That Purpoſe. And took of them a Diſme of their Moveables according to an Eſtimate made by Truſty Men. And if any Perſons were refractory, he cauſed them to be impriſoned till they had paid the laſt Farthing. He dealt with the Jews of England in like manner. And afterwards ſent Hugh Biſhop of Durham, with other Clerks and Laymen, to William King of Scots, to Collect the Diſme in Scotland; but they met with ſome oppoſition There (q). Philipp King of France in like manner, cauſed

K. Richard I, after his Fathers Death, viz. on Sunday the Third of the Nones of September [A. D. 1189], held a Splendid Court at Weſtminſter; where were Aſſembled the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, Barons, and a great Number of Knights. At which Time and Place he was Crowned King of England. Roger de Hoveden rehearſes the Order of his Coronation (s). Whilſt the King ſat at Dinner, ſome Principal Men of the Jews came to bring him Preſents. But becauſe the Jews were commanded the Day before, not to come to the Kings Court on the Day of his Coronation, the Common People committed great Outrages upon their Perſons, and the Londoners ſlew many of the Jews within the City, and burnt the Houſes of many of them, and of divers other Perſons. Hereupon, the next Day, the King cauſed ſeveral of thoſe Malefactours to be arreſted, and adjudged them to be hanged (t). The Second Day after the Coronation, the King received Homage and Fealty of the Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, and Barons of England (u). Not long afterwards, the King came to the Abbey of Pipewell, where Baldwin Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Walter Archbiſhop of Roan, John Archbiſhop of Dublin, with many other Biſhops, and almoſt all the Abbots and Priours of England, being aſſembled at his Court, he gave the Biſhoprick of Wincheſter to Godfrey de Lucy, and ſeveral Biſhopricks and other Eccleſiaſtical Preferments to ſeveral other Perſons (w). Whilſt the King was Abroad in the Holy War, there aroſe fierce Conteſts between John Earl of Moreton the Kings Brother, and William de Longchamp Biſhop of Ely, who was then Chief Juſticier, Chancellour, and Papal Legate in England. By the Mediation of ſome Biſhops and Great Men, thoſe Conteſts were compoſed. In the Compoſition made between them, it is, amongſt other Articles, contained: That if the Chancellour ſhould do any Treſpaſs to the Earl, and ſhould not, upon Requeſt, forthwith make amends for the ſame according to the Award and Judgment of the Archbiſhop of Roan and other Peers, and of the Kings Court, Then certain Caſtles therein mentioned were to be reſtored to the Earl: That the Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, Barons, Vavaſſours, and Franktenants, ſhould not be Diſſeiſed of their Lands or Chatels, at the Pleaſure of the Juſticiers or other of the Kings Miniſters, but ſhould be dealt with by the Judgment of the Kings Court, according to the lawful Cuſtoms and Aſſizes of the Realm, or by the Kings expreſs Commandment; And that Earl John ſhould obſerve the ſame Rule in His Lands: That Gerard de Camville ſhould be replaced in his Sheriffwick of Lincolnſhire, and have a Day prefixt him to appear in the Kings Court to hear his Judgment; And if the Kings Court adjudged him to be deprived of his Sheriffwick or the Cuſtody of the Caſtle of Lincoln, then he ſhould be deprived thereof; Otherwiſe he ſhould Retain the ſame: And that Earl John ſhould neither ſupport the ſaid Gerard in Oppoſition to the Judgment of the Kings Court, nor ſhould, after Notice given him in that behalf, entertain or ſuffer to be entertained in his Lands, any Outlaws or Enemies of the King; But if any Perſon were accuſed of any Miſdemeaner againſt againſt the King, Earl John might lawfully entertain him in his Lands, in caſe ſuch Perſon was ready to ſtand to Right in the Kings Court (x). King Richard after his Ranſom and Return into England, at his Court at Notingham held a Council of his Biſhops and Nobility, wherein he diſſeiſed Gerard de Camville of the Caſtle and Sherivalty of Lincoln, and Hugh Bardolf of the Sherivalty of Yorkſhire and the Caſtle of York, and of the Cuſtody of Weſtmerland. On the Second Day of That Council, he demanded Judgment to be given upon Earl John his Brother, for acting contrary to his Duty and Fealty, and for adhering to the King of France, and upon Hugh de Nunant Biſhop of Coventry for the like. Hereupon it was Adjudged, that Earl John and the Biſhop of Coventry ſhould be peremptorily cited; And if within forty Days they did not come and ſtand to Right, Then, it was adjudged, that Earl John had demerited the Realm, and that the Biſhop of Coventry ſhould ſtand to the Judgment of the Biſhops, as he was a Biſhop, and to the Judgment of the Laity, as he had a Lay-Bailywick under the King. On the Third Day of the Council the King ordered, That Two Shillings ſhould be paid him out of every Carue of Land in England, That every one ſhould do to him the Third part of the Service of a Knight for each Knights Fee, upon his Voyage into Normandy, And that the Ciſtercian Monks ſhould yield up to him all their Wool of That Year; but becauſe This Latter ſeemed heavy and inſupportable, the Ciſtercians made a Pecuniary Fine with him for the ſame. On the Fourth and Laſt Day of the Council, divers Complaints were brought in againſt the Archbiſhop of York and Gerard de Camville. The Archbiſhop of York made no Anſwer to what was laid to his Charge: And Gerard denied all that was laid to His. So the Proſecutors found Pledges to Proſecute, and Gerard found Pledges to Defend himſelf [in Combat] by one of his Free Men. And then the King appointed a Day for his Second Coronation at Wincheſter, to wit, on the Cloſe of Eaſter (y).

In the Year 1201, K. John kept his Chriſtmaſs at Guildeford (z). In the Year 1204, he kept Chriſtmaſs at Canterbury. And on the Morrow of the Circumciſion he held a Colloquium at Oxford with the Great Men of England; at which time certain Aids were granted to him (a). In the Year 1208, the ſame King celebrated Chriſtmaſs at Wincheſter, the Great Men of the Realm being preſent; And at the Candlemaſs following he took a Tertiadecima of all Moveables, &c. as well of the Laity as the Clergy (b). In the Year 1211, he kept Chriſtmaſs at York, with the Earls and Barons of the Realm (c). In the Year 1214, at Chriſtmaſs he held his Court at Windſor with great Feſtivity (d). What hath been ſaid may ſerve for a Specimen of ſome things that occurr, relating to the Kings Court or Palace, and the Affairs uſually tranſacted There, during this Firſt Period. Theſe Inſtances do illuſtrate in ſome meaſure the Particulars above ſet-forth in the Second Section of this Chapter. And further Light will be given to this Argument in the Two next Chapters, which treat of the Great Officers, and of the Judicature, of the Kings Court.

IV. The Attendance of the Proceres at the Kings Palace or Court, and the Cuſtom of celebrating the High Feſtivals of the Year, and of holding Great Councils at the Kings Court at thoſe or ſuch like Solemnities, were uſed anciently not only in England, but alſo in ſome Foreign Countries. Theſe things are recounted by Foreign Hiſtorians in relation to the Princes of their Nation, in like manner as by the Engliſh Hiſtorians in reference to the ancient Kings of England. Some inſtances of this Matter may be given from the Memorials of the Empire, France, and Normandy. Hlotharius the Emperour, in the firſt Year of his Reign went into Italy, and held a Placitum or Convention [of his Nobles] (e). Louis the Emperour held a Convention of his Nobles in his Royal Palace at Pavia (f). Charles the Emperour celebrated his Chriſtmaſs in Almaigne, and his Eaſter at Ratisbon; and at the latter held a Great Convention

In France, the Barons and Great Men gave in like manner their Attendance at the Kings Court. Such were the Dapifer, Butler, Chamberlain, Conſtable, Chancellour, and others. When the King did any publick or ſolemn Act, they were commonly preſent and gave their Atteſtation. Louis King of France made a Charter of Donation to the Monks of the Holy Trinity of Canterbury. It is dated at Canterbury A. D. 1179. (the King of France being come thither out of Devotion to St. Thomas); and is atteſted by Earl Theobald the Dapifer, Guy the Butler, Reginald the Chamberlain, Ralf the Conſtable (c). And theſe Great Officers did ſo uſually or conſtantly attend at the Kings Court, that when the Office of any of them was void, notice is often taken of it in publick Acts or Atteſtations, to ſhew the reaſon of their not-atteſting. For Example. Louis King of France made a Donation to the Monks of Canterbury. It is dated at St. Germain en Laye A. D. 1235. It is atteſted by Robert the Butler, Amalrick the Conſtable, Dapifero nullo, Camerario nullo, and vacante Cancellaria (d). Philipp King of France made a Charter to the Church of Autun. It is atteſted by the Officers of the Palace; datum vacante Cancellaria (e). Philipp King of Ftance made a Charter to Bartholomew de Roya Chief Chamberlain of France. It is dated in the vacancy of ſome Officers of the Palace (f). Again; there ſeems to have been no leſs reſemblance between the Court of the Dukes of Normandy, and That of the Ancient Kings of England; particularly in the manner of holding the Norman Court, in the Attendance of the Norman Barons, and the celebrating the Great Feſtivals There. William Duke of Normandy made a Charter to the New Monaſtery at Ouſche; and then delivered it to his Norman Biſhops and Barons [of his Court] to Sign or Atteſt it (g). And again (h). The ſame Duke of Normandy in the Year 1080, at Whitſontide kept his Court at Dieppe †; Where he held a great Council with the Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, and other Noblemen of Normandy (i). Henry I. CHAP. II.

Of the GREAT OFFICERS of the KINGS COURT.

I. Introduction.
II. Of the Chief Juſticier: in the Reigns of K. William I, K. William II, K. Henry I, K. Stephen, K. Henry II, K. Richard I, and K. John.
III. Of the like Great Officer in Normandy, Naples, and Aragon.
IV. Of the Conſtable.
V. Of the Mareſchall.
VI. Of the Seneſchall, Dapifer, and Majordomus
VII. Of the like Great Officer in ſome Foreign Countries.
VIII. Of the Chamberlain.
IX. Of the Chancellour and Vice-chancellour.
X. Of the Treaſurer.

I. SOME ſay, it was the manner of the Normans to affect Splendour. And the Obſervation ſeemeth juſt. The Kings of England of That Race were exceeding Pompous both in Court and Camp. In their Court they ſhewed their Magnificence ſeveral ways: In the Statelineſs of their Palaces, the Richneſs of their Furniture, the Splendour and Number of their Retinue, the Plenty of their Proviſions, and the like; Of which, it is not my buſineſs here to treat. They ſhewed it likewiſe in other Inſtances: Their Court was the Center of Reſort for all the Barons and Great Men of the Realm; who being Peers of the Kings Court gave, as occaſion required, their Attendance There; And more particularly, as ſome of them were ordinarily inveſted with the Great Offices of the Kings Court: I ſay, the Splendour of the Kings Court appeared very much in the Confluence of the Nobility and Chief Men of the Realm, And in the Greatneſs of his Officers or Miniſters. Of ſome of theſe Great Officers we are now to give an account in brief. And as I am here led to ſpeak of theſe Officers of State, becauſe of the relation ſeveral of them had to the Exchequer: So, I muſt treat chiefly of ſuch of them as were concerned There. Of this ſort were the Chief Juſticier, the Conſtable, the Seneſchall, the Mareſchall, the Chamberlain, the Chancellour, and the Treaſurer; with ſome others of leſſer note. It is not eaſy at this Day to aſcertain, What was the particular Function or Duty of each of theſe Great Officers. However ſomething muſt be ſaid upon the Subject. And for want of more Ancient Memoires, I ſhall be forced to trench ſo far upon my general Method, as to ſet-down ſome things here which properly fall within the Second Period.

II. The Firſt and Greateſt Officer of the Kings Court was the High Juſticier. Next to the King Himſelf, he was Chief in Power and Authority. And when the King was beyond-Sea (which frequently hapned) he governed the Realm like a Viceroy (a). Next to the King, he preſided in the Curia Regis as Chief Judg both in Criminal and Civil Cauſes; he preſided likewiſe in the Kings Exchequer; having the Superiour Care and Guidance of the Regal Revenue. In the moſt ancient times, if I have obſerved right, he was wont to be ſtyled Juſticia Regis, Juſticiarius Regis, and abſolutely Juſticia or Juſticiarius. Afterwards, he was ſometimes ſtyled Juſticiarius Regis Angliæ, the Kings

Juſticier of England; probably, to diſtinguiſh him from the Kings Juſticier of Ireland, Normandy, &c. For which cauſe alſo, it is likely other Officers of State were called Conſtabularius Angliæ, Cancellarius Angliæ, Theſaurarius Angliæ, &c. Let us conſider this Great Officer the Juſticier in ſome inſtances by which it may be ſeen (in ſome meaſure) of what nature his Office was, and what Powers he exerciſed. In or about the Year 1067, K. William I, upon his going into Normandy, appointed Odo Biſhop of Baieux and William Fitz-Osbern to be his Cuſtodes Angliæ (b). As for Odo, it is ſaid of him, that when the King chanced to be in Normandy, he was the Chief Man in England (c); That is to ſay, he was Then the Kings Juſticier. In the ſame Kings Reign, there was a Great Conteſt between Gundulf Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Pichot Sheriff of Cambridgeſhire, about the Land of Fracenham: The Biſhop claiming it as belonging to his Church, And the Sheriff alledging it was the Kings. The Parties came before the King; who ordered the Matter to be Tryed by the Countrey. At This Tryal the Biſhop of Baieux Preſided (d). In the ſame Kings Reign, Lanfrank Archbiſhop of Canterbury, finding the Church of Canterbury had been diſſeiſed of divers Lands and Rights, by Odo Biſhop of Baieux Earl of Kent, and by the Kings Officers after the Conqueſt, made his Complaint thereof to the King. The King ordered a Tryal to be had in the caſe. At the Tryal (which was at Pinnendene) Goisfrid Biſhop of Conſtance Preſided. And there were preſent There (beſides the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and the Biſhop of Baieux) Ernoſt Biſhop of Rocheſter, Ægelric Biſhop of Chicheſter (a Man very skilful in the Laws of the Realm) Richard de Tunebrigge, Hugh de Montfort, William Dearces, Hamo the Viſcount or Sheriff, and many other Barons of the King and of the Archbiſhop, with all the County of Kent, and many other Perſons of Great Authority, both French and Engliſh men, of other Counties. At This Tryal (which laſted Three Days) Archbiſhop Lanfrank recovered to his See divers Lands and other Rights (e). Orderic Vitalis relates, that in this Kings Reign William de Warenne and Richard de Benefacta were Chief Juſticiers of England (f); And juſt after he calls them Vicarios Regis (g).

In the Reign of K. William II, Ranulf Paſſeflambard, Firſt the Kings Chaplain and afterwards Biſhop of Durham, was for many Years together Juſticier or Chief Ruler, under the King, of all England (h). He is ſtyled by Henry of Huntendon

In the Reign of K. Stephen, Richard de Luci was Chief Juſticier, as it ſeems by the Writ hereunder cited, made in favour of the Dean of St. Martin London (r). In the Year 1153, K. Stephen made Henry, Duke of Normandy and Son of Maud the Empreſs, Chief Juſticier of England; And by Him all the Buſineſſes of the Realm were determined (s).

About the Year 1162 (as M. Paris (t) relates) Robert de Beaumont Earl of Leiceſter was Juſticier of England. There is ſtill extant a Writ running in his Name, commanding Reginald de Warenne to do Right [in his Court] to Robert de Mandevill for the Land of Diganeſwell, or elſe that Robert de Valoignes ſhould do him Right, or on his default, the Juſticier himſelf would do Right in the caſe. Seal (w). In the ſame Kings Reign Richard de Luci was Chief Juſticier; as appears by ſeveral Records cited in this Volume. In the Year 1180 (26 Hen. II), Ranulf de Glanvill, who was before, one of the Juſticiers of the Kings Court, was made Chief Juſticier (x). By his wiſe Counſel ſeveral Ancient Laws for the good Government of the Realm were eſtabliſhed and confirmed.

K. Richard I, at the beginning of his Reign, conſtituted Hugh Biſhop of Durham and William Earl of Albemarle Chief Juſticiers of England, and joined to them in the Government of the Realm, William Mareſchall, Geoffrey Fitz-Peter, William Bruere, Robert de Wihtefeld, and Roger Fitz-Remfrey (y). Afterwards, when the King went beyond-Sea, he appointed Hugh Biſhop of Durham and William Biſhop of Ely Chief Juſticiers of England; To whom he aſſociated Hugh Bardolf, William Mareſchall, Geoffrey Fitz-Peter, and William Bruere (z). But William Biſhop of Ely, being at This time Papal Legate and Chancellour as well as Chief Juſticier, executed the whole Power (in effect) of the Chief Juſticier, and governed the Realm as if he had been Sole without any Conjuſticiers (a). Afterwards, upon Complaints that were made to the King (being Then beyond-Sea in the Holy War) againſt the Biſhop of Ely, the King appointed Walter Archbiſhop of Roan to be a Conjuſticier with the Biſhop of Ely and the other Four laſt above named. But the Biſhop of Ely continued ſtill to act as if he had been Sole Juſticier (b). He was at laſt depoſed from his Office by Earl John the Kings Brother, and moſt of the Biſhops and Barons of England, with the Concurrence of the Londoners (c). And in his room they made the Archbiſhop of Roan Chief Juſticier (d). After the Kings return into England from his Captivity, Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury was Chief Juſticier. At That time, the Canons of York complained before Him, of certain Wrongs which the Archbiſhop of York had done them. The Juſticier (ſaith the Hiſtorian) by vertue of the Kings Authority wherewith he was inveſted, ſent to York Earl Roger Bigot, William de Warenn, William de Stutevill, Hugh Bardolf, William Bruwere, Geoffrey Haget, and William Fitz-Richard Clerk, to hear and determine the Controverſy between the Archbiſhop of York and his Canons. Theſe Commiſſioners went down and heard the Cauſe, And commanded the Archbiſhops Men who were accuſed of Robbery, to be Taken and Impriſoned. They ſummoned the Archbiſhop to Appear and ſtand to their Judgment; And upon his refuſal ſo to do, they diſſeiſed him of all his Manours except Ripon. They cauſed the Cannons to be re-placed in their Stalls, out of which they had been ejected by their Archbiſhop. They appointed William de Stutevill and Geoffrey Haget to be Cuſtodes of Yorkſhire over the Archbiſhop of York (who was Then Sheriff or Cuſtos of That County) and over his Underſheriff Roger de Batvent; And then they returned (e). In the ſame Kings Reign, whilſt whilſt the King was in Captivity, Hubert A. B. of Canterbury Chief Juſticier held a Common Council of the Biſhops, Earls and Barons, upon the occaſion of the Diſturbances raiſed by Earl John the Kings Brother: In which Council it was ordained, that Earl John ſhould be diſſeiſed of all his Lands in England, and that his Caſtles ſhould be beſeiged (f). Soon after the Archbiſhop (being Then Juſticier of England and Papal Legate) went to York; There he cauſed Aſſizes of all Pleas of the Kings Crown, and of Novell Diſſeiſine and Mortdanceſtour, to be holden by his Miniſters or Subſtitutes, And he himſelf and his Officials held Eccleſiaſtical Pleas (g). Afterwards the Pope admoniſhed K. Richard I, not to ſuffer the Archbiſhop to execute the Secular Adminiſtration of a Juſticier any longer, and not to admit any other Biſhop or Prieſt to the like Secular Employments. Whereupon the Archbiſhop was depoſed from his Office of Chief Juſticier, and Geoffrey Fitz-Peter ſucceeded him therein (h). In the Reign of K. John, Geoffrey Fitz-Peter was Chief Juſticier for ſeveral Years together; as appears by many Records quoted in this Hiſtory. But in what manner He or the Chief Juſticiers before him were appointed to their Office, I cannot diſcover. K. John by a Writ Patent dated in the 15th Year of his Reign conſtituted Peter Biſhop of Wincheſter his Juſticier of England, to keep the Realm in his ſtead and to maintain the Publick Peace (i): And commanded the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, Barons, and all his Liegemen, to be aiding and intendant to the ſaid Juſticier, in the Defence of the Realm and Conſervation of the Peace thereof (k). In the Reign of K. Henry III, Hubert de Burgh Earl of Kent was Chieſ Juſticier; as appears by the Record herehereunder cited (l), and by many others. The ſaid Hubert had an Aſſignment of ccc l to be received by him yearly at the Exchequer, for his Support in the Office of Chief Juſticier. Part of it, viz. cc l. was paid or allowed to him out of the Ferm of Norfolk and Suffolk; Of which Counties he was Then Sheriff (m).

III. The Office of Chief Juſticier was alſo an Ancient Office in Normandy (n): And likewiſe in the Kingdom of Naples; Where he was ſtyled Magiſter Juſtitiarius (o). In one of the Neapolitan Conſtitutions, part of the Oath appointed to be taken by this Maſter Juſticier (and others), is ſet forth hereunder (p). He was deemed the moſt preeminent Officer in Sicily (q). He was alſo called the Grand Juſticier; and had in That Kingdom the ſupreme Adminiſtration of Juſtice both in Civil and Criminal Cauſes (r). There, in ancient time, they called thoſe Perſons Juſticiers of the Provinces, who were afterwards called Governours of the Provinces, and in modern times Viceroys. And theſe Juſticiers (in reſemblance to the Powers of the Grand Juſticier There) had the care, of the Publique Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and alſo of the Royal Revenue (s). Theſe Powers may be compared to thoſe with which the Chief Juſticier in England was anciently veſted: Who in like manner preſided both in the Court of Law and That of Revenue. But beſides Normandy and Sicily, there was another Countrey, the Kingdom of Aragon, wherein there was a Superiour Officer, ſtyled the Juſticia of Aragon. The Inſtitution of this Office of Juſticia There, if we may believe Surita the Annaliſt, was very Ancient. He ſays it was introduced about the Year 835; and that ſome Perſons believed it to be more ancient than even the Kingſhip of Aragon (t). But however that matter was in truth, this Juſticia had in proceſs of time ſo great a Juriſdiction and Authority, that Surita compares him to the Roman Tribunes and Lacedemonian Ephori (u). Afterwards, at the inſtance of the Grandees of that Kingdom, it was ordained, that he ſhould be nominated by the King, and not by Vote or popular Ambition (w); And that if any difference aroſe between the King and the Great Men, the Juſticia ſhould determine the ſame with the Advice of the King and of the Great Men and Cavalleros who were then preſent in his Court, and were not Parties concerned (x).

IV. Another Great Officer in the Kings Court was the Conſtable. He was uſually ſtyled Conſtabularius Regis; and ſometimes Conſtabularius Angliæ, in diſtinction from the Conſtable of Normandy; And was a High Officer both in War and Peace. At preſent we conſider him only under his Character in time of Peace, viz. as a Miniſter of the Kings Court. Anciently this Office was Hereditary.

As to the Word Conſtabularius, it ſignified a Captain or Commander. In That Senſe it was uſed in England in the Reigns of KK Richard I, and John. Thus, the Lands of Otuel de Sudley were taken into the Kings Hands, Becauſe Otuels Knight was not found in Conſtabularia ſua in the Marches of Wales (y): The Lands of Euſtace de Baillol were ſeized into the Kings Hands, becauſe he was not found at his Poſt (in Conſtabularia ſua) (z): And the Lands of Robert de Pinkenni and William Painel were ſeized for the ſame Cauſe (a). The commanding Officers in the Kings Navy are called Conſtabularij (b). And Officers in the Army at Land are called by the ſame Name. In the Third Year of K. John, Proviſion was made for the Seventy ſeven Welſhmen Foot-Soldiers and their ſeven Conſtables [or Officers], and four Mounted Archers that were ſent into Norway (c). The Word Coneſtabile was alſo uſed for a Captain or Leader, in the Kingdom of Sicily (d), and in Tuſcany (e); if we may believe Ammirato.

CHAP. II.

In the Reign of K. William I, William Fitz-Osbern was the Kings Conſtable (f). Or perhaps, he might be the Kings Mareſchall. For the Epithet of Magiſter Militum will fit either of thoſe two Officers. I chuſe here to take Magiſter Militum for the Conſtable: Becauſe That Style is expreſly given to the Montforts who were, as I remember, Hereditary Conſtables (g). But whether William Fitz-Osbern was Conſtable of England or of Normandy, I do not recollect. In the Reign of K. Henry I, Robert de Ver ſubſcribes as Conſtable to a Charter of That Kings (h). Mr. Camden relates, that Maud the Empreſs made Miles (Son of Walter Conſtable of Glouceſter) Conſtable of England (i): Which Office, he ſays, came afterwards by a Marriage to the Deſcendants of Humfrey de Bohun (k). The ſaid Miles was Conſtable in the Reign of K. Stephen; as ſaith the Continuator of Florence of Worceſter (l). K. Stephen, in the firſt Year of his Reign, made a Charter to Robert Biſhop of Bathe. That Charter is atteſted by Rodbert de Ver the Conſtable, and by Miles de Glouceſter Conſtable (m). Henry de Eſſex was Conſtable in the 2d Year of K. Henry II (n), and afterwards. In a Charter of K. Henry II, to the Church of Wincheſter, there are Witneſſes, Henricus de Eſſexa Conſtabularius, Richardus de Humez Conſtabularius (o). [The Humets were Conſtables of Normandy] (p). And in a Charter of the ſame K. Hen. II, made to the Monks of Chriſtchurch Canterbury, Henry de Eſſex is ſtyled Conſtable (q). Humfrey de Bohun was Conſtable in the 23d Year of K. Henry II, (r); and, I think, others of the Family of Bohun were Conſtables afterwards. But 'tis not my purpoſe to be curious about the Succeſſion or Deſcent of this Office. I would much rather (if I could) diſcover the Powers which belonged to it in the Ancient times But That is a Subject too obſcure for me to illuſtrate, who have met with ſo few Memoires concerning it. However, one or two Records may be here ſubjoined. In the ſecond Year of K. Henry II, Henry de Eſſex the Conſtable held Pleas, either in the Kings Court or in an Iter (s). But probably, he held thoſe Pleas, not as Conſtable, but as one of the Kings Juſticiers. In the 5th Year of K. John, mention is made of nineteen Knights Fees of the Earl of Perch lying in Kent, which belonged to the Conſtableſhip of England, as the Sheriff of Kent alleged at the Exchequer (t). In the 27th Year of K. Edward I, the Barons of the Exchequer were commanded to certify to the King, what Fees and Allowances Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Herefod Conſtable of England, and Roger le Bigod Earl of Norfolk Mareſchall of England, were reſpectively entituled to receive of the King, upon account of their ſaid Offices, and in what manner. Whereupon the Barons certify to the King, That having ſearched the Rolls and Books of the Exchequer, they found amongſt the

The Office of the Kings Conſtable was executed partly abroad in the Kings Army in time of War, and partly in the Kings Court in time of Peace. He was alſo wont to appoint a Subſtitute to act for him at the Kings Exchequer; as may appear in the xxivth Chapter of this Hiſtory. I cannot at preſent find any thing memorable concerning the Duty and Powers of the Conſtable, during the Firſt or Second Period; and therefore muſt treſpaſs ſo far upon my propoſed Method, as to cite a Memorial of the Reign of K. Richard II. There was a Statute made in the 13th Year of That King, to declare the Power and Juriſdiction of the Conſtable of England: viz. " That he ought to have cogniſance of Contracts touching Feats of Arms and of War out of the Realm, " and alſo of ſuch things relating to Arms or War within the Realm as could " not be determined or diſcuſſed by the Common Law; with other Uſages " and Cuſtoms appertaining to the ſame matters, which other Conſtables " before That time had duly and reaſonably uſed (w).

V. The Mareſchall was another Great Officer of the Kings Court. This Office was anciently, and is at this Day, Hereditary. It is now veſted in the moſt moſt Noble the Duke of Norfolk. Mareſchall, was a general Name for ſeveral Officers that were employed about Horſes, Game, &c. For example. Ten Marks were allowed to Hugh the Mareſchall and his Fellows who looked after twenty of the Kings Palfreys (x). The Summ of Cxxxij l. was allowed at the Exchequer to John Palmer, for himſelf and xxj Grooms, and for Hay, Oats, and Farriery [mareſcalcia] for fifty Horſes of the Kings Stable (y). Frere Alan a Templar was ordered to buy two good Palfreys for the King, and to manage [mareſcallare] another Palfrey which the King then ſent to him (z). There was alſo a Mareſcalcia avium Regis (a); and in Ireland a Mareſcalcia menſuræ Regis (b).

It is to be underſtood, that there were formerly more Mareſchalls than one belonging to the Kings Court. In the 11th Year of K. Henry II, a Charter made between Robert Abbot of St. Alban and others of the one part, And Laurence Abbot of Weſtminſter of the other part, was executed at the Exchequer, before ſeveral of the Juſtices, and before the Kings Chamberlains and his Mareſchalls (c). In the 14th Year of the ſame King, William Fitz-Aldelin is ſtyled Mareſchall (d). Which William certified to That King, That of the Land which the King gave to William Fitz-Aldelin his Mareſchall with Juliana Daughter of Robert Dorſnell, Baldwin Wiſchard held one Knights Fee of the Old Feoffment in Eſſex, John Gernun the fourth part of a Knights Fee, and He himſelf [William Fitz-Aldelin] held the reſt in demeane by his Service or Serjeanty of the Kings Marſhalcey (e). At the ſame time [Ralf Son of] Wigan the Marſhall certified the King, That K. Henry I. enfeoffed Wigan his Marſhall of certain Fees, to hold by the Service of his Marſhalcey; That K. Henry II. gave ſeiſin thereof to Ralf his Son, as to His [the Kings] Marſhall; And that he the ſaid Ralf now holds them of the King, by the Service of the Mareſchalcey cey (f). And in the Catalogue of Serjeanties entred in the Red-Book, it is ſaid that Robert de Venuz held by the Service of the Marſhalſey, and William de Warblington by the Service of Marſhalſey in the Kings Houſe (g).

In the 30th Year of K. Henry II, Richard de Limeſie was a Marſhall. But perhaps he might be Marſhall of Ireland (h). Walter Fitz-Robert by his Charter gave to the Church of St. Mary at Dunmowe in Frankalmoigne, all the Oblations of his Chapell There: One of the Witneſſes to That Charter is Robert Porter the Kings Mareſchall (i); if Sir William Dugdales Copy of this Charter may be relied on. But there was a Mareſchall who was Superiour to the reſt. And that was he, who held the Magiſtra Mareſcalcia or Magiſtratus Mareſcalciæ of the Kings Court, and was ſtyled Magiſter Mareſcallus (k). Sir Henry Spelman writes as if he thought this Office was introduced at the time of the Conqueſt (l). And he names William Fitz-Osbern and the Grentemaiſnels as perſons who firſt bore it in England. Concerning That matter the Antiquaries may judg as they ſhall ſee cauſe. Afterwards, it ſeems, this Office was holden by the Family of the Mareſcalli. In the Reign of K. Stephen, John Mareſchall Fined to the King in xxij l. & xiij s. & iiij d. for the Miniſtry or Office of his Father: And in xl Marks of Silver, for the Magiſtery [of the Marſhal] in the Kings Court (m). And the Mareſcalli continued to hold it in the Reigns of KKK Henry II, Richard I, and John; and in the forepart of K. Henry the Thirds Reign. Afterwards, the Male Line of the Mareſcalli ending, it veſted in the Bigots. There ſeems to have been ſome Conteſt about this Office between the Families of Venuis and Mareſcalli. It is certain that in the Fourth Year of K. Richard I, William de Venuis Fined to the King in C l. That he might have (amongſt other things) the Office of the Mareſcalcia (n). In the 8th Year of That King, William made part-payment of the Fine (o). But K. John by his Charter dated in the Firſt Year of his Reign, granted and confirmed to William Mareſchall Earl of Pembroc and his Heirs, the Magiſtratus Mareſcalciæ of his Court; Which Magiſtratus or Office, Gilbert the Mareſchall of K. Henry I, and John Son of the ſaid Gilbert did recover before K. Henry I. in His Court, againſt Robert de Venoiz and William de Haſting who claimed the ſame, by Judgment given againſt them by Default.

renne is ſtyled Mareſchalleſs of England (y). He was alſo ſtyled Comes Mareſcallus. In the 14th Year of K. Henry III, the Barony of Guiſchard Laidet was in the Cuſtody of William Earl Mareſchall, by the Kings bailment (z): In the 41ſt Year of the ſame King, proceſs iſſued, to ſummon Reginald de Mohun and Iſabell his Wife one of the Co-heirs of William late Earl Mareſchall, to anſwer to the King for the Debt hereunder mentioned (a). 'Tis true, a diſtinction hath been made in this Caſe: That is to ſay, it is ſuppoſed, The Mareſchall hath in him both an Office and an Honour: An Office, in reſpect whereof he is Mareſchall of England, Mareſcallus Angliæ; and an Honour, in reſpect whereof he is Earl Mareſchall, Comes Mareſcallus. Concerning This diſtinction the Antiquaries may enquire, if they pleaſe. I am here to ſpeak only of the Office of Mareſchall.

It is to be remembred, that the Office of the Kings Marſhall or Marſhall of England, was wont to be executed partly in the Kings Army in time of War, and partly in his Court in time of Peace. Here, we conſider him only as an Officer of the Kings Court. As ſuch, it ſeems to have been his Duty, to provide for the Security of the Kings Perſon in his Palace, to diſtribute the Lodgings There, to preſerve Peace and Order in the Kings Houſhold, and to aſſiſt in determining Controverſies ariſing There (*). He performed certain Acts by himſelf or his Subſtitutes at the Kings Coronation, at the Marriages and Interrments of the Royal Family, at the creating of Barons and Knights, and at other Great and Ceremonious Aſſemblies in the Kings Court. After the Diviſion of the Kings Courts, he uſed to appoint a Deputy or Clerk to act for him in the Court holden before the King, and another in the Exchequer: The former was called Mareſcallus Mareſcalciæ Curiæ Regis, and the latter Mareſcallus or Clericus Mareſcalciæ de Scaccario. Of the latter we treat elſewhere (b).

VI. The Seneſchall was another Great Officer in the Kings Court. From the time of the Conqueſt this Office hath been Hereditary in England. It was Hereditary in France; and likewiſe in Normandy, before the Union of That Seigneurie to the Crown of France. Whether there was anciently a notable Difference, or any, between the Seneſcallus and the Dapifer in England, let others judg. In the Reign of K. William I, mention is made of Two Dapifers, viz.

viz. Haimo (c) and Eudo (d). But it is generally thought, that Haimo was Dapifer of England, and Eudo of Normandy. Tis ſaid that quickly after the Conqueſt, Grenteſmeiſnill was Steward of England; and afterwards the Earl of Leiceſter (e). And Sir Edward Coke relates, that in the time of the Conquerour, William Fitz-Euſtace was Steward of England (f). At the beginning of That Kings Reign William Fitz-Osbern was Dapifer of Normandy (g). In the Reign of K. William II, Eudo was the Kings Dapifer (h): He is alſo ſtiled Seneſcal del Hoſtel le Rey (i). In a Charter of K. Henry I, referred to by Sir H. Spelman (k), both Haimo and Eudo ſubſcribe as Dapifers; And he there ſuppoſes (rightly, I believe) that Haimo was Dapifer of England, and Eudo of Normandy. In the Reign of K. Henry I, Eudo is ſtiled Dapifer (l): And likewiſe William Bigot is ſtiled Dapifer Regis Anglorum (m): And Hugh Bigot, Seneſcal le Rey Henri (n). Maud the Empreſs by her Charter granted to Geoffrey Earl of Eſſex (amongſt other things) all the Land of Eudo the Dapifer in Normandy, and his Office of Dapifer, To hold by Hereditary Right (o): But that the Earl of Fſſex afterwards enjoyed the Office of Dapifer by vertue of That Charter, I cannot ſay. In the Reign of K. Stephen, William Martell is ſtiled the Kings Dapifer (p): William had been Pincerna (or Butler) to K. Henry I. And about the 18th Year of K. Henry II, Geoffrey Martell had the Office or Serjeanty of the Pincernaria or Butlerſhip (q).

(q) Un-of Silver, That he might be the Kings Dapifer (r). In the Reign of K. Hen. II, we meet with ſeveral Dapifers belonging [perhaps, at ſeveral times] to the Kings Court. There was Manſer Biſet (s); William Malet (t); Oger (u); William Fitz-Aldelm or Aldelin (w); Gilbert Malet and William de Curcy (x); Hugh de Morewic and Hugh Bardolf (y); and perhaps, others. Whether theſe were reſpectively Dapifers of England or of Normandy, it doth not clearly appear. In the Year 1184, 30 H. II (z), and in the Reign of K. Richard I. (a), William Fitz-Ralf was Seneſchall of Normandy; And Anno 20 H. II, Alured de St. Martin was Dapifer [of Normandy] (b). In the Firſt Year of K. Richard I, Stephen de Longchamp is ſtiled the Kings Dapifer (c). Afterwards, in the Reigns ſubſequent to K. Richard I, we do not find Dapifers ſo frequently mentioned in England as before, for ought that I have obſerved. As the word Seneſcallus has been uſually renderd in Engliſh, Steward: So alſo, anciently, the word Steward was ſometimes renderd either by Seneſcallus or Dapifer. Thus, one William, who in the Reign of K. William II. was Steward to William de Ou [hiꞅ ꞅꞇiƿaꞃð Ƿillelm haꞇꞇe, as the Saxon Chronicon ſpeaks] (d), is ſtyled his Dapifer by Roger de Hoveden, in relating the ſame Story (e): And Eudo, who was Dapifer to K. William II, is called Major Domus Regiæ, and Seneſcallus (f). And in the 30th Year of K. Henry II, Hugh Bardul is ſtyled Seneſcallus Regis (g), who in the ſame Year of That King is ſtyled Dapifer (h). But I paſs by that matter.

It was ſaid above, that the Office of Seneſchall or Steward in England was anciently Hereditary. It ſeems, the Earls of Leiceſter were Seneſcalli Regis de feodo or Hereditary Stewards. In the Reign of K. John, That Office was veſted in Simon de Montfort Earl of Leiceſter, [and before him, in Robert Earl of Leiceſter]. For when a Partition was made before the King and his Barons, between Simon de Montfort Earl of Leiceſter, and Saiher de Quenci Earl of Wincheſter, of all the Lands and Honours which then lately belonged to Robert Earl of Leiceſter, Simon and Saiher had each of them a Moiety of the ſaid Lands; But the Third Penny of the County of Leiceſter and the Stewardſhip to the King were reſerved to Simon Earl of Leiceſter (i). In the 49th Year of K. Henry III, the Sciatis nos conceſſiſſe & præſenti carta confirmaſſe pactionem factam coram nobis & Baronibus noſtris, per Simonem de Monteforti Comitem Leyceſtriæ the County and Honour of Leiceſter, the Stewardſhip of England, and other Lands, late of Simon de Montfort Earl of Leiceſter, being forfeited to the King by the Felony [or Treaſon] of the ſaid Simon, The King by his Letters Patent, granted the ſame to his [the Kings] Son Edmund, To hold to him and his Heirs, of the King and his Heirs, by the Service due and accuſtomed for the ſame (k). Afterwards; K. Edward II, being deſirous to be informed what Fees the Ancient Earls of Leiceſter, at the time they were Seneſchalls in Fee to his Progenitours Kings of England, uſed to receive and enjoy in reſpect of their Office, and what Fees did in thoſe times belong to That Office, Commands the Barons of the Exchequer by his Writ, to ſearch the Rolls, Books, and Memoranda of the Exchequer touching the Premiſes, and to Certify the King thereof under the Exchequer-Seal (l). But what Certificate was made therein by the Barons, I do not at preſent find.

VII. As the Seneſchall or Steward was an Ancient Officer in England, ſo there was likewiſe an Officer of That name in ſeveral other Countries of Europe. I will mention ſome few of them. There was a Siniſcalcus amongſt the Ancient Alemanns (m). About the time of Hardicnute King of England (as it ſeemeth) one Osbern was Dapifer of Normandy (n). Ralf de Montpinçon was Dapifer to William the Great, King of England (o). In or about the Year 1119, William de Pirour is ſaid to have been Dapifer to K. Henry I. (p). In or about the Year 1158, Robert de Neuburg was Dapifer and Juſticier of Normandy (q). In the time of Maud the Empreſs, Stephen de Turre was Seneſchall of Anjou (r); and in the time of K. R. I, Robert de Torneham was Seneſchall There (s). William Fitz-

Fitz-Rafe was Seneſchall of Normandy under KK. Hen. II, and Ric. I. (t). Martin Algeis, of Gaſcony (u); W. le Groſs of Normandy (w), and William Fitz-John of the ſame (x). To them add, if you pleaſe, the Dapifer of Ponthieu (y). The Stewardſhip of France was veſted in Geoffrey Earl of Anjou by Grant of Robert King of France, and was anciently called Majoratus Domus Regiæ (z). It deſcended to Fulk Earl of Anjou, as Hugh de Cleerijs a Knight of Earl Fulks teſtifieth in his Commentary (a). And afterwards, when King Lewis VI. had diſſeiſed Fulk of his Office, he gave it to Anſelm de Garland (b); whoſe Son William de Garland, nevertheleſs, recognized the Superiour Right of Earl Fulk, and did Homage and Service for it to Earl Fulk (c). About the Year 1168, the King of France made Henry Son of K. Henry II. of England, Steward of France; which Office (ſaith the Hiſtorian) belonged to the Honour or Fee of Anjou (d): And as Steward of France he ſerved the French King at Table (e). There was the like Office of Steward in Catalunna. In the Year 1055, the Earl and Counteſs of Catalunna gave it to a Principal Baron There, named Ramon Mir. It was an Office (ſays Surita) of ſo great preeminence and juriſdiction, that the Princes There uſed to conferr it only on ſuch as were moſt powerful and near to them in Blood. And it had (continues he) the like juriſdiction, authority, and power, with the Office of the Mayordomos in the Kingdom of Aragon, and likewiſe in the Kingdom of France; who governed in Chief both in Peace and War (f). This Office in the Principality of Catalunna afterwards, to wit about the Year 1137, came to Guillen Ramon (g); And about the Year 1263, it deſcended to Don Pedro de Moncada, from Don Guillen Ramon his Father; which Don Pedro ſat as Steward in a Cauſe, wherein, the King of Aragon being preſent, Batell was adjudged between two Principal Cavalleros hereunder named. There had been (it ſeems) ſome doubts concerning the rights and authorities of this Office; but the matter being referred to the determination of Four Arbitratours, they declared and ſettled the ſame, having regard to the ancient uſage of other Kingdoms in like caſe, and to the particular cuſtoms of Catalunna (h). There was alſo the like Office in the Kingdom of

For he had cogniſance of all cauſes and quarrells; except in certain caſes reſerved to the Kings own Cogniſance (k): And when he was preſent in any City or Town whatever, all cauſes before any other Judg were to ceaſe, if he ſo commanded (l). There was anciently a Mayordomo in the Kingdom of Caſtile (m): And a great Officer in the Kingdom of Naples, called the Gran Siniſcalco (n). But concerning the Stewards and Mayordomos in Foreign Countries, this may ſuffice.

VIII. In the King of Englands Court there was another Great Officer ſtyled, The Chamberlain. It is probable, that during this Firſt Period there were ſeveral Chamberlains belonging to the Kings Court. At preſent I am not prepared to give a diſtinct account of each of them. But there was One who (I think) was Superiour to the Others. He was moſt properly ſtyled Camerarius Regis, and enjoyed the Office which at That time was ſtyled Magiſtra Cameraria, the High Chamberlainſhip. It may be obſerved, that ſome of the Great Offices in the Kings Court, eſpecially thoſe which were Hereditary, were diſtinguiſhed from ſubordinate Offices of the ſame Name, by the epithet of Magiſtratus, Magiſterium, &c. For example. The Office of the Kings Chief Chamberlain was ſtyled Magiſtra Cameraria. K. Henry I. granted it by the Name of Magiſtra Cameraria mea totius Angliæ, to Alberic de Ver and his heirs, To hold of the King and his heirs, with all the Dignities, Liberties, and Honours thereto belonging, as freely and honourably as Robert Malet or any other had held and enjoyed the ſame, together with the Liveries and Lodgings of the Kings Court, which belonged to the ſaid Office of Chamberlain. The Tenour of K. Henry the Firſts Charter in That behalf is hereunder recited, as I have it from Sir William Dugdales MSS Collections, who ſays he took it from the Original Charter remaining with the Right Honourable the Earl of Lyndeſey (o). The Office of the Kings Chief Mareſchall was alſo diſtinguiſhed by the ſtyle of the Kingdom of Naples. Where the Epithet of Magiſter was added to ſome of the Greater Officers, viz. Magiſter Juſtitiarius, Magiſtri Camerarij, &c. (t).

The Office of Camerarius Regis or Camerarius Angliæ was, from ancient time, Hereditary. At this day it is ſtyled the Office of Great Chamberlain of England: and is veſted in the Right Honourable the Earl of Lindſey. Who it was that held this Office of Chamberlain under KK. William I and II, I have not obſerved. In the reign of K. Henry I, Robert Malet was Chamberlain (u). But K. Henry I. (as Dugdale relates) diſherited Robert Malet (w); and afterwards granted the Office of Magiſtra Cameraria to Alberic de Ver and his heirs, by the Charter abovecited. In the ſame Kings reign, William Mauduit is ſaid to have been Chamberlain (x). William de Tancarvile is alſo ſtyled Chamberlain to That King (y): But I ſuppoſe tis to be underſtood, that he was the Kings Chamberlain of Normandy. For ſo the Tancarvills were (z). In the ſame Kings reign, Geoffrey de Clinton was the Kings Treaſurer and Chamberlain (a). In the reign of K. Stephen, William Malduit ſeems to have been Chamberlain; for Money was paid to him (as hereunder is mentioned), to the Kings uſe, ad Cameram Curiæ (b). However, in the ſame Kings reign, William de Pontearch Fined to the King in M marks of Silver, for the Miniſtry [or Office] and the Daughter of Robert Mauduit, And in xij marks and one ounce of Gold, for the Miniſtry of the Camera Curiæ, And in ij marks of Gold, for the Miniſtry of the Camera Curiæ, for the benefit of his Brother Osbert (c). Here, the Office purchaſed for Osbert de Pontearch, called the Miniſterium Cameræ Curiæ, might, probably, be the Chamberlainſhip of Normandy. For one Osbert de Pontearcha ſeems to have been a Chamberlain of Normandy about this time (d). In K. Henry the Seconds reign, mention is made of ſeveral Chamberlains For inſtance. Geoffrey de Clinton (anno incerto) is ſtyled Chamberlain (e). Anno XI of That King, Henry Fitz-Gerold and William Malduit are ſtyled Chamberlains (f). Anno XII, XIV, & XV, Henry Fitz-Gerold is ſtyled [the Kings] Chamberlain (g); and again again anno incerto of That King, (b). In the XIVth Year of the ſame King, William Malduit is ſtyled [the Kings] Chamberlain (i). And again anno XXVI. (k), and anno XXX (l). In the reign of K. Richard I, to wit, anno V, and anno VII, William Malduit is ſtyled Chamberlain (m). In the reign of K. Henry II, anno incerto, William Malduit and Warin Fitz-Gerold were [the Kings] Chamberlains (n): Anno XXX, William Malduit and Ralf Fitz-Stephen are ſo ſtyled (o): In a Charter of the ſame King, anno incerto, Ralf Fitz-Stephen is ſtyled Chamberlain (p). In the Reign of K. Richard I, Ralf Fitz-Godfrey is ſtyled (by Hoveden) the Kings Chamberlain (q).

In England, ſome of the Chamberlains performed ſome acts of their office in the Kings Court and Houſhold; and other acts at his Exchequer. They took care of the Receipts and Payments of the Kings Revenue. In the moſt ancient times they uſed, as it ſeems, to act at the Exchequer ſometimes in Perſon. In the ſucceeding times they acted there by their Subſtitutes; as may be ſeen elſewhere (r). In the Kingdom of Naples there was the like Officer called the Grand Chamberlain. Whoſe duty it was to take an account of all the In-payments and Out-payments of his Soveraign, and to be a Judg and Superintendant thereof (s).

IX. Another Great Officer in the Kings Court was the Chancellour. For a conſiderable time after the Conqueſt, he was uſually ſtyled Cancellarius Regis; probably, to diſtinguiſh him from Inferiour Chancellours; ſuch as were the Chancellours in Cathedrall Churches, and Others; for there were ſome others ſo called; As, Godfrey the Queens Chancellour, Reinelm the Queens Chancellour, Stephen Ridel Chancellour to the Earl of Moreton, &c (t). The Kings Chancellour was uſually, in thoſe times, a Biſhop or other Prelate, or an Eccleſiaſtical Perſon. And as in England, ſo alſo in ſeveral Foreign Countries, the Office of Chancellour was in thoſe days commonly conferred on Prelates or Churchmen. It was ſo in Sicily, and France (u), and Germany (w). In truth, in England, the Chancellour was the Kings Chief Chaplain, and had the Superiour periour care both of the Kings Chancery and of his Chapell (x). In the 55th Year of K. Henry III, John le Fauconer Receiver of the money ariſing from the Profits of the Great Seal, paſſed an Accompt of the ſaid Profits. Upon his Accompt, he was Allowed (amongſt other things) for certain ſmall expences about the Chancery and the Kings Chapell (y). And even ſo long after the Conqueſt as in the reign of K. Edward II, the Chancellour for the time being was looked upon to be Chief of the Kings Chapell; He is expreſly ſtyled Chef de la Chapele le Roy, in an Ordinance made in That Kings time relating to the Royal Chapell of Windſor (z).

The Kings Chancellour is frequently named in the Hiſtories of this Kingdom. But the Ancient Hiſtorians ſay little concerning his Duty or the Nature of his Office. A few memoires may be here added. He was wont to ſuperviſe the Charters which were to be ſealed with the Kings Great Seal (a). Hence, probably, it came to paſs, that he is ſo frequently named in the atteſtations of ſuch Charters: And that many Charters had this clauſe in them, Data per manum N. Cancellarij noſtri; as appears by numberleſs examples in the Charter-Rolls. He uſed likewiſe to ſuperviſe and ſeal the Writs and Precepts that iſſued in proceedings pending in the Curia Regis and the Exchequer, and (after the Diviſion) in the Kings other Courts of Law. He was one of the Kings prime Councellours in affairs of State: And Did acts of divers kinds in the Palace, as well in judicial proceedings as otherwiſe. In the ancient times he was alſo wont to act together with the Chief Juſticier and other Great Men in matters of Revenue at the Exchequer; as appears by ſeveral inſtances produced in this Hiſtory: and ſometimes with the other Juſticiers Itinerant in their circuits. About the Beginning of K. Henry the Seconds Reign, there were Pleas, in the County of Kent, holden before the Kings Chancellour and before Henry de Eſſex the Kings Conſtable (b); and before the Chancellour and the Earl of Leiceſter (c). Amerciaments were ſett upon ſeveral Perſons in in Worceſterſhire by the Chancellour and Stephen de Segrave (d); and in the Counties of Notingham and Derby, by the ſame perſons (e) The Chancellourſhip, (f) Mag-ſhip, from a ſmall Beginning, became in proceſs of time an office of great Dignity and preeminence. When the number of Royal Charters began to multiply, when the Pleas and Cauſes in the Kings Courts grew Numerous, and when the Grandeur of the High Juſticier came to decline, the power of the Chancellour waxed (as it ſeems) greater than it had formerly been. And (if I have obſerved right) the Chancellours office received a conſiderable acceſſion of power and dignity from the Greatneſs of ſome of the perſons who had borne it. In this conjecture I have been ſomewhat the more confirmed, becauſe I find Paulus Æmylius makes the like obſervation concerning the Chancellours of France (f). And it ſeems the Chancellours in other Countries acquired by degrees the like addition of Greatneſs and preeminence (g).

In England, the Chancellour was wont to be appointed to his office by the King. In the Reign of K. Stephen, Geoffrey the Chancellour Fined in Three thouſand and ſix pounds and a mark, For the [Kings] Seal (h). This I underſtand to be a Fine then lately made with the King, For the Office of Chancellour, or To have the keeping of the Kings Seal. Which precedent may juſtly ſeem ſtrange to us at this day. But it ſeemeth that in thoſe times, things of the like kind with This were ſometimes done. For Example. In the ſame year of K. Stephen, Richard Fitz-Alured Fined in xv marks of Silver, That he might ſit with Ralf Baſſet at the Kings Pleas (i). Again. In the 7th year of K John, Walter de Grey Fined with the King in Five thouſand marks, To have the Kings Chancery during his whole Life; and for the Kings Charter thereof (k). K. Henry III, by his Charter dated the 12th day of February in the 11th year of his Reign, granted and confirmed his Chancery to Ralf Biſhop of Chicheſter, to hold during his whole Life, with all the iſſues, liberties, and other things thereto belonging, as freely, quietly, entirely, and honourably, as the Chancellours of Former Kings his Predeceſſours held the ſame (l). The ſame King, by his Charter dated at Wodeſtoke the 14th day of June in the 16th year of his Reign, did for himſelf and his heirs grant and confirm, to Ralf Biſhop of Chicheſter Then his Chancellour, the Chancery of England [or office of Chancellour] during his whole Life, with all the appurtenances, liberties, and free cuſtoms to the ſaid Chancery belonging. And by another Charter dated the ſame 14th day of June in the ſaid 16th year, and made with the ſame Hijs teſtibus, the King granted and confirmed to the ſaid Ralf Biſhop of Chicheſter Then his Chancellour, the Cuſtody of his Seal during his [the Biſhops] whole Life, with all the appurtenances, liberties, and cuſtoms to the ſaid Cuſtody belonging; So that he might bear and keep the ſaid Seal, either Himſelf in Perſon (q) K. Henry III. made a Charter or Declaration, of Chicheſter reſigned the Great Seal into the Kings Own hand by His command (r).

Now we are ſpeaking of the Chancellours Office, it may be proper to ſet-down ſome inſtances, whereby it may appear How the Great Seal has at ſeveral times been committed to Keepers, reſigned or redelivered by them to the King, or otherwiſe laid-up and diſpoſed-of. When a New Chancellour or Sigillifer was appointed, a Memorandum is ſometimes made of it in the Charter-Roll or Patent-Roll: For example: In the 7th year of K. John, upon the death of Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury late Chancellour (s); and upon the aſſumption of Walter de Gray to That office (t). So alſo on the 9th day of October in the 15th year of K. John, Maſter Richard de Mariſco Archdeacon of Richmond and Northumberland delivered the Great Seal to the King at Oſpreng (u). And the 22th day of December following, it was delivered at Windſor to Ralf de Nevill, who was to bear it under the Biſhop of Wincheſter (w). In the Third year of K. Henry III, it was provided by Common Council of the Realm, That no Charter or Letters Patent of Confirmation, Alienation, Sale or Grant of any thing in perpetuity, ſhould be ſealed with the Kings Great Seal until his Full age: And that if any ſuch were ſealed with That Seal, they ſhould be void. And here (ſaith the Record) the Kings Seal begann to runn (x). In the 31th year of K. Henry III, John Maunſel had the Cuſtody of the Kings Seal, from the 8th day of November till the morrow of the Decollation of

Queens cuſtody, under his Privy-Seal and the Seals of Richard Earl of Cornwall and others of his Council; with this proviſo, that if any thing which might turn to the detriment or diminution of the Crown or Realm, was ſealed, in the Kings name, whilſt he continued out of the Realm, with any other Seal but That, it ſhould be utterly void (c). The Great Seal being thus diſpoſed-of, the King delivered the Seal of the Exchequer to William de Kilkenni, to be uſed inſtead of the Great Seal until his Return from Gaſcoigne (d). On St. Edwards day in the 29th year of K. Henry III, Maſter William de Kilkenni delivered to the King His [Great] Seal; which was delivered the ſame day to H. de Wengham; who ſealed with it the next day (e). And upon this occaſion, the King granted to William de Kilkenni his Letter Patent, whereby he declared, that William had long ſerved him diligently and acceptably; and ſhould therefore be quit of all reckonings and demands in reſpect of the Kings Court or otherwiſe, for the whole time that he had been Keeper of the Kings Seal in England (f). In the 39th year of K. Henry III, the Kings Seal, which he uſed in Gaſcony, was laid up in the Treaſury, under the Seals of P. Lovel Treaſurer and H. de Wengham (g). K. Henry III, in the 45th year of his reign, declared by his Letter Patent, That on St. Lukes day in the 44th year, Nicolas Archdeacon of Ely received of Him his Seal to Keep: That on the Tueſday next after the Tranſlation of St. Thomas the Martyr in the 45th year, the ſaid Seal was redelivered to Him [the King]: And that the King recommended him in an eſpecial manner for his good Service (h). In the 49th year of K. Henry III, an Entry or Memorandum is made in the Patent-Roll, That on the Wedneſday next after St. Peter in Cathedra in the ſaid year, the King took His [Great] Seal of Maſter John de Chiſhull Archdeacon of London, and the ſame day committed it to Maſter Thomas de Cantilupe; who ſtraitway ſealed with it (i). Petri in Cathedra anno regni Regis Henrici filii Regis Johannis xlix°, recepit idem Do-robe, in the preſence of the King and of Hugh le Deſpenſer Juſticier of England and Peter de Montfort, to be kept by him until Thomas ſhould return; It was to be uſed in this manner: Ralf was to keep it in the Wardrobe under the Seal of Peter de Montfort, Roger de St. John, and Giles de Argentein, or one of them; When it was taken out, Ralf was to ſeal Writs of Courſe, in the preſence of the Perſon under whoſe Seal it was then laid-up, or in his abſence if he was not minded to be There; but Writs of Precept, only in the preſence of ſuch perſon and with his aſſent; And when the Writs (either of Courſe or Precept) were ſealed, then the Kings Seal was to be ſealed-up under the Seal of one of the Three Perſons abovenamed, and to be carried by Ralf into the Wardrobe, to be There kept in form aforeſaid, until Thomas de Cantilupe returned. Theſe things were done at Glouceſter (k). In the 6th year of K. Edward I, when the Biſhop of Bath and Wells the Kings Chancellour ſet-forth towards Foreign Parts, the Kings Seal was delivered into the Wardrobe, under the Seal of J. de Kirkeby, to whom the Chancellour committed the diſpatch of the buſineſs of the Chancery (l). In the 11th year of K. Edward I, when the Biſhop of Bathe and Wells, at That time the Kings Chancellour, went from Court to his Dioceſe, the Kings Seal was committed par interim to John de Kirkeby (m). In the 26th year of K. Edward I, John de Benſtede the Kings Clerk came into the Exchequer, and brought thither, under the Seal of John de Langton Chancellour of England, the Great Seal which was uſed in England whilſt the King was in Flanders, upon the War moved between Him and the King of France; during which time Prince Edward was Witneſs to all the Writs that were ſealed with the ſaid Great Seal: Which Great Seal, ſo ſealed-up with the Chancellours Seal, was at the ſame time delivered to the Chamberlains of the Exchequer, to be laid up in the Treaſury by the Kings command (n). In the Thirtieth year of K. Edward on the Monday after the Aſſumption of the B. Virgin about the Hour of Veſpers, in the Chamber wherein the King then lodged in the Hoſtel of the Archbiſhop of York near Weſtminſter, quickly after the King roſe from Council, John de Langeton then Chancellour of England reſtored to the King his Great Seal; And the King, in the preſence of Amedeo Earl of

Seals of John de Caen, William de Birlay, and Robert de Bardelby, until the Chancellours return from beyond-Sea (r). In the 35th year of K. Edward I, the Kings Great Seal was brought into the Court of Exchequer, and delivered to the Treaſurers Lieutenant and Barons There, ſealed up in a Purſe. With it, a Writ of the Privy Seal was likewiſe delivered to them; whereby, the King intimates, that he had appointed the Biſhop of London to be his Chancellour, And commands them to deliver the Great Seal to him, and to receive of him the Oath belonging to That Office. Hereupon, the Biſhop of London, before the Treaſurers Lieutenant, the Barons, and the Chief Juſtices of the Two Benches then preſent, in the Exchequer, took the Oath for the Office of Chancellour, and had the Great Seal delivered to him There (s). In the firſt year of K. Edward II, William de Melton Controller of the Kings Wardrobe came and brought into the Exchequer, the Kings Seal which he uſed in England at the time when he [the King] was this year in Foreign parts; Which Seal was uſed for ſealing the Writs that iſſued out of the Kings Chancery in England at That time, under the Teſte of Peter de Gavaſton Earl of Cornwall, Then the Kings Lieutenant in England; and the ſaid Seal, being in a Bag or Purſe of White leather ſealed with the Privy Seal of John de Langeton Biſhop of Chicheſter Chancellour of England, was by him delivered-in at the Exchequer, in the preſence of John de Sandale Chancellour of the ſame Exchequer, William de Carleton, Roger de Hegham, Maſter Richard de Abyndon, and Maſter John de Everdon, Barons, and Walter de Norwich Remembrancer. And ſtraitway the ſaid Seal, being in the Purſe ſo ſealed-up, was delivered to the Chamberlains of the Exchequer, to be kept in the Kings Treaſury, to wit, to Henry de Ludegreſhal Chamberlain, John Devery the Treaſurers Clerk at the Receipt, and John de Bukingham Clerk and Attorney to the Earl of Warwick Chamberlain in Fee, in the preſence of the abovenamed John de Sandale, Barons, and Remembrancer. Afterwards, on the 14th day of May in the Sixth year of the King, at which time were preſent in the Exchequer W. Biſhop of Worceſter, Adomar de Valence Earl of Pembroke, H. le Deſpenſer, J. de Sandale the Treaſurers Lieutenant, Walter de Norwich Baron, and others of the Kings Council, the ſaid Seal which the King uſed in England whilſt he was in Foreign parts, was delivered to the

It is to be underſtood, that for the diſpatch both of the Royal Charters, and of the Writs uſed in Proceedings at Law, the Chancellour had under him a competent number of Clerks, employed in That Service. And he had yearly an Allowance from the Crown, for his Own and Their Maintenance. For example. K. Henry III, in the 49th year of his reign, granted to Maſter Thomas de Cantelou his Chancellour D marks a-year, payable at the Exchequer, at Four Terms in the the year, for the Support of Him and the Clerks of the Kings Chancery, ſo long as he ſhould continue in That Office (u). And in or about the 52th year of the ſame King, Godfrey Biſhop of Worceſter the Kings Chancellour, had D marks a-year, payable at the Exchequer, for the Support of Him and of the Clerks of the Chancery (w). In the 10th year of K. Edward II, Adam Son of Robert and Thomas de Duſton Poulterers, whom the Biſhop of Wincheſter the Chancellour had ſent into divers parts of the Realm to buy Poultrey for the ſuſtenance of the Chancellour and the the Clerks of the Chancery, had the Kings Letters Patent of Intendance and ſafe conduct (x).

There was alſo ſometimes an Officer in the Kings Court, called the Vicechancellour: Who acted (at leaſt, in many caſes) in the Chancellours Abſence. Walter de Conſtantijs was Vicechancellour to K. Henry II, in or about the year 1177 (y). And Maſter Roger Malus Catulus was Vicechancellour to K. Richard I, in or about the 2d year of his reign (z). At this time, K. Richard was in Sicily, and William de Longchamp was Chancellour in England (a). Maſter Roger the Vicechancellour was afterwards drowned near Cyprus, and the Kings Seal loſt. So the King ordered all Charters to be new-ſealed (b). In the ſame Kings reign, one Maſter Benet had the Keeping of the Kings Seal in England; for which cauſe William de Longchamp, who ſtill was or claimed to be Chancellour, denounced him excommunicated (c): But perhaps he had the Seal committed to him by John Earl of Moreton and the Barons who oppoſed the Chancellour. John de Alencon Archdeacon of Liſieux was Vicechancellour (of Normandy, as I take it) in the ſame Kings Reign (d): And Maſter Warin, Priour of Locherons was alſo Vicechancellour in the ſame Kings Reign (e). In the 7th year of the ſame King, Maſter Euſtachius is ſtyled the Kings Sigillifer (f): William Biſhop of Ely being then, and till his death (which hapned in the next year) the Kings Chancellour (g). The ſame Maſter Euſtachius is likewiſe ſtyled the Kings Vicechancellour (h). This Officer called the Vicechancellour or Sigillifer, was (if I miſtake not) for a long time only a Subſtitute or Vicegerent to the Chancellour. And there was a Like Officer who came afterwards to

X. The Treaſurer was another Great Officer in the Kings Court. He was uſually ſtyled Theſaurarius Regis. And was for the moſt part a Prelate or Eccleſiaſtical perſon. For ſome time after the Conqueſt (if I do not err in my obſervation) the Chief Juſtificier uſed to Do many acts, which afterwards pertained to the Treaſurers office. By the account that is given in Hiſtory of the actions of Odo Biſhop of Bayeux and William Fitz Osbern Chief Juſticiers in the reign of K. William I, it ſeems that they managed the Kings Revenue as well as preſided in his Court. The like may be ſaid of Ranulf Flambard in the reign of K. William II. Henry de Huntendon and Roger de Hoveden ſay, that Ranulf was conſtituted by the King, Placitator ac totius regni Exactor (k). Where, by Placitator, may be meant Chief Juſticier; and by Exactor, Intendant of the Revenue, or Treaſurer. The ſame may be obſerved of Roger Biſhop of Salesbury, in the reign of K. Henry I. He ſeems to have been Chief Juſticier and Treaſurer (if not Chancellour too) at the ſame time. He had the Care both of the Pleas and Treaſure; and governed the Realm like a Viceroy (l). About the beginning of K. Stephens reign, tis ſaid of Roger Biſhop of Salesbury, that for one of his Two Nephews he obtained of the King the Office of Chancellour, and for the other (viz. Nigell Biſhop of Ely) the Office of Treaſurer (m). But, it ſeems, Nigell had been Treaſurer to K. Henry I, (mm). In the ſame K. Stephens reign, Roger Biſhop of Salesbury and William de Pontearch are ſtyled Cuſtodes Theſaurorum Regalium (3 m). About the ſame time, the Earl of Glouceſter and Brient Fitz-Count are found acting as if they were Treaſurers (4 m); and William de Pontearch acting as if he was Chamberlain (n). In the reign of K. Henry II, the Treaſurer is more frequently and expreſly mentioned. During That Reign, he is often named amongſt the Barons of the Kings Exchequer (o). There was Richard the Treaſurer in the 11th year (p), in the 16th year (q), in the 26th year (r), and in the 31th year of That King (s). He is uſually called Ricardus Theſaurarius, without a ſurname or other diſtinction. And if the Treaſurer mentioned in thoſe ſeveral years was one and the ſame perſon (I think it was the ſame perſon); he might be Richard Son of Nigell Biſhop of Ely. It ſeems Biſhop Nigell bought for him the office of Treaſurer, of K. Henry II, for four hundred pounds (t).

In the Annals of Wincheſter, Richard is ſtyled Regis Henrici Apotecarius, the Kings Treaſurer (u). This Richard the Treaſurer was one of the Juſticiers Itinerant appointed by K. Henry II, in the 25th year of his reign (w): And acted as ſuch, together with Nicholas Fitz-Turold and Robert de Witefeld (x). Richard Son of Nigell was alſo Treaſurer to K. Richard I. (y); by whom he was made Biſhop of London (z). Tis true, Sir W. Dugdale, at the 24th year of Hen. II, names Warin Fitz-Gerold as the Kings Treaſurer (a); in regard the King had granted to Warin, Cameram de theſauro ſuo. But Warin (if I do not err) was the Kings Chamberlain, And Richard a Clergyman was Treaſurer both before and after that 24th year; as is mentioned here above. During part of K. Johns reign, William de Ely was the Kings Treaſurer (b). It ſeems to have been the Part or Duty of the Treaſurer in Ancient time, To act with the other Barons at the Exchequer in the governance of the Kings Revenue, To Examine and Controll Accomptants, To Direct the Entries made in the Great Roll, To Atteſt the Writs iſſued for levying the Kings Revenue, To Superviſe the Iſſuing and Receiving of the Kings Treaſure at the Receipt of Exchequer, And, in a word, to Provide-for and take care of the Kings Profit.

CHAP. III.

I. Before we come to treat of the Judicature of the Kings Court, it will be convenient to premiſe a few things, in order to explain and aſcertain what we mean by this phraſe, The Kings Court. In Ancient time the phraſe Curia Regis had uſually a Twofold application. Firſt, It was uſed to ſignify the Kings Palace or Place of Reſidence. This was its Firſt and Principal meaning. In this ſenſe it is taken in many of the inſtances rehearſed in the Firſt Chapter of this Volume, which treats of the King of Englands Court. So that the conſideration of That matter need not be reſumed Here.

II. Curia Regis ſometimes ſignified the Kings Chief or Soveraign Court of ordinary Judicature. In Ancient Records and Memorials written in the times near after the Norman Conqueſt, frequent mention is made of this Curia Regis. At That time (as it ſeems) there was but One ſupreme ordinary Court of Judicature in this Realm: Which was properly and by way of Eminence ſtyled Curia Regis, becauſe it was holden in the Kings Palace, before Himſelf or his Chief Juſticier. By this Name it was diſtinguiſhed from all other ſubordinate Courts; Whether they were the Kings Courts pertaining to any of his Honours or Manours; Or the Courts of inferiour Lords, pertaining to any of their Honours, Baronies, or Manours; Or the County-Courts, Hundred-Courts &c; And even from the Courts holden before the Kings Juſticiers Errant. In the Reigns of KK. Henry II, Richard I, and afterwards, we find innumerable inſtances of Pleas and Proceedings mentioned to be had in Curia Regis: Many of which are to be ſeen in Books already printed; And many others in this Volume. And whether, in thoſe inſtances, the Supreme Court of ordinary Judicature above mentioned be not in all likelyhood meant, the Reader may judg when he has conſidered the ſtate of the Caſe, and the way of Speaking uſed in thoſe Times. Of this Judicature we ſhall treat more largely by and by. Again; Sometimes the Exchequer was called Curia Regis or rather Curia Regis ad Scaccarium. Anno 14 H. II, the Monks of Ely Fined to the Crown in xl marks, That the Barons of the Exchequer might Certify to the King being Then in Normandy, That they (the Monks) had recovered the Manour of Stoke againſt Roger de Muntcheneſi and his Wife in Curia ſua [i. e. Regis]

Regis (a). In the 29th year of K. Henry II, a Final Concord was had in the Kings Court at Weſtminſter at the Exchequer, Between the Priour and Monks of Rocheſter, And Juliana Daughter of Fulk de Neweham and Robert her Son, concerning the Advouſon of the Church of Northtone (b). And in the 9th year of K. Richard I, a Fine was levyed on the Sunday next after the feaſt of St. Mark, in Curia Regis apud Weſtmonaſterium ad Scaccarium, before H. Archbiſhop of Canterbury and Six others (c). When therefore a thing was done (in thoſe times) at the Exchequer, it might properly be ſaid to be done in the Kings Court at the Exchequer. For the Exchequer was wont to be holden in the Kings Palace, either before the King or his Juſticier. Some amongſt the Moderns (particularly, Serjeant Fleetwood, formerly Recorder of London) have thought, that Anciently there was but One Superiour Court, And that That Court was the Exchequer. This obſervation partly agrees with what I have above advanced; but it wants ſome explication. The Exchequer is not to be confounded with the Curia Regis. For though it was holden in the Kings Court, and was in effect a Member thereof: yet it was expreſſly diſtinguiſhed from the Curia Regis. For inſtance. In Norfolk and Suffolk, there were Pleas in the Kings Court before William Fitz-Ralf and his Companions (d); There were Pleas before Ralf Fitz-Stephen, William Fitz-Stephen, Roger Fitz-Reinfrey, and Robert Mantel, Juſtices Errant in Suffolk (e); And there were alſo Pleas at the Exchequer (f). In theſe Citations, the Pleas ariſing in the Kings Court, And in the Court of the Juſtices Errant, And in the Exchequer, are ranked under their reſpective Heads or Titles; And are evidently diſtinguiſhed from one another. Again; In Lincolnſhire, there were Pleas in the Kings Court (g); And Pleas before Juſtices Errant (h); And Pleas at the Exchequer (i). The like Method mutatis mutandis of ranging and diſtinguiſhing the reſpective Pleas of the Kings Court, of the Iters, and of the Exchequer, is uſed in other years of K. Henry II (k); The Entries whereof need not be here recited at large, in regard they run in the ſame words with the Record of the 25 H. II. juſt-above quoted. So that it ſeems the Curia Regis and the Exchequer are properly to be diſtinguiſhed from one another, though they were Both of them holden in the Kings Palace. But in what manner the Chief Juſticier, who preſided both in the Curia Regis and in the Exchequer, ordered or diſtributed between thoſe Two Courts, the ſeveral Pleas that were brought into the Superiour Judicature, I cannot determine.

termine. At preſent, we will procede to ſpeak concerning the Superiour Court of Judicature the Curia Regis: And touching It, we will enquire into theſe following particulars: I. The Ancient State of this High Judicature; II. The Original of it; III. The Perſons who Preſided and Acted therein; IV. The Pleas appropriated or reſerved to It.

III. Firſt, As to the Ancient State of this High Judicature which was ſtyled the Kings Court. It will, no doubt, be found very hard to ſet forth particularly and diſtinctly the Nature of That Court, and in what manner Juſtice was diſpenſed therein, in the moſt ancient times next after the Conqueſt; partly through the want of Records and Hiſtorical Memoires, and partly by reaſon of the great Diſtance of Time. So that I muſt content my ſelf to propoſe ſome Conjectures, by way of Eſſay, in the caſe. Wherein if I happen to be Unaccurate or Miſtaken, the Obſcurity of the Subject will, I ſuppoſe, procure me Excuſe amongſt Candid Readers. Let us then take a ſhort View of the Kings Court with reſpect to its Judicature. We may conſider the King as Soveraign or Chief Lord of this Realm (l), and the Fountain of Juſtice (m) to his Subjects, Reſiding in his Royal Palace, and attended by his Barons and Great Officers both of the Clergy and Layity. The Liege-men of his Kingdom bring their Complaints or Cauſes before Him as Supreme Arbiter and Judge, to be determined in his Court or Palace, wherein was the Seat of the Supreme Judicature. Theſe Cauſes were Heard and Judged either before the King Himſelf, or elſe (moſt uſually) before his Chief Juſticier, or before him together with ſome others who were ſtyled Juſticiæ or Juſticiers. When the King went Beyond the Sea (which frequently hapned during the Period of time we are now conſidering), He was wont to conſtitute ſome One or More Great Men to repreſent him in Government and Adminiſtration of Juſtice (n): If one; That Perſon was uſually ſtyled Juſticia, Regis Juſticia or Juſticiarius, Capitalis Juſticia or Juſticiarius, and Juſticiarius Angliæ; If More than one, their ſtyle was the ſame Plurally. And ſuch Juſticier in the Kings abſence had a Power reſembling the Regal. For he Preſided both in Government and Adminiſtration of Juſtice. Howbeit That Power of his, in point of adminiſtration of Juſtice, was ſometimes in particular caſes reſtrained or ſuperſeded, if the King thought fit. For the King, whilſt he was Beyond-ſea, would ſometimes interpoſe, and either by his Writs De ultra mare, or in ſome other manner, direct What ſhould be done in ſome cauſes, or ſuſpend the Judgment of his Juſticier therein, till his next Return into England, or till ſome other time which he thought meet to preſcribe. Of theſe matters, ſome examples may be ſeen in this Chapter and elſewhere in this volume. And I will here ſubjoin two or three inſtances, to ſhew in general the nature of theſe Writs De ultra mare. Robert de Roſs was endebted to the King in Dxxxiij l. and half a mark. But the demand thereof was reſpited till the Kings return into England, by the Kings Writ De ultra mare (o). Hugh de Lacys Town of Bruford was charged with Ten marks, for harbouring an Outlaw. Which debt was remitted by vertue of a Writ of Richard de Luci Chief Juſticier grounded on the Kings Writ de ultra mare (p). Simon de Beauchamp was allowed x marks for the like Summ paid by him to Philipp de Haukechirch to the Kings uſe, by vertue of a Writ de Ultra mare ſent by the King when he was in Germany to the Barons of the Exchequer (q). And William de de Bocland Sheriff of Cornwall, being amerced at xxx l. for making a default of Six days in his Accompt; the ſame was remitted to him by Writ of Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury Chief Juſticier by vertue of the Kings Writ De ultra mare (r). The like Writs De ultra mare (if my obſervation does not fail me) were alſo uſed in the caſe of Pleas (s). If the King, when he was preſent in the Realm and ſat in Judgment, did not determine all the Cauſes that were brought before him, his Juſticier (or Juſticiers) determined the ſame. However, if the Juſticier did not do Right juſtice, the Party might, as I take it, afterwards reſort to the King Himſelf. In this caſe of application to the Kings Court, we may ſuppoſe the Party ſuing for Relief, did uſually obtain it in this manner. He paid or undertook to pay the King a Fine or Fines, to have Juſtitiam or Rectum in His Court: And thereupon he obtained (t) Writs or Precepts, by means whereof he purſued, and recovered or ſettled his Right. Thoſe Writs or Precepts were made out under the Kings Seal. And for the making and iſſuing of them (and for other Services), the King uſed to have near his Perſon or in his Court, ſome Great Man (commonly a Biſhop or Clergyman) who was called His Chancellour, and had the Keeping of his Seal. The Chancellour had under him certain Clerks, employed in making-out thoſe Writs. Whence it came to paſs in proceſs of time, that in Law-proceedings, the Kings Chancery was the Spring or Firſt Mover, and the Principal or Original Writs (for the introducing of Cauſes) were called Writs of the Chancery. Beſides the Chancellour, the Kings of England (from the time they Begann to uſe a Leſſer or Privy Seal) had another Great Officer in their Court, to whom belonged the care of making or ſealing ſome ſorts of Writs or Precepts, uſed alſo in the Kings Courts of Juſtice after the Diviſion of the Courts, called Writs of the Privy Seal. And That Officer was the Clerk or Keeper of the Kings Leſs or Privy Seal. But it may ſuffice juſt to mention him here; becauſe I have met with few Memoires concerning the Privy Seal that fall within this Firſt Period. However, it appears that a Privy Seal was uſed in This Period, to wit in the time of K. John. For when Philipp Marc Sheriff of the Counties of Notingham and Derby was upon his Accompt in the Exchequer, he had the ſumms following (amongſt others) diſcompted to him; to wit, C marks which he had paid to Robert de Viepont by vertue of Letters Patent of K. John, and xlv marks which he had paid to Geoffrey de Nevill, in part of CC marks which the ſame K. John by Letters Patent ſealed with his Privy Seal had commanded him to pay to Geoffrey (u). To proceed. The whole Juſtice of the Realm was primarily and originally the Kings (w); And His Court the Seat of the Soveraign Judicature. The immediate relation this Judicature had to the King and his Court, will I ſuppoſe appear from the account given of the Kings Court and the Proceedings therein, in this Volume, lume. Which exactly agrees with the account given of it by Glanvill in the Book De Legibus & Conſuetudd. Angliæ. There, in the Writs and Precedents mentioned by him, the Superiour Court is uſually called Curia mea (or, Regis), Capitalis Curia, and Principalis Curia (x); and is repreſented as holden before the King or his Juſticiers. The ſame thing may alſo appear by the Application which was wont to be made, to the King, or the Juſticiers on his behalf, for Juſtice in his Court. For ſometimes Litigants croſſed the Seas, when the King was in Foreign parts, to lay their Plaints before Him. As in the reign of K. Henry I. there being a Diſcord between William Archbiſhop of Canterbury and Alexander Biſhop of Lincoln; and the King being then Beyond-ſea, Both the Litigants croſſed the Sea, to lay the affair in diſpute before the King (y): And in the reign of K. Richard I; there being a Controverſy between Geoffrey Archbiſhop of York, and Simon the Dean and the Canons of York, the Litigants went over and laid the matters in debate before the King at Andeli in Normandy (z). But That application to the King for Juſtice may, I ſuppoſe, the moſt evidently appear by the Fines uſually profered and given upon account of Law-proceedings; Many of which Fines were made with the King in Normandy, or in his transfretation thither, or in ſome parts of England where he travelled or reſided at the reſpective times of Fining. Of which kind of Fines we ſhall treat more largely hereafter (a). After Pleas were brought into the Kings Court, the Judgment given therein, was deemed the Judgment of the King himſelf. It was alſo called the Judgment of his Court; it being given or pronounced by the King or his Juſticier, with the advice of his Barons and Great Men Aſſeſſours in his Court. In the caſe of Alfonſo King of Caſtile and Sanchez King of Navarre: The matters in diſpute between thoſe two Kings, were referred to the Judgment of Henry II. King of England: And when Judgment was given therein in the Kings Court, it is ſtyled by the Hiſtorian in one place, the Judgment of the Earls and Barons of the King of Englands Court (b), And in the next page in the ſame Hiſtorian, it is ſtyled the Judgment of the King of England (c). If the Cauſe brought into the Kings Court was of ordinary importance, tis probable, that it was uſually diſpatched by the High Juſticier or other Barons and Juſticiers who had leiſure from from the Kings other buſineſs to attend upon it: But that, if it was of Great importance, it was Conſidered and judged in a Fuller Aſſembly. For as things of weight were, according to the uſage of Thoſe times, generally done with Solemnity: So it is likely, that they were done with greater or leſſer Solemnity, according as they were of greater or leſſer weight. Which I think was alſo the uſual Method in thoſe times in the Kings Exchequer.

Let no man ſuppoſe it to be a Novel uſage, for Kings to Sit perſonally in Judicature. On the contrary, it is a very Ancient one, and conformable to the Law and Practice of Nations in many ages, Of This it may ſuffice to produce Here a few inſtances. Salomon King of Iſraël, a wiſe and magnificent Prince, adjudged perſonally in the cauſe of the Two women, one of whom had a Living child and the other a Dead one (d). Demetrius Poliorcetes King of Macedon heard cauſes in perſon. It is related of him, " That as he paſſed " along, an ancient woman importuned him, and ſeveral times urged him to " give her a Hearing. He anſwered, he was not at leiſure. She replied, " Then be not a King. Her words ſtruck his mind. He pondered them as " he went to his houſe. And ſtraitway laying-aſide all other things, he begunn
" with the womans buſineſs, and ſpent ſeveral days upon That and other
" cauſes. For there is nothing ſo Becoming a King as the work of adminiſtring
" juſtice. For Mars may be compared to a Tyrant; the Law to a
" King: Kings having the cuſtody of the Laws committed to them by Jupiter Octavius Cæſar Auguſtus heard cauſes in Perſon. " He himſelf (ſaith the " Hiſtorian) heard cauſes with great diligence, and ſometimes Sat till night (which at That time was unuſual). " If he was indiſpoſed, his Couch was " placed at the Tribunal, or elſe he would Do juſtice in his Chamber or " Houſe lying. He adminiſtred juſtice nor only with great induſtry, but
" (e).

" alſo with equal lenity &c, (f). Tiberius Claudius Cæſar heard cauſes in perſon in the Forum Auguſti (g). Nero Claudius Cæſar heard cauſes in perſon (h). So did Theodoſius the Emperour. Sozomen in his Dedicatory epiſtle to him, ſaith thus; " In the day-time (I hear) you are buſied in arms and corporal
" exerciſes, and in regulating the buſineſſes of your ſubjects, ſometimes adjudging
" cauſes, and ſometimes iſſuing neceſſary diſpatches [or precepts] (i). There was the like uſage amongſt the Franks, Burgundians, Lombards, and others.

others. In theſe Countries, the Princes Palace was the Chief Seat of Judicature; and he adminiſtred juſtice to his ſubjects, either in his Own perſon, or elſe by his Proceres, or by his Miſſi Dominici, or his Juſticiers of ſome denomination or other. And the Princes of theſe Countries uſed to order, if they ſo pleaſed, certain cauſes to be Heard or judged before Themſelves and no other Judges; in like manner as the Kings of England after the Conqueſt ſometimes Did. In or about the year 680, a woman named Acchildis came before Theodorick King of the Franks in his Court at Compeigne, and brought a Suit or Plaint againſt one Amalgarius, for Land. Amalgarius pleaded that he and his anceſtours had been in poſſeſſion of the Land for one and thirty years paſt. Whereupon it was adjudged by the Kings Proceres [in his Court], that Amalgarius ſhould hold the Land, in caſe he came by ſuch a time, and made-good his Plea by his own oath and the oath of certain perſons his Conſacramentals. Amalgarius came within the time prefixed, and made Oath in the Kings Palace in form aforeſaid. And thereupon the King by his Precept hereundercited, adjudged and ordered Amalgarius to continue in quiet poſſeſſion of the Land (k). In many other caſes, Pleas were moved before the King or his Nobles (l). In Marculfus there is a Formula for a prologue or exordium, to be uſed in the proceſſes when the King gave Judgment in a Great cauſe brought before him. It was provided by the Longobardick laws, That if any man, without licence from the King or the Judg, preſumed to plead another mans cauſe in the preſence of the King or Judg, he ſhould pay his widrigild (p). And Thoſe Laws make frequent mention of Litigants appealing or complaining at the Kings Palace (q). Amongſt the Franks, there were Pleas or cauſes which (as it ſeemeth) were referred to the Emperours Judgment (r). In fine; about the year 1111, Baldwin Earl of Flanders made a Progreſs through his Dominions, trying cauſes and adminiſtring juſtice to his ſubjects (s).

IV. As to the Second point of enquiry, the Original or Riſe of this Judicature of the Kings Court: Though I would not be poſitive in a thing of this nature; it ſeems to me to have been of Norman original or inſtitution. We do not, I think, find any notices of Such a Court in England during the Angloſaxon times: All Pleas or cauſes being Then determined Below (in a Plain and Simple manner), in Courts within the ſeveral Counties, Towns, or Diſtricts. On the other ſide, amongſt the Normans (who affected Pomp and Ceremony), there was a Judicature called Curia Regis, in the Early times. In the year 1080, in a Council at Illebone or Dieppe in Normandy, it was ordained, That if the Biſhops could ſhew in the Kings Court, that they enjoyed in the time of Earl Robert or K. William, any Rights not ſpecified in the Acts of That Council, the King did Allow of the ſame; Provided they did not ſeize or exerciſe ſuch Rights, until they had ſhewn in the Kings Court, that they ought to enjoy the ſame (t). Afterwards, K. Henry I, in or about the year 1113, made a Charter of Confirmation to the Abbey of Ouſche in Normandy of all their Poſſeſſions; And in it commanded that the Monks ſhould not be impleaded for their poſſeſſions, except in the Kings Court (u). The ſame King made a Charter to the Abbey of Fontanelle in Normandy, that they ſhould not be impleaded, except Before Himſelf (w). And in the ſame Kings reign, Robert Earl of Beleſme a Norman was condemned for divers miſdemeanors by Judgment in the Kings Court (x). And as I have been induced to believe the Normans eſtabliſhed this Great Judicature in England: So I find, a Learned Gentleman, incomparably well skilled in the Angloſaxon and Anglonorman Antiquities, concurrs in the ſame opinion (y). However, I leave every man to his freedom of judging therein as he ſhall ſee cauſe. Since therefore we find there was Such a Judicature as That of the Kings Court in England, at leaſt from the time of the Norman Conqueſt (which falls within the Period of our preſent Enquiry), let us procede in our Diſquiſition concerning it.

V. As to the Third point of enquiry, viz. Of the perſons who Sat and Acted in the Kings Court: The King himſelf was properly Head of this Court (yy); and next to Him or in His abſence, the High Juſticier preſided therein. To the High Juſticier ſome of the Great Officers of the Kings Palace were aſſociated in judicature. In the reign of K. Henry II, there were certain perſons ſtyled Juſtitiæ in Curia Regis. Roger de Houeden relateth, that in the year 1179 (25 Hen. II) the King held a Great Council at Windſor; and by the advice of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, and Barons, in the preſence of the young King his Son, divided England into Four parts, and appointed Juſticiers for each Diviſion (z). For one of the Diviſions he appointed Godfrey de Luci, John Cumin, Hugh de Gaerſt, Ranulf de Glanvill, William de Bendinges, and Alan de Furnell. Theſe Six (ſaith the Hiſtorian) were Juſticiers in the Kings Court, to Hear the Plaints of the people (a). In this, I ſuppoſe, the Hiſtorian means, that theſe Six were the Principal Juſticiers of the Kings Court; Or, that they were perſons moſt uſually employed by the King in That Service: However, not excluding ſome others. For in truth, both Before and At that time, there were Other Juſticiers in the Kings Court as well as They. For example. In the 21th year of That King, there were Pleas and Conventions in the Kings Court, before William Fitz-Ralf, Bertram de Verdun, Thomas Baſſet, and William Baſſet (b). In the 22th year of the ſame King, there were Pleas in the Kings Court before William Fitz-Ralf, Bertram de Verdun, and William Baſſet (c). The like in the 23th year before William Fitz-Ralf and the Perſons abovenamed, and before Walter Fitz-Robert, Hugh de Creſſi and Robert Mantell (d); In the 25th year, there were Pleas in the Kings Court before William

De

William Fitz-Ralf and his Companions (e), And before Roger Fitz-Reinfrey and his Companions (f). In the 26th year, there were Pleas in the Kings Court before William Fitz-Ralf and his Companions (g), And before Walter Fitz-Robert and his Companions (h). From hence I ſuppoſe it appears, That there were many perſons who uſually Sat and Acted as Juſticiers in the Kings Court; in the ſeveral years above referrd-to. But I ſhall ſay no more here, either of the High Juſticier or of the other Great Officers of the Kings Court; having already ſpoken concerning Them in the Second Chapter.

VI. As to the Fourth point of enquiry, viz. The Pleas or Cauſes appropriated or reſerved to the Kings Court: It is probable, that for a conſiderable time after the Conqueſt, the ancient Angloſaxonick uſage of determining Cauſes Below within the ſeveral Counties, might in ſome meaſure continue, And that therefore there were not Then many Cauſes brought into the Kings Court. Nor was there occaſion for being at the Expenſe and Trouble of applying to the Kings Court, whilſt men could have Juſtice done them at their Own homes. But in regard the Norman Lords, who were poſſeſſed of Large Seigneuries and Great Power, carried it with ſo High a hand towards their Vaſſals and neighbours, that the latter could not have Right done them in the ordinary way, they were conſtrained to ſeek for Juſtice in the Kings Court. And this was likewiſe often found neceſſary to be done, when contentions aroſe between the Great Lords themſelves (i). In thoſe ages men dealt very much in Power. And Then, the King was the Great Aſylum to protect the Weaker againſt the invaſions of the more Mighty. So that in time, it became frequent and uſual for men to bring their Plaints to the Kings Court; where, they found, they could have Juſtice when they could have it no where elſe, or Better juſtice and relief than they could have elſewhere. And as the Kings Court was Open, according to the uſage of thoſe times, to ſuch Complainants as choſe to reſort thither: So it is likely that Plaints were the more readily received There, becauſe from Them there accrued a conſiderable Revenue (by Fines) to the Crown. The Pleas then that were uſually diſcuſſed in the Kings Court, were ſuch as were brought thither by the expreſs appointment of the King, or of the Juſticiers of his Court on His behalf. Tis probable indeed, that ſome Pleas might be thought proper for the cogniſance of this Judicature, in reſpect of the Greatneſs or Weight of them (k). But it ſhould ſeem, that Few or rather None were brought thither or received there without Permiſſion. For though the Kings Court was Open to Complainants who deſired to reſort to It (as is hinted above); Yet That is to be underſtood with this reſtriction (according to the uſage of thoſe times), namely, that the Party ſhould make Fine to the Crown to have his Plea in the Kings Court: And in That, a Permiſſion was implyed, or (if you pleaſe) expreſſed.

It is manifeſt, that ſome Pleas were reſerved to this Judicature by the ſpecial command or appointment of the King or the Juſticiers of his Court. Of This I will ſet down ſome inſtances. In the 15th year of K. Henry II, Edward de Suthwerk Fined to the Crown in xl s, That he might ſue Roger Fitz-Edward in cher[ia] & guerrynæ, & nulla mulier in partibus illis dotata eſt de ſolo, nec etiam debet habere Caſtrum in dotem, prædicta Comitiſſa habet in dotem in Husk ad valenciam terciæ partis prædictarum terrarum & tenementorum, & etiam Caſtrum de Husk &c; To the Earls Damage, Twenty thouſand pounds.

Et Comitiſſa per attornatum ſuum venit & defendit vim &c quando &c. Et dicit, quod ipſa non debet ei hic inde ad hoc breve reſpondere; quia dicit, quod terra ſua de Husk eſt adeo libera & de tali libertate, quod breve Domini Regis ibi non currit, nec aliquod aliud breve niſi breve ipſius Comitis. Et petit judicium, ſi debeat hic reſpondere de prædictis terris & tenementis, extra Comitatum ubi breve Domini Regis non currit, nec de aliquo placito debet extra placitare.

Et Comes dicit, that his Father Earl Richard died ſeiſed of all the ſaid Lands; and that after his death, the King ſeized the ſame into his hands, by reaſon that Earl Gilbert was then under age and the Kings Ward, &c.

Et Comitiſſa per attornatum ſuum primo die ſecundo & tercio pluries quæſita, ſi velit aliud dicere, dicit quod non, ad præſens.

Et Comes per attornatum ſuum petit judicium de prædicta Comitiſſa tanquam de indefenſa; deſicut quamplures alij de partibus illis actenus in Curia Domini Regis reſponderunt coram ipſo Domino Rege.

Et Comitiſſa per attornatos ſuos venit & dicit, quod non videtur ei quod debeat aliud dicere, nec hic reſpondere de terris quæ ſunt ultra Wayam, & infra libertatem ſuam, ſicut prædictum eſt; unde petit judicium ſi debeat aliud dicere.

Et Comes per attornatum ſuum venit & dicit, quod Dominus Rex & nullus alius adhuc eſt in poteſtate exhibendi juſticiam inter eos de prædicta dote, & ſicut ei aſſignavit dotem ſuam in partibus illis alio modo quam habere debeat, & poteſtas brevis terræ illius adhuc eſt in manu ſua ſicut fuit quando dos ejus fuit ei aſſignata; & poteſtas ejus eſt ad exibendum tam Comiti quam Comitiſſæ juſticiam de dote prædicta quæ eidem Comitiſſæ aſſignata fuit dum idem Comes fuit infra ætatem; petit judicium, ſi debeat aliud dicere vel non, ad defenſionem ſuam. Et quia Dominus Rex eſt in ſeyſina de conſimilibus placitis in Wallia de pluribus Baronibus ſuis, ſicut bene liquet Curiæ, dictum eſt prædictis attornatis, quod dicant aliud, ſi velint, ad defenſionem ſuam.

Et Comitiſſa per attornatos ſuos venit & dicit, quod bene videtur eis, quod ſatis dixerunt, & aliud dicere nolunt quam prius dixerunt.

Et Comes venit, & ſicut prius petit judicium de inculpatione ſua, & reſponſione prædictæ Comitiſſæ per attornatos ſuos, ſicut de illa quæ indefenſa eſt. Poſtea recitata fuit iſta loquela coram Domino Rege & Conſilio ſuo, ipſo Domino Rege ſedente pro tribunali apud Weſtmonaſterium. *Judgment was given againſt the Counteſs. in the Kings Court againſt Roger Buche for one Knights Fee in Walton (u). The Briour and Convent of Merton had a Plea in the Kings Court againſt William de Turevill and his wiſe for the Town of Taplaw (w). In the reign of K. John, there were divers Pleas in the Kings Court: As, in the caſe of the Abbot of Whitby, concerning Liberties of the Burgh of Whitby (x); Of John de Erley for Land (y); of Hawiſe de St. Quintin for Land (z); of Henry the Clerk for a Miſdemeaner (a); of the Abbot of Robertsbridg for Land (b); Of Herbert de St. Quintin for Land (c); and of many others. From theſe inſtances, and many more ſpecifyed elſewhere in this Volume, it may in ſome meaſure appear, what kind of Pleas were uſually diſcuſſed and judged in the Kings Court, in the reigns of KKK. Henry II, Richard I, and John.

In the Realm or Great Seigneurie of England, there were many ſubordinate Seigneuries, to wit Honours and Baronies, that reſembled the Royal Seigneurie in ſeveral particulars. However there was one eſſential difference: namely, that the Royal Seigneurie was holden of no Superiour Lord: for which reaſon the King of England is commonly ſaid to hold his Crown of God Almighty: Whereas Honours and Baronies, whilſt they were poſſeſſed in Tenure, were holden immediately of the King. In this reſpect the Royal Seigneurie neurie and the ſubordinate ones differed. But in ſundry other reſpects they agreed. The ancient ſtate of the Kings Court hath been ſhewn in This and the two foregoing Chapters. In like manner, a Baron or Great Lord of the Realm had his Court; particularly the Capital Seat of his Barony. He had Officers of his Court or Houſe; his Steward or Dapifer, his Butler or Pincerna, Marſhall, Chamberlain, and others; ſome of theſe or other offices in the Houſes of Biſhops, Abbots, and Great Barons, being alſo Hereditary. In affairs of weight or common concernment, he conſulted with his chief officers and other peers or convaſſalls of his Seigneurie; and Did many ſolemn acts, of Donation, inveſtiture, and of other kinds, in their preſence. He had ordinarily within his Fee, the power of Judicature, and a Court or Courts for miniſtring juſtice to his vaſſals or Men. All this in ſubordination to the King and the Curia Regis. So it was in Normandy. For example. A Plea was moved between the Abbot of St. Peter of Jumieges, and the Abbot of St. Maximin of Orleans in the Court of Robert de Beleſme [Lord of the Fee]. The parties litigant came before Robert in his Hall at Beleſme, to hear the Judgment of his Court. And There, Judgment was given in the ſaid Plea, on the Sonday next after Whitſontide in the year 1086 (d). Roger Earl of Shrewsbury ſealed or ratified a Charter before his Proceres (e). The ſame Earl called-together Guarin le Viſcount, Picot de Say, and his other Norman Proceres (f). Peter de Maulay made and ratified a charter of Donation before his Proceres (g). Goiffred Earl of Moreton in Normandy convoked the Proceres or Optimates that were ſubject to his Earldom (h). In England, there are many inſtances of acts Done by Great Lords in the preſence of their Dapifers, Chamberlains, Mareſchalls, and other Officers of their Houſes, and of the vaſſals of their Seigneuries (i); which inſtances need not be here repeated. In or about the reign of K. Hen. I. or Stephen, Geoffrey Earl of Eſſex by his writ commanded his Provoſt Aelard de Guerris, to Do juſtice [in his Court] to the Canons of St. Martin in London. The writ imports, that the ſaid Earl, being deſirous to make ſatisfaction to the ſeveral Churches which he had wronged, and particularly to the Canons of St. Martin in London, commands Aelard de Guerris [his Provoſt], to make due reſtitution to them accordingly; and to cauſe an inquiſition to be taken by the Neighbourhood and the Good men of the Province, whether the Five acres of Land, claimed by the Canons, and whereof Walter Long diſſeiſed them, belonged rightfully to them, and if it was found that the ſame did belong to them, to give them ſeiſin thereof (k). In the reign of K. Henry I, John Biſhop of Bathe held his Court within his Barony, upon the feaſt day of St. Peter and St. Paul. It was a Court holden as well for celebrating of the Feſtival, as alſo for Judicature. The manner of holding this Court is deſcribed ſo largely and particularly in a Manuſcript-book (now remaining in the Library of Benet-College in Cambridg) written, as I take it, in a coeval hand, that the whole tranſaction ſeemeth worthy to be inſerted here. In the year Mcxxi, John Biſhop of Bathe reſiding in his Court of Bathe; his Friends and Barons who came thither to celebrate the feſtival of SS. Peter and Paul, being alſo preſent There; a Writ under the Royal Seal was delivered to the Biſhop, running thus, “ William the Kings Son to John Biſhop of Bathe, greeting. I command “ you to give ſaiſin juſtly to Modbert, of the Land which Grenta of Stoke lately “ held, and the inheritance whereof he gave in his life-time to Modbert; Wit- “ neſs the Biſhop of Salesbury. When the Biſhop of Bathe had read this Letter or Writ, he ſpoke to the aſſembly thus: “ I am content to do as my Lord the “ Kings Son commandeth, if it be according to juſtice. But you, Sirs, who “ are now met together at this ſolemn Court to keep the feſtival, do you, I “ pray, conſider and diſcuſs the cauſe. Then the Lord Priour of Bathe, having conſulted with his Brothers, ſpoke thus: “ The King and his Son do “ not command any thing to be done in this caſe, but what is rightful. It “ is referred to you, who are men diſcreet and skilful in the Law, to diſcuſs “ the affair. I will ſtate it to you, that you may the better diſcern the “ truth. It is certain, that the Land now in controverſy was in very ancient “ time given to the Monks of Bathe as their own proper and free poſſeſſion, “ and hath not ſince been changed by any King, Biſhop, or Abbot, into “ Military tenure. Grenta himſelf, whoſe inheritance it is pretended to be, “ confeſſed This a little before the time of his death. For when in the pre- “ ſence of my ſelf and others he put his houſe in order, and was admoniſhed “ by his domeſticks to name by his Teſtament the perſon that ſhould inherit “ his eſtate, Then, I ſay, he Declared that Stoke was the Land of the Monks “ of Bathe; that he held it only during his life, by permiſſion; and that he “ then left both it and himſelf to the Monks. This was his Teſtament, theſe “ his Laſt words. And a few days after he died. I ſee ſome perſons here, “ who were preſent and heard all that I now relate. Hereupon ſome lawful witneſſes ſtood up in the aſſembly, and confirmed all that the Priour had ſaid. Then was read an ancient charter of Donation, made by Kenulf a King of the Saxons, ſigned with his own hand, and atteſted by the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, and other Great men, who, as the charter imported, ratified it with the ſign of the Croſs, and denounced a Curſe on ſuch Perſons as ſhould dare to violate or pervert the Donation. This charter was deemed a full confirmation of the right and title of the Monks. But the Claimant Modbert, and ſome others gainſayed. Modbert had taken the daughter of Grenta to wife; and was his adopted ſon. He alleged, that Grenta held the Land in queſtion, not by Rent but by hereditary right. Whilſt the cauſe continued under debate, the Biſhop ſpoke thus to the aſſembly: “ In regard the Day paſſeth away, and “ we have ſome other affairs to diſpatch here, I think it is expedient that ſome “ of you, who are equal and impartial, do weigh diligently how this cauſe “ may be determined. Then ſome perſons of the company, who were graveſt and moſt knowing in the Law, withdrawing from the croud, conſidered maturely and diſcreetly all things that had been alleged. When they came-in again, one on behalf of the reſt ſpake thus: “ We have conſidered the whole “ circumſtance of this cauſe, and do award, That the perſon who claimeth “ as heir, do fully prove what he hath before aſſerted, either by two witneſ- “ ſes at the leaſt, who are to be of the family of the Prioury, are to be law- “ ful and free men, are to be named this day, and to be produced the eighth “ day after, or elſe by chirographum duly ſigned and atteſted: And that if he “ faileth therein, he ſhall be for ever excluded. The whole aſſembly agreed, that the award was meet and juſt. The Claimant had nothing to ſay for himſelf. The Court roſe and departed. Theſe things were done in the year Mcxxi. Preſided therein, John Biſhop of Bathe, and Maurice a Biſhop of Ireland: were preſent three Archdeacons, Jobel of Salesbiry, Girbert of Bathe, and Arald, with divers Clerks and Chaplains, Atſeline Hoſe and five others: were witneſſes, Patrick de Chaurz, and eleven others (l). Præcipio ut ſaiſias Modbertum juſte de terra quam tenuit Grenta de Stoca, ſicut hæreditavit eum in vita ſua. Teſte Epiſcopo Salesberienſi. Lectis litteris, Epiſcopus dixit. Sicuti per has mihi litteras a filio Domini mei mandatum eſt fieri, ſi tamen juſtum eſt acquieſco. Vos autem, vos Amici mei & Domini, qui propter Apoſtòlicum diem ſolenniter huic adeſtis Curiæ, quid in hoc juſtius ſit diſcutere precor dignemini. Ad hæc domnus Prior, habito cum fratribus conſilio, data diligenter ab omnibus audientia, ſic locutus eſt: Quoniam quidem nonniſi juſte aliquid hic fieri neque Rex neq; Regis filius præcipit, & vobis tanquam viris bonis & juris peritis utrum juſtum ſit quod præcipitur diſcutere committitur, quomodo ſe rei veritas habeat manifeſtius videbitis, ſi me breviter locuturum patienter audire velitis. Conſtat quidem quod terra hæc de qua nobis hic ſermo oritur, a diebus antiquis hujus ſanctæ domus Domini Fratribus in uſus proprios & poſſeſſionem liberam data, nullius unquam mutatione Regis, Epiſcopi, vel Abbatis, in jus militare tranſijt. Quod ipſe Grenta de cujus hæreditate nunc agitur moriens etiam non tacuit. Nam cum, nobis præſentibus, domui ſuæ diſponeret, & rei peculiaris partes nominatim divideret, ſecreto monitus a domeſticis ut teſtamentum faciens publice ſibi hæredem ſubſtitueret. Ait, Hæc eſt hæreditas ſervorum Domini; quam vice Stipendij non hæreditatis lege quoad viverem tenere permiſſus, ipſum me cum terra, Fratribus quibus id juris eſt, nunc moriens relinquo. Hoc eſt quod fecit teſtamentum: & hæc verba illius noviſſima. Poſt quæ vexatus per dies aliquot, monachus diem obijt. Præſentes hic etiam quoſdam video, quos omnibus his interfuiſſe ſimul & audiſſe gratiſſimum habeo. Surgentes ilico teſtes quidam legitimi ſtantes in medio conſtanter aſſerebant, ſe modis omnibus probaturos, eum ne uno quidem verbo veritatis præteriſſe veſtigia. Carta nichilominus donationis antiquæ mox lecta eſt; quam Kenulfus Rex Saxonum ſcribi præcepit & manu propria ſignavit, conſentientibus & annuentibus Archiepiſcopis, Epiſcopis, Abbatibus, & omnium dignitatum primatibus ac miniſtris. Et ut ibi legebatur, eandem cartam ſigno Crucis notantes imprecati ſunt in illum iram furoris Domini, quicunq; tam liberale Chriſtianiſſimi Regis donativum quocunq; deteriorationis genere pervertere præſumpſiſſet in æternum. Lectis igitur & expoſitis quæ carta continere videbatur, ratiocinationis jam dictæ veritas ſolidata eſt; alijs bona laudantibus, alijs ex adverſo tumultuantibus; illo præcipue occlamante, qui ſe non minus procaciter quam mendaciter hæredem contendebat eſſe; juſtiſſime; quippe qui filiam defuncti conjugem habuerit; adoptatus ab ejuſdem patre dum viveret in filium; patrem vero non ſtipendiarie, ut oppoſitum eſt, ſed libere potius & hæreditarie terram de qua quæſtio erat tenuiſſe. Cunq; diutius varijs ab alterutrum contradictionibus cauſa protenderetur, dixit Epiſcopus. Quia dies præterit, & ad nos alia ſpectant negotia, placet ut vos quos nec advocatos nec partium fautores eſſe cognovimus cauſam diligenter perpendentes quo termino ſopiri debeat judicetis. Secedentes igitur a turba qui majores natu qui juris peritiores eſſe videbantur, ſingula juxta quod audierant ſubtiliter & diſcrete penſantes cauſam dijudicaverunt. Quibus iterum introgreſſis, ſic unius ore pro omnibus relatum eſt. Conſiderantes, inquit, totam hujus cauſæ circumſtantiam hoc diffinientes ſtatuimus, ut hæredem jure qui ſe nominat id quod in aſſertionem ſuæ cauſæ paulo ante declamavit, teſtibus ad minus duobus de eccleſiæ familia liberis & legitimis hodie nominatis & octavo productis, vel cyrographo credibiliter ſignato, irrefragabiliter probet. Richard de Hanum was to be juſticed in the Court of his Lord the Priour of Bathe (n). Alan ſon of Odo recovered Land in the Court of the Biſhop of Norwich (o). Reginald de Warenne was enjoined to Do juſtice [in his Court] to Robert de Mandevill (p). Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury was accuſed for not doing Right in his Court to John the Kings Mareſchall, touching certain Land. The Archbiſhop pleaded, that his Juſtices had done Right to the Mareſchall, as the Law required (q). Of inferiour Seigneuries, hitherto in brief.

VII. Beſides Pleas, there was ſometimes other buſineſs tranſacted between Parties in the Curia Regis. Many Final Concords were made There, and chirographs thereof mutually ſealed. Theſe were moſt commonly made upon Pleas moved. But Feoffments, Releaſes, and Conventions of divers kinds (not grounded upon Pleas, for ought that appeareth) were likewiſe made There, eſpecially in caſes that required more than ordinary ſolemnity. Several inſtances of things of theſe kinds may be ſeen in printed books. A few others may be added here. In the 28th year of K. Henry II, a Final Concord was made in the Kings Court at Weſtminſter, before R. Biſhop of Winton and G. Biſhop of Ely, Ranulf de Glanvill Chief Juſticier, Richard the Treaſurer, G. de Luci, *R. year of K. Henry III, William Briewerr came into the Kings Court before the King and his Great Men, and there granted to Joſcelin Biſhop of Bathe and Wells, the Advouſon of the Church of Melverton in Frankalmoigne; And by his Gloves, gave the Biſhop ſeiſin of the ſaid Advouſon (w). When conventions were made between the Great men, it was of importance to have them made in the Kings Court. For example. In the reign of K. Henry II, a Convention was had between Stutevill and Mubrai touching a Barony. But becauſe the Convention was not made in Curia Regis, and confirmed by the Kings authority, Stutevill demanded the Barony again in K. Johns Court (x). The matter in debate between them was afterwards ſettled conſilio regni & voluntate Regis [Johannis] (y).

It was alſo Uſual to make Fines and Oblatas in the Kings Court. By Oblatas we may underſtand Voluntary Fines. The Dialogue explains it ſo (z). And his explication is confirmed by Records. Of Fines and Oblatas made to the King either in his Palace and Court, or before his Chief Juſticier, Chancellour, or other Juſticiers of his Court, many inſtances may be ſeen in this Volume. The Oblatas are commonly placed in the Great Rolls under the title, De Oblatis, Nova Oblata &c. For example. Salomon of Ipſwich profered or made his Oblatum of one mark out of every vij marks which he ſhould recover againſt Hugh de la Hoſe. Robert de Hardre profered a mark of gold, To have a Recognition for ij carucates of Land in Hadley. Benet ſon of Richard proferd a mark, That a Convention made in Henry de Eſſex's Court might be recorded in the Kings Court. Walter ſon of Nicolas gave xl s, To have a Recognition of Mortdanceſtour. William de Witherdal profered x l, for the Relief of iij Knights Fees. Herlewin the Prieſt proferd ix l. for a Default (a). William de

In the ſame year, there were Oblatums made to the King: Adam ſon of Elyſant profered xx marks, For recovering his Debt againſt Earl David; Reginald Bradfot xiij l & xiiij d, for an Amercement of his Fathers; The County of Copland (except the Lands of Reginald de Luci) ij marks, For a Concealment; And others profered other ſumms according to their reſpective caſes (c).

VIII. As the Pleas brought into the Kings Court were uſually brought thither by licence of the King or his Juſticiers; So, it was not-unfrequent for the King to grant to ſome perſons a Privilege, that they ſhould not be impleaded in any other Court or Place, except before Him or his Chief Juſticier. For example. K. Henry II. took the Monks of the H. Trinity of Canterbury into his protection; and commanded that they ſhould not be impleaded for any of their lands, except in His preſence (d). In like manner, he took the Monks of Bordeſley into his protection (e). In the reign of the ſame King, the Priour of Coventry fined in xx marks, That he might not Plead [or, be Impleaded] for his Lands, except before the King (f); And ſeveral others Fined for the like Protection or privilege: As, Walter de Baſchiervill (g); Simon ſon of Nicolas (h), Ailward ſon of Seric (i); Geoffrey le Blund (k), and Robert ſon of Buiſtard (l). In the reigns of KK. John and Henry III, the like appointment was made, or privilege granted to ſeveral perſons, That they ſhould not be impleaded unleſs before the King, Or before the King or his Chief Juſticier: To wit, To William de Wrotebam (m), To Robert de Aimoueſdal (n), To Jerverd, Idthel, Osbert Arkein, Maddoc,

(e) Et prohibemus, ne ponantur in placitum before the King, to Find, What Patron in time of Peace preſented the laſt Parſon, who lately died, to the Church of Briſeley, which is now void; the advouſon whereof William de Stuttevill claimeth againſt Pandulf Biſhop Elect of Norwich. Pandulf came by his Attorney, and ſaith that an Aſſize ought not to be taken in the ſaid cauſe. Becauſe his Predeceſſour Biſhop John, of whom mention is made in the writ, had a Charter of K. John, whereby the King granted, that the Biſhop and his ſucceſſours ſhould not be impleaded for any matter, except in the preſence of the King or his Chief Juſticier. Which Charter is enrolled at the Exchequer. Wherefore, in regard neither the King nor his Chief Juſticier are now preſent, he refuſeth to anſwer, unleſs the Court ſhall award it. Day was given to the parties to hear their Judgment. And the ſame Day was prefixed to the Eleven Recognitours of the Aſſize who now appeared in Court (f). In the 25th year of K. Henry III, Richard Scroty appealed Richard Muncelyn and others in the Kings Court, for a Battery and Wounding; and offered Combat. Richard Muncelyn came and traverſed the Appeal, and put himſelf upon the Combat. But foraſmuch as the King was Abſent, and there were but few of the Kings Council now in Court, they who were preſent refuſed to adjudge a Combat or to give any other award, in the abſence of the King or of the greater part of his Council. Wherefore the parties were adjourned (g).

This piece of Grandeur or power exerciſed by the Crown, to wit in limiting Pleas to the Kings Own Audience, was, as it ſeemeth, imitated by ſome Great Lords within their Seigneuries. Thus, William de Albini Brito, in his Charter or Writ hereunder cited, commanded his Vaſſals of Sabridgeworth, That if any Plaint or Quarrel aroſe amongſt the Monks of Sabridgeworth, it ſhould be ſtayed, untill it could be brought before Him (h).

It is to be underſtood, that the Kings Court was a ſure Aſylum for the oppreſſed. In the Greatneſs of this Court conſiſted the Subjects ſecurity. And the more Full and Solemn this Court was, the greater was the injured Complainants ſafety and aſſurance of relief. When the Sovereign, or his Vicegerent the the Chief Juſticier, ſat in Judicature, Then the Kings Court was Full and Solemn: When They were Abſent, it was more Private and Unſolemn. In Their Preſence, eſpecially the Sovereigns, no place was left for Injuſtice or Wrong. Their Judgment was Venerable; and not to be ſuſpected of partiality or errour. So that it was not a light privilege, to have ones Cauſe determined in the preſence of the King the ſupreme Judge, or of the Chief Juſticier, who was next to the King in Judicial power. That privilege was uſually, and moſt properly, annexed to important cauſes. And, if I obſerve right, it was generally granted either to perſons of high rank, or to ſuch as wanted effectual protection againſt ſome powerful oppreſſour.

IX. It was alſo uſual in Normandy, to grant the like protection or privilege, that men ſhould not be impleaded in any Court There, ſave before the King or his Chief Juſticier. It hath been ſhewn above, in the IVth ſection of this Chapter, that this kind of privilege was granted by K. Henry I. to the Abbeys of Ouſche and Fontanelle in Normandy. K. John (anno regni 2°) granted the like privilege to Robert de Liſieux and his heirs: We command, ſaith the Charter, that the ſaid Robert and his heirs be not impleaded for any thing, except before Us and our Heirs or our Chief Juſticier (i). The ſame King, by Writ patent directed to the Steward of Normandy the Mayor of Rouen and others, ordered that Ralf de Kailli ſhould not be impleaded for any tenement which he held, unleſs before Himſelf, till the King ſhould return from England into Normandy (k).

X. It may be proper here to ſpeak briefly concerning the Courts of the Ancient Juſtices Errant or Itinerant. For though many kinds of Pleas were wont to be brought into the Curia Regis, yet many others were determined before the Juſtices Itinerant in their reſpective Iters. It hath been before obſerved, that the whole Juſtice of the Realm was the Kings, and to be adminiſtred by Him. But it being too great a burden and avocation, for any Prince to Do This in Perſon, it was found neceſſary that juſtice ſhould be adminiſtred by his Juſticier and other Barons and Great men of his Court, in His ſtead: Which Court of Judicature was the Curia Regis we have been ſpeaking of in this Chapter. Again; When the Pleas brought into the Curia Regis became very numerous, it was (as one may gueſs) found neceſſary, as well in Eaſe of the People, as likewiſe in Aid of the Curia Regis, to appoint certain Juſticiers to go Iters through the Realm, to determine Pleas or Cauſes within the ſeveral Counties; ſaving to the Subject their Reſort to the Curia Regis. Theſe Juſtices Itinerant were veſted with great Power and Authority. They determined mined Pleas of the Crown and Common Pleas, in like manner as did the Juſtices of the Curia Regis. They aſſeſſed Tallages and Aids; And admitted men to make Conventions, Fines, and Oblata's, in their ſeveral Iters. In the 22th year of K. Henry II, they were Sworn, ſaith Roger de Hoveden (l), to execute certain Aſſizes or Rules given them in charge, which are there by him particularly ſet forth. And, probably, they had the greater Credit amongſt the People, becauſe the ſame perſons who were Juſtices in the Curia Regis, were alſo (amongſt others) wont to be Juſtices Itinerant. Tis not eaſy to diſcover, at What time the Iters of theſe Juſtices Begann or were Firſt inſtituted. Roger de Houedene tells us, K. Henry II. (anno Regni 22), by the advice of the young King his Son, and of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, and Barons, Divided the Realm into Six Parts, and ſent-out Three Juſtices Itinerant to diſtribute Juſtice in the ſeveral Circuits or Diviſions allotted to them (m). He names There the Juſtices Itinerant, and the Diviſions for which they were appointed. Again; That Hiſtorian writes, That K. Henry II. (anno Regni 25°) Divided the Realm into Four parts, and appointed Juſtices (whom the Hiſtorian names, together with the Counties allotted to them) to go their Iters in each Diviſion (n). But they who inferr from the words of this Hiſtorian, that Iters were Firſt inſtituted in the One or Other of Thoſe years, may fall into an Errour through inadvertency. It may be true, for ought that I know, that K. Hen. II. did in each of thoſe years appoint New Circuits or Diviſions, Or perhaps New Juſtices Itinerant. But it is credible, that there were Iters both for Criminal and Common Pleas, and likewiſe for Pleas of the Foreſt, before the 22th year of K. Henry II: And that they continued, for ſeveral years afterwards, in a Courſe or Method not-unlike to That which they were in at That time. Concerning which matter I ſhall, by and by in this Section, produce ſome precedents or Memoires out of the Great Rolls of the Exchequer. For the right underſtanding of which Memoires, This Rule is to be obſerved. The ſeveral Heads or Titles containing the Juſtices names, are (as will appear anon) De placitis of Such perſons, and again De placitis of Such, Or de Aſſiſa of Such, or laſtly Nova placita & Novæ Conventiones per Such perſons: Theſe Heads I have all along ſet down in the ſame order wherein they ſtand in the reſpective Great Rolls. Tis therefore (I ſay) to be underſtood, That the Firſt De Placitis contains the names of the Juſtices of a Paſt year; That the Second De Placitis contains the names of the Juſtices of a year ſubſequent to the other next before it; And that the Laſt Head (which is commonly Nova Placita & Novæ Conventiones) contains the names of the Juſtices for the year which the Great Roll cited is of. I proceed to the Citations.

In the 20th year of K. Henry II, there were Juſtices Errant for Pleas of the Crown and Common Pleas, And for impoſing or ſetting the Aſſiſes or Tallages upon the Kings Demeans: To wit, In Surrey, The Archdeacon of Poictiers, Guy the Dean, Reginald de Warenne; Gervaſe de Cornhill (o): In Dorſet and Somerſet, Alured de Lincoln and Walter de St. Quintin (p): In Glouceſterſhire, John Cumin and his Companions; Ralf Fitz-Stephen, Philipp Fitz-Erniſe, and Alexander le Boteler (q): In Wiltſhire, Reginald de Warenne and John Cumin; Richard de Wilton and Robert de Luci (r): In Norfolk and Suffolk, Robert Mantell, Adam de Gernemue,

CHAP. III.

Michael Belet, Richard de Pech, and their Companions (o): In Hantſhire, the Juſtices for this 26th year are not named (p): In the Counties of Notingham and Derby, Hugh de Gundevill and his Companions; Rannulf de Glanvill, Godfrey de Luci, and their Companions (q): In Northumberland, Rannulf de Glanvill and his Companions (r): In Kent, Hugh Murdac, Richard de Pech, and Michael Belet, and their Companions (s): In Middleſex, Michael Belet, Richard de Pek, and their Companions (t). In this year Thomas Fitz-Bernard was Juſtice of the Foreſt (u).

Moreover, there is another Hiſtorian, to wit, Gervaſe of Canterbury, who ſays, that K. Henry II. (A.D. 1170, and anno Regni 16.), by advice of his Great Men appointed Abbats and Clerks, Earls and Knights, to go Circuits through the Realm; Giving them a Form to act-by. For Kent, Surrey, Middleſex, Berkſhire, Oxfordſhire, Bukinghamſhire, and Bedfordſhire (ſays he) were appointed, The Abbot of St. Auſtin of Canterbury, the Abbot of Chertſy, the Earl of Clare, William de Abrancis, Maneſier de Dammartin, Gerold Fitz-Ralf, Gilbert de Pinkeni, William ſon of Helt, William Fitz-Niel, William Fitz-Martin, Ralf del Hoſpital and Ralf de Dene. And that in like manner, Inquiſitours were ſent into the other Counties of England. And then he ſets forth the Articles upon which they were to Enquire; wherein theſe Inquiſitours are ſtyled Barones Errantes (w). But if I take this matter Right, the perſons here named by Gervaſe were not Juſtices Errant (of the kind we are here ſpeaking of), but Commiſſioners ſent out by the King to Enquire into Miſdemeaners and Abuſes committed by Sheriffs and Bailiffs, Stewards of Great Lords, Foreſters, and other Officers. The Articles upon which they were to Enquire (which are rehearſed by Gervaſe and may be viewed by the Reader at his Leiſure) make this appear probable. And we find by Records, that about the time mentioned here by Gervaſe, Common or General Inquiſitions were taken upon the Sheriffs of England [whereby their Behaviour in their office was enquired into; and They who appeared to be Faulty, were puniſhed by Fines or otherwiſe]. At the time of this Common Inquiſition, an Enqueſt was taken upon William Baſſet Sheriff of the Counties of Warwick and Leiceſter; and thereupon he was Fined C marks (x);

This Enqueſt was taken before Walter de Liſle and Euſtace Fitz-Stephen (y). It may be objected, that theſe Inquiſitours are ſtyled, in the Articles, Barones Errantes; Which may ſeem to import, that they were either Barons [of the Exchequer] or Juſticiers. In truth, it does not appear to me, that they were Barons of the Exchequer: But Juſticiers they might be; if by Juſticiers we underſtand Commiſſioners at large, and not Juſticiers Errant for holding of Pleas. For in ancient time, Commiſſioners of divers kinds were ſtyled Juſticiæ or Juſticiarij, and Barones. Thus in the Reign of K. William I, the perſons commiſſioned to make the General Survey of England [contained in Domeſday-book], are ſtyled Juſtices in an Ancient Chronicle hereunder cited (z). And in an ancient book containing a breviary of the towns and lands belonging to the Abbey of Ely, the perſons who took the Inquiſitions which are ſet-down in Domeſday-book relating to That Abbey, are ſtyled Barones Regis (a). In the 5th year of K. Richard I, the Kings Commiſſioners who reſided in his Army at Windſore, to diſpatch his Buſineſs there, are ſtyled Juſticiæ Domini Regis (b). In the reign of the ſame K. R. I, the perſons who had the Command of the Kings Navy are ſtyled Juſticiarij Navigij Regis (c). In the reign of K. John, the Kings Commiſſioners appointed to aſſeſs and levy the Aid mentioned in the Patent-Roll hereunder cited, are called Juſticiarij (d): And the Commiſſioners appointed to aſſeſs or levy the Kings Tertiadecima, are called Juſticiarij Terciædecimæ (e). Tis true, Several of theſe perſons named by Gervaſe are found in the Records Coeval to the time he mentions: viz. Maneſer de Dammartin (f), Gilbert de Pinkenni (g) William Fitz-Martin (h) &c. And perhaps ſome of them might be employed in the Kings Service; as it ſeems William Fitz-Martin was. A very Worthy and Induſtrious Antiquary took theſe Inquiſitours for Juſtices Itinerant, and has ſet them down in his Catalogue as the moſt Ancient Juſtices Itinerant that he had met with (i). But (I think) That is Wrong Both ways.

ways. For I ſuppoſe it will appear, before I have finiſhed this Section, Firſt, that They were only Inquiſitours, and that ſome Others were Juſtices Itinerant in the 16th year of K. Henry II, for the Counties which Gervaſe mentions: And Next, that the Iters were not Firſt inſtituted in the 16th year of K. Hen. II., or (if you pleaſe) that there were Iters for Pleas of the Crown and Common Pleas before That time. As to the Firſt point; I have already ſaid ſomething to render it probable, that the Perſons named above by Gervaſe were only Inquiſitours. Now I will ſhew you, Who were Juſtices Itinerant, in the 16th year of K. H. II, for the Counties mentioned by Gervaſe, and the other Counties of the Realm. To prevent fallacy or miſtake in point of Time, I will cite the Records of the 16th year and likewiſe of the 15th and 17th years of That King. And if the perſons named by Gervaſe are not found in the Liſt I am going to produce for Thoſe years, it may be ſafely concluded they were not Juſtices Itinerant for Pleas.

In the 15th year of K. Henry II, : Guy the Dean, William Baſſet, and Reginald de Warenne, were Juſtices Errant in Lincolnſhire (k); In Warwick and Leiceſter ſhires, the Archdeacon of Poictiers, Guy the Dean [of Waltham], Reginald de Warenne, and William Baſſet (l); In Suſſex the ſame Perſons (m); And in the Counties of Cambridg and Huntendon, the ſame perſons (n); In Surrey, London and Middleſex, the Archdeacon of Poictiers, Guy the Dean, and Reginald de Warenne (o); In Yorkſhire, Earl Geoffrey and Richard de Luci (p); In Northamptonſhire, the ſame perſons (q); In Staffordſhire, Guy the Dean and William Baſſet (r); In Glouceſterſhire, the ſame perſons (s); In Norfolk and Suffolk, the Archdeacon of Poictiers, Guy the Dean, Reginald de Warenne, and William Baſſet (t); In Dorſet and Somerſet, Reginald de Warenne and John Cumin (u); The ſame Perſons in Wiltſhire (w); In Devonſhire the ſame Perſons, with Gervaſe de Cornhell (x); Juſtice of the Foreſt this year, in All or Moſt of the Counties in England, Alan de Nevill (y).

In the 16th year of K. Henry II, the perſons hereunder named were Juſtices Errant in the ſeveral Counties: To wit, In Norfolk and Suffolk, The Archdeacon of Poictiers, Guy the Dean [of Waltham], Reginald de Warenn, William Baſſet; Oger the Dapifer (z): In Middleſex, The Archdeacon of Poictiers, Reginald de Warenn, and Guy the Dean (a): In Northamptonſhire, The Archdeacon of Poictiers (b); In Cumberland, William Baſſet, Alan de Nevill Junior; Robert de Stutevill and Hugh de Morevill (c): In Yorkſhire, Alan de Nevill Junior and William

I. IN the foregoing Chapters we have viewed the Court of the Kings of England in its Ancient State: We have taken notice of the Principal Officers or Miniſters There, and of ſome of Their Functions: We have conſidered the Judicature of the Kings Court, and the manner of diſtributing juſtice Therein: Let us now proceed to ſpeak of the Kings Chamber of Accompts, His Court and Repoſitory of Revenue, that is to ſay, of his Exchequer, during the Period above mentioned. Next after the Kings Court, His Exchequer comes naturally to be conſidered. For his Exchequer was anciently a Member of his Court, and was wont to be held in his Palace. It was a ſort of a Subaltern Court, partly reſembling in its Model That which was moſt properly called the Curia Regis: For in It the Kings Barons and Great Men, who uſed to be in his Palace near his Royal Perſon, ordinarily preſided and Sat; and ſometimes the King himſelf: In it, the Kings Chief Juſticier, his Chancellour, his Treaſurer, his Conſtable, his Mareſchall, and his Chamberlains, performed ſome part of their ſeveral Offices; as will be hereafter obſerved more at large, when we come to ſpeak (a) of the Perſons who Preſided and Sat in the Exchequer during the Firſt and Second Periods. 'Tis true, before the Diviſion and Settlement of the Kings Courts (concerning which matter we treat in the XVIIIth Chapter), the phraſe Curia Regis was commonly uſed, in a General Senſe, for That Great Court or Place of Judicature the Kings Palace, which was properly called Curia Regis. But the Exchequer is alſo ſometimes expreſly joined with the Kings Court as a Member or Part of It. In the 29th year of K. Henry II, a Final Concord was made in the Kings Court at Weſtminſter at the Exchequer, between the Priour and Monks of Rocheſter, And Juliana de Neweham and Robert de Champeynes (b). In the 1ſt year of K. Richard I, Richard ſon of Mein fined in iij marks, To have his Plaint in the Kings Court, or in the Kings Court at the Exchequer, againſt William de Saltey for the land of Bekebroch (c). In the ſame year, William de Einesford releaſed to the Church of Weſtminſter the Town of Benflet, and ſurrendred to them a Charter of Convention, in the Kings Court before the Barons of the Exchequer quer (d). In the 4th year of K. Richard I, Margaret de Perci releaſed the Town of Rokesby to the Knights Templars, in the Kings Court before the Barons of the Exchequer (e). If it be objected, That no man ever doubted but the Exchequer or the Court holden before the Barons There, was the Kings Court; and that therefore its being called the Kings Court does not import much, one way or other; the Exchequer being So called in like manner as the other Courts were, to wit, the Curia Domini Regis coram ipſo Rege, and the Curia Domini Regis de Banco. I anſwer. That is true, according to the way of ſpeaking which came into uſe after the Repartition of the Kings Courts. But before That Repartition, we do not (for ought that I know) meet with the phraſe Curia Regis coram ipſo Rege, or Curia Regis de Banco. Then, the ſtyle of the Kings Great Court was General, viz. Curia Regis. And at that time (to the beſt of my obſervation,) we hear of no other Ordinary Court of Judicature at Weſtminſter, beſides the Curia Regis and the Scaccarium. But of This I have ſpoken before (f).

Again; the Exchequer of Normandy ſeems to have been in like manner a Member or Adjunct of the Kings Court There. For example. Final Concords and Chirographs were ſometimes made in Normandy, in the Kings Court, at the Exchequer. Hugh Tibert, in Curia Domini Regis apud Cadomum ad Scaccarium, enſeoffed Robert de Montegomeri of the Fee of Fontance belonging to the Barony of Oilley: To Hold to Robert and his heirs, of Hugh and his heirs, at the yearly Rent of ij s Anjouvins. This Feoffment was made in conſideration of xvj l x s Anjouvins, which Robert paid when Hugh received of him his Homage (g). Robert de Ponte, in the Kings Court at Caen, at the Exchequer, ſold to Robert de Montegomeri his Half-Vavaſſory at Bouiler, To hold to him by hereditary Right. Robert de Ponte releaſed the ſaid Half-Vavaſſory upon Oath to Robert de Montegomeri. This Sale was made with the aſſent of the Lord of the Fee (h). Simon de Peilleue, in the Kings Court at Caen at the Exchequer, before William Fitz-Ralf Steward of Normandy, Ralf Labbe, Richard de Argentoin, Geoffrey de Corton, Ralf de Liſieux, Geoffrey de Rappendon, Sell. de Eſcorchebou, Peter de Fraxino, John Pigace, and the other Juſticiers and Barons who were Then preſent, enſeoffed Gilbert de Vilers of his whole Moiety of the Vivary and Mill of Meſſuneel, with their appurtenances (i). And ſeveral other Final Concords and Deeds Deeds of Feoffment were in like manner made in the Kings Court at Caen at the Exchequer; As may be ſeen in This Chapter (k).

II. And as in England and Normandy the Kings Exchequer was anciently annexed to his Court: So, one may ſuppoſe, there was ſomething not Unlike, in Other Countries where the Feudal Laws and Uſages did obtain; particularly, amongſt the Lombards, Franks, Germans, and Neapolitans of the Norman race. For amongſt theſe ſeveral nations, the Princes Treaſury was frequently denominated by the name of his Court: It was called Palatium Regis, or abſolutely Palatium (l); Curtis Regia (m); Curia Regia (n); and Camera Regia (o). Amongſt the Feudiſts, the word, Camera, (uſed with relation to the Princes Revenue) has been interpreted a Treaſury or Repoſitory of money (p). And in That ſenſe it has been in ſeveral Countries cuſtomarily uſed, even from the Ancient to the Modern times. For inſtance, In the year 1245 (q); In the year 1311, in the Sentence of the Emperour Henry VII, againſt Robert King of Sicily (r); In or about the year 1505 (s); And afterwards (t). And tis uſed in the ſame ſenſe at This day. The Princes Treaſury has been likewiſe uſually called by other names than thoſe abovementioned, viz. by the names of Fiſcus, and and Ærarium: Both which words were uſed for the Princes Treaſury, as well Before the Feudal Laws were introduced (u), as Afterwards (w); Eſpecially the Former; which was anciently a Word of general Uſe, and is ſo ſtill in many Countries. Tis true there has been a Difference made between the Ærarium and the Fiſcus; Of which ſeveral perſons (x) have taken notice. However, it ſeems, many of the Juriſconſults paſs-by That Difference, and take the one for the other (y). In Foreign Countries, the word Fiſcus was alſo ſometimes uſed, not only for the Princes Treaſury, but likewiſe for Lands and Revenue in general belonging to the Prince. K. Pipin and other Kings gave to the Church of St. Victor the Toll of a certain Town, and Therein all that belonged ad eorum Fiſcum (z). And in the Reigns of other Francick Kings, we read of Fiſcum Atoniacum (a), and Fiſcum Pontigonem (b), for a Town or Territory. Again, Fiſcus was ſometimes uſed to ſignify the poſſeſſions or revenue of Private Perſons. Rothbert and his Superiour Lord reſtored to the Church of St. Victor and to the Biſhop of Marſeilles, all that had been unjuſtly taken from their Fiſcus or poſſeſſions (c). III. It is not abſolutely certain from What original the word Scaccarium is deduced. Divers conjectures have been made about it (e). Perhaps the moſt likely derivation of it is from Scaccus or Scaccum a Cheſsboard, or the ludus Scaccorum, the Game of Cheſs (f); a Game of great antiquity (g). And the Exchequer of England was in all probability called Scaccarium, becauſe a Checquered Cloth (figured with Squares like a Cheſsboard) was anciently wont to be laid on the Table in the Court or Place of That name. Which cuſtom of laying a Checquered Cloth There, continues to this day. In truth, a Checquered Cloth it ſelf was ſometimes called Scaccarium. At the Coronation of K. Richard I, Six Earls and Barons carried unum Scaccarium, upon which were laid the Royal Inſignia and Robes (h). And in the Holy War, there were found (e) The Exchequer which is Fiſcus principis or ærarium publicum; and I cannot tell in what language it is called Scaccarium. Some think it was firſt called Statarium, becauſe that there was the ſtable place to account for the revenues of the Crown, aſwel that which came of patrimony which we call the demeaſnes, as that which commeth of other incident requiſitions. *Sir Tho. found in the Field after a Battel, Spices, Gold and Silver, Electuaries, Scaccaria, and other Rich implements (i). From the Latin, Scaccarium, cometh the French, Eſchequier or Exchequier; And the Engliſh name from the French. Or, if any one thinks it more likely, that the French word was the ancienter, and the Latin one formed from It, I do not oppoſe him, nay I encline to believe it was So. The Exchequer took its name from the checquered cloth which was wont to be laid upon the table There. I need not vouch the Moderns (k) for this. Richard Fitz-Nigell, author of the ancient Treatiſe or Dialogue concerning the Exchequer, confirmeth it (l). Indeed Polydore Vergil, ſpeaking of the Exchequer, as inſtituted in England by K. William I, intimates that it was corruptly called Scacarium, but ought to be called Statarium; from its Stability, and as it was the Firm Support of the Crown or Kingdom; nothing being of greater force to eſtabliſh a Kingdom than Revenue (m). And when he has occaſion afterwards to mention the Exchequer, he ſtill calls it Statarium (n). I can only ſay, that in the early times after the Conqueſt and from thence forward, it was conſtantly called in Records Scaccarium; but never (for ought that I know) Statarium.

IV. In this Section we will recollect ſome Memoires, by which it may be made credible, That there was in Normandy a Great and Ancient Court called the Exchequer; And that there was a ſimilitude between the Ancient Exchequer of Normandy and That of England in ſeveral particulars. In the firſt place, let us ſee, What account the Grand Cuſtumier gives of the Norman Exchequer. It ſays, That in Normandy, from time Immemorial, as well Before the Union of That Duchy to the Crown of France, as Afterwards, there was a Court and Soveraign Juriſdiction; wherein all Cauſes ariſing within That Duchy were decided, as in the Laſt and Higheſt reſort: And that the ſaid Court was anciently called the Court of Exchequer (o). By the deſcription he here gives of the Norman Exchequer, it appears to have borne a reſemblance to the Exchequer in England conſidered in its moſt Ancient ſtate. It was (ſays he) a Court that could not be held without aſſembling together the Prelates, Earls, Barons, Judges, and other Officers, of the Duchy, nor without Solemnity, Ceremony, and expenſe both to the Prince and People (p). For which and other reaſons there mentioned, it was in proceſs of time changed into a Court called la Court de Parlement de Normendie (q). That Change was made (as Meſſieurs Sainƈte Marthe relate) by Francis I, A.D. 1515 (r). But before That Change

Change, the Norman Exchequer remained, for ought that appears, in its Ancient ſtate. In It aſſembled the High Juſticiers, to whom it appertained, to correct the Defects and Falſe judgments of Bailiffs and other inferiour Juſticiers, and to do Right to every man without delay, as it were from the Princes mouth, and to take care of the Princes Rights and Dignity (s). In it aſſembled the Prelates, Barons, Knights &c, to judg of Cauſes (t). And the Great Cauſes were to be determined either in the Aſſizes, or in the Exchequer, or before the Prince (u). This is in ſhort the Account given, in the Great Cuſtumier, of the Norman Exchequer. In the next place, let us ſee what account concerning it may be gathered elſewhere. In the year 1258, Louis K. of France granted ſeveral poſſeſſions at Perpetual Ferm to the Monks of St. Oüen at Roan, for 60 l Tournois, To be rendred by moieties at the Two Exchequers, viz. the Exchequer of Eaſter and the Exchequer of St. Michael (w). In the year 1281, the Liberty of the Priour de Pree was Declared In pleno Scacario Paſchæ, before the Maſters of the ſaid Exchequer at Roan, and Judgment given for him by the ſaid Maſters preſiding in the ſame Exchequer (x). In the year 1208, Nicolas de Monteigny and Iſabel his wife made a Grant in Frankalmoigne to the Church of Bonport, and confirmed it by an Oath taken in the Exchequer at Roan, before Walter the Chamberlain and others (y). In the year 1374, a Compoſition was made in the Norman Exchequer, between two Religious houſes, touching Tithes (z): And afterwards, a Suit which aroſe touching the ſaid Compoſition, A. D. 1386, was determined in the Exchequer (a). In the year 1376, Robert Abbot of Treſport Compounded in the Exchequer of Normandy for the alternative patronage of Euureville (b). In the year 1336, in the Exchequer at Roan, an Inquiſition was ordered to be taken concerning ſome of the Poſſeſſions of Fontanelle (c). Thus the Exchequer of Normandy was a Great and conſiderable Court; Not a Place of Revenue only, but alſo a Juridical

Court

Court. Again; the name, Exchequer, was ſo well known and ſo much uſed (as it ſeems) in That Duchy, that other Juridical Courts beſides That of the Duke were called Exchequers. The Canons of Roan (if we may believe Meſſieurs Saincte Marthe) had an Exchequer or Juridical Court, to which Appeals were made from Inferiour Juriſdictions. And the Archbiſhop of Roan had likewiſe an Exchequer or Juridical Forum, which at ſtated times was holden in his Palace, and was much more Splendid than That of the Canons (d).

It appeareth alſo from ſome Records ſtill preſerved in England, That the Exchequer of Normandy was an Ancient Court, And Like, in many reſpects, to the Exchequer of England. There was, I ſuppoſe, an Exchequer in Normandy in the Reign of Stephen King of England. In the 5th year (as tis ſuppoſed) of That King, Richard Baſſet and Aubrey de Ver Sheriffs of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire accompted for M marks of Silver the Surpluſage of thoſe Counties. They paid cccc marks of ſilver (part thereof) at the Treaſury in England, And (the reſidue, to wit, D marks of ſilver in money, and C marks of ſilver in Plate, at the Treaſury in Normandy. The payment in Normandy was made to the hands of Nigell nephew of the Biſhop [of Saleſbury], who might be Then Treaſurer of Normandy, and of Osbert de Pontearch (e), who was (if I gueſs right) a Chamberlain of Normandy at That time. The Record I am ſpeaking of is placed underneath (f). Again; There was an Exchequer in Normandy in the Reign of Henry II, King of England. Hugh de Gurnay paid his Relief for his Land in England at the Exchequer of Normandy. Which payment is certified by Writ to the Barons of the Exchequer in England (g). And William de Mandevill Earl of Eſſex, Cuſtos or Committee of the Lands which the Earl of Flanders then had in England, paid part of the iſſues of thoſe Lands to the King in his Treaſury of Normandy [in Theſauro Normanniæ] (h).

At That time the two Exchequers (of Normandy and England) were in their model very like to one another. There is a Record extant in the Tower of London, which is in this reſpect Curious and remarkable: It was lately recovered by Mr Holmes out of the Heap of Records that lay confuſed in the White Tower There, till Her Majeſty, at the humble inſtance of the Houſe of Peers, commanded them to be put in order. It is a Fragment, conſiſting of Three Large membranes of a Norman Great Roll; which are all that are yet found of That kind. The membranes are near twelve inches wide, written on Both ſides in the like Stately hand with the Engliſh Great Rolls [of the Pipe] of K. Henry the Seconds Reign. Theſe Norman membranes are ſo Like in Character, Method, and Manner of Entry to the Engliſh Great Rolls [or Pipe-Rolls] of the Exchequer of the ſame Age, that they are hardly to be diſtinguiſhed from one another. Nevertheleſs, it appeareth that theſe are part of a Norman Great

And I ſuppoſe there was a Great Roll of the Exchequer of Normandy in the Reign of K. John. In the caſe of Roger de Punchardon, reference is made in the Great Roll of the Exchequer in England, to the [Great] Roll of the Exchequer in Normandy (p). In the Reign of K. Richard I. of England, William Mareſchall paid CC marks into the Treaſury [of the Exchequer] of Normandy: Which payment was certified to the Exchequer of England by the Chancellours Writ, and by Teſtimony of William Fitz-Ralf Steward of Normandy, and by the Kings Writ de Ultra mare (q). Robeiſe de Boum Fined in CCC marks, for the Cuſtody of her late husbands Land and Children; and was to pay-in the Fine at the Exchequer of Normandy (r). The Forepart of the Reign of K. John ſupplieth us with ſeveral Memoires concerning the Exchequer of Normandy. By which we may diſcern in ſome meaſure, What ſort of a Court or Place That Exchequer was, And what kind of buſineſs was tranſacted There. Some of thoſe Memoires (taken from Records) ſhall be here produced. In the firſt place, it appears, That Charters and Final Concords were wont to be made between Parties, at the Exchequer in Normandy, before the Juſticiers and Barons Then preſent, much after the manner ſometimes uſed in England in like caſes. For example. A Final Concord was made made at Caen, at the Exchequer, in the Second year after the Coronation of John King of England, before Warin de Glappion Steward of Normandy, Samſon Abbat of Caen, Peter de Lions, Hugh de Chaucumbe, and other Juſticiers and Barons Then preſent, Between John de Manerbie Tenant, And Robert Monk his Brother Claimant. It was a Partition of their Inheritance, made with the aſſent of the Lords of the Fees (s). A Final Concord was made between Ralf Teſſon and Fulk de Preez, concerning the Honour of St. Saviour late the poſſeſſion of Roger the Viſcount,

The Roll out of which I have cited theſe Charters and Final Concords, is entitled at the Head of it Thus, in the ſame hand with the Roll it ſelf; "This "is the Roll of Charters and Chirographs of Normandy, made in the time of "Guarin de Glapion Steward of Normandy, in the Second year of the Reign of "K. John; Samſon Abbat of Caen, Ralf Labbe, and Peter de Lions the Kings "Clerk, Then Sitting at the Exchequer (y).

They had in Normandy Summonces of the Exchequer There. William de Seranz Fined to the King by way of Oblatum in three marks of gold, To have Right againſt Henry de la Pomeray. He was to pay the three marks at the next return of the Summonce of the Exchequer (z). They had in Normandy the Diſtinction of the Duo Scaccaria, or Principal Terms of Payment and Receipt. K. John gave to the Church of Rouen Two thouſand pounds Anjouvins, payable at the Four Next Exchequers: And commanded the Seneſchall of Normandy and the Barons of the Exchequer to cauſe the Payments to be made accordingly (a). The ſame King gave to John Malerbe the yearly fee of C l Anjouvins payable at the Exchequer of Caen at the Two Terms, viz. At the Exchequer of Eaſter L l, And at the Exchequer of St. Michael L l: And commanded the Steward of Normandy and Barons of the Exchequer, to cauſe the ſame to be paid in manner aforeſaid (b). Disburſements were wont to be made by the Kings Officers in Normandy and Anjou by vertue of the Kings Writs; wherein was contained (as in England) the uſual Clauſe, That they ſhould be Allowed the ſame at the Exchequer. The King, by Writ, commanded the Provoſt of Barbeflet to Find Paſſage [and neceſſaries] gratis for Peter de Ely and his Fellows and their Horſes, who brought into Normandy the money ariſing by the Carucage of England: And the Provoſt was to have the ſame Allowed to him at the Exchequer (c). Another Writ iſſued to the ſame Provoſt, commanding him to Find Paſſage gratis for Alexander the Clerk and others, who brought with them ſome Treaſure into Normandy for the Kings uſe: And his Disburſement was to be Allowed to him at the Exchequer (d). The King by a Writ ordered Samſon Abbat of Caen a Baron of the Exchequer in Normandy, and the Chamberlains There, to ſend to him [out of his Treaſury] Two hundred marks, by William Puingnard (e): And by another Writ, ordered William Puingnard to convey the ſame Summ of money to him [the King] at his own Coſt; which Coſt ſhould be Allowed to him at the Exchequer (f). Writs were wont to iſſue to the Steward of Normandy and the Barons of the Exchequer There, commanding them to make Allowance at the Exchequer, of the Summs of money therein mentioned to have been laid-out or paid in the Kings Service. This was done after the manner uſual alſo in England in like caſes. For example. A Writ of Computate was awarded to the Steward of Normandy and the Barons of the Exchequer, whereby they were ordered to Allow William Puinard Sheriff of Caen x l Anjouvins and v s and viij d, which he had laid out in accommodations for the Kings Carriages (g). A Like Writ iſſued for R. the Abbot, by vertue whereof he was to be Allowed ſix Thouſand three hundred ſeventy five marks of ſilver, which he had paid into the Kings Chamber, of moneys ariſing out of the Kings Revenue in England (h). A Like Writ iſſued for Richard de la Toure, for Allowance of certain moneys by him laid out in providing neceſſaries for ſome of the Kings horſes and grooms (i). The Provoſt of Chinun laid out xxv l and odd about making certain Engines for the Kings uſe: And was to have the ſame Diſcompted or Allowed to him by vertue of a Writ of Computate directed to William de Rupibus Steward of Anjou (k). The King by Writ commanded the Steward of Normandy [and Barons of the Exchequer There], That according to the Cuſtom of the Exchequer of Normandy, they ſhould make due Allowance to Jordan de Saukevill of all that he had laid-out in repairing the Hay of Arches, and upon the Caſtle of Arches and the Foreſt of Awy; the Items of ſuch expenſes being verified by the teſtimony of lawful men (l). V. Next; let us enquire after the Original or Firſt inſtitution of the Exchequer in England. This may well be looked on as an obſcure diſquiſition at This day; ſeeing it was thought obſcure by the Author of the Dialogue concerning the Exchequer. That Authour propoſes the Doubt; but is not poſitive in the caſe; though (if I underſtand him rightly) he enclines to think the Exchequer was ſet-up in England at or about the time of the Norman Conqueſt. “ The inſtitution of the Exchequer (ſaith he) is confirmed as well by “ Its Antiquity, as alſo by the Authority of the Great Men that Sit There. “ For it is ſaid to have been erected by K. William at the time of the Conqueſt “ of this Realm, its Model being taken from the Tranſmarine Exchequer: “ But they [the Exchequer of England and That of Normandy] Differ from one “ another in ſeveral and very conſiderable things. Again; there are ſome “ who think there was an Exchequer under the Angloſaxon Kings. And they “ go upon this ground: becauſe there were Farmers (very Ancient men) who “ had lived upon ſome of the Crown-lands, that could Remember or had “ been told by their Fathers, How much de Albo firmæ men were obliged to “ pay for every pound. But This relates to the manner of Paying the Fermes, “ not to the Seſſion of the Exchequer. Beſides if a man alleges that the Album firmæ begann in the Angloſaxon times, it may be urged againſt him, that “ in Domeſday-Book (which contains an exact Deſcription of the Lands of the “ whole Realm, and mentions the Value of all mens Lands as well of the time “ of K. Edward, as alſo of K. William under whom it was written) there is no “ mention at all made of the Album firmæ. From whence tis reaſonable to “ ſuppoſe, that after the time of making That Survey in the Reign of the “ King juſt above named, the Conſtitution concerning the Album firmarum was “ made by perſons intelligent in That affair; for the reaſons which I ſhall “ mention by and by. But at what time ſoever the Exchequer Begann, tis “ certain It is founded on ſo great an Authority, that no man ought to break “ the Statutes of the Exchequer, or to be ſo hardy as to oppoſe them. For “ This the Exchequer hath in common with the Kings Court (wherein the King “ perſonally Sits in Judgment), that tis not lawful for any man to contradict “ what is Recorded or Adjudged There (y). Here we ſee, this worthy Authour, having having mentioned the Opinion of ſome who held there was an Exchequer in England Before the time of the Conqueſt, refutes the Reaſon upon which their Opinion was grounded. And on the other hand, having mentioned the Opinion of ſome Others who held that the Exchequer Begann at the time of the Conqueſt, and took its Model from the Exchequer of Normandy, he only ſays that thoſe Two Exchequers were very Different in many reſpects from one another. And if they were in many reſpects Different, I ſuppoſe it appeareth from the 4th Section of this Chapter, that they were in many reſpects Like to one another. But ſeeing this Learned Gentleman has not delivered his Opinion poſitively upon This Queſtion, we will now make ſome further Eſſays upon it, with a Modeſty ſuitable to His Example.

If we look into the Hiſtories and Memoires written in England in the times which preceeded the Norman Conqueſt, we ſhall not (I ſuppoſe) find There any footſteps of a Scaccarium or Exchequer. For my part, I have not ſeen the word Scaccarium or Exchequer in any Monument written in the Angloſaxon times. However, I do not reſt upon my Own Obſervation in the caſe. Two Learned Gentlemen extremely well acquainted with the Angloſaxon Antiquities of this Kingdom (I mean, Mr. Somner and Dr. Hicks) ſeem to be of the ſame opinion. They Both referr the Original of the Exchequer in England to the Normans (z). And the Learned Biſhop Stillingfleet concurrs with them in his opinion about this matter (a). But from or ſoon after the time of the Norman Conqueſt, the Scaccarium or Exchequer of England is frequently mentioned in the Engliſh Hiſtorians and Records; as will hereafter appear. There was an Exchequer in England in the Reign of K. Henry I, ſon of K. William I; which has continued ever ſince. The Judges or Governours of It were at That time ſtyled Barones Scaccarij, and adminiſtred juſtice to the Subjects. This appears by a Charter of K. Henry I. made to the Canons of the H. Trinity in London, cited verbatim in this Hiſtory, viz. in Chap IX. ſect. 2. Which Charter is directed to Roger Biſhop of Saresbury (then, I ſuppoſe, Chief Juſticier) and to the Barons of the Exchequer. It runs thus, Henricus, Rex Angl., Rogero Epiſcopo Saresberiæ & Baronibus Scaccarij ſalutem. And the ſame thing (to wit, that there was an Exchequer in England in the time of K. Henry I) appears alſo by a Writ made in favour of the Church of Weſtminſter; which Writ is cited in Chap. VI. ſect 2. out of a Cottonian MS in Fauſtina A III. (for I cannot, upon diligent ſearch, find the Original Writ in the Repoſitory of the Church of Weſtminſter). There were alſo Rotuli Annales or Great Rolls of the Pipe in That Kings Reign, if we may believe Alexander de Swereford, a very Worthy man, who ſays he had ſeen ſome of them (b). But thoſe Rolls are periſhed by the injury of Time. And (excepting Domeſday-Book) the Oldeſt Record or Roll now remaining is That which commonly paſſeth for the Great Roll of the 5th year of K. Stephen, which lieth in the Repoſitory of the Pipe-Office at Weſtminſter, amongſt other Great Rolls, of ineſtimable value, of the Reigns of KKK. Henry II, Richard I, and John. Alexander de Swereford ſeems to ſuppoſe, that Annalia or Rotuli Annales were made in the Reign of K. William the I, like as in the Reigns of the ſubſequent Kings; but ſays, there were None remaining in His time (c). And he flouriſhed in the Reigns of KK. John and Henry III. Since therefore, in This want of Ancient Records, we cannot get Cleer Evidence concerning the Firſt Inſtitution or Original of the Exchequer of England: I will propoſe a Conjecture, which the Reader may be at liberty to refuſe, if he does not think it ſufficiently ſupported: Namely, That the Exchequer was erected in England by one of the Anglonorman Kings, after the Model of the Exchequer in Normandy. To ſupport This Conjecture, Two things may be offered: I. That the Norman Kings made Great Alterations in the Old Laws and Uſages of England. II. That the Erection of an Exchequer was part of thoſe Alterations.

Firſt, It is Probable that the Normans, at or ſoon after the Conqueſt, made Great Alterations in the Old Laws and Manners of England, and introduced New ones of their Own. Eadmer a Writer coeval with the Conqueſt (d), and likewiſe the Compiler of the Dialogue de Scaccario (e); tell us the Normans did ſo. And the thing hath in it ſelf great probability. For example. After the Conqueſt, the Great Officers of the Kings Court in England came to have Norman names, and different Functions from what they had Before. The Terms of Law for the moſt part were Norman. The Writs and Forms of Proceſs were generally of a Norman original. Many particular Norman Cuſtoms and Uſages came to obtain, which were not (for ought that appears) known in England Before. Inſomuch, that any man who compares the Great Norman Cuſtumier with Glanvill the moſt ancient Law-book written in England after the Conqueſt that is now extant, will find a near ſimilitude between them. It is ſaid indeed, that K. William I. liked the Engliſh Law ſo well, that he cauſed it to be written in the Norman tongue, and eſtabliſhed it or great part of it in Normandy (f). But doth any coeval Hiſtorian or other Writer, either of England or Normandy, tell us that any ſuch thing was done? If K. William I. had carried the Engliſh Laws into Normandy, the Law-terms uſed thenceforth in Normandy might have been Norman: But the Law-terms uſed in England would have continued Engliſh or Angloſaxon, as they were before K. William I. (as is ſuppoſed) introduced the Engliſh Law into Normandy. Whereas, it appears to be in fact quite contrary; that is to ſay, A General Vein of Norman language hath from the time of the Conqueſt or ſoon after run through the whole Body of the Laws of England. In truth, it is marvellous to ſee ſo great an alteration in the courſe of Law-proceedings in England wrought in ſo ſhort a time; and that ſo little in effect of the Angloſaxon Laws and uſages was retained. This will in great meaſure appear to be true, if we compare the Laws of the Angloſaxon Kings, with the forms of Law-proceſs which are collected by Ranulf de Glanvill, who flouriſhed in the reign of K. Henry II: Which Laws and forms of Law-proceedings are (if I miſtake not) as Different from one another, as the Laws of two ſeveral Nations. Theſe matters have, within the compaſs of a few years paſt, been made a ſubject of much debate; with great feebleneſs, at leaſt with great inequality of force on one ſide. But in regard they are purely ſpeculative, it is not neceſſary to have them finally decided one way or other. It may ſuffice to ſtate or ballance them, and ſo leave them to the judgment of ſuch perſons as are Curious and well-ſeen in the Engliſh Hiſtory and Records.

Upon this occaſion, I will take leave to ſet-down an obſervation or conjecture which I had once the honour to hear propoſed by a very Learned Gentleman, in this manner. He ſaid, it ſeemed to him, by the courſe of the Engliſh Hiſtory and otherwiſe, that after the Norman Conqueſt, there enſued a great alteration in the old Engliſh Laws, manners, and uſages: That nevertheleſs, That alteration with reference to the Laws, was not compleatly brought-about and ſettled till the reign of K. Henry II: That the reign of K. William I. was moſtly employed in quelling the diſcontents and inſurrections of his Engliſh ſubjects, and in getting and ſecuring to himſelf and his heirs, a full and faſt poſſeſſion of the Regal and other Revenues of England: That the next King (viz. William II), reigned under a Title controllable by the juſt pretenſions of his elder Brother Robert; yet being a ſtately, reſolute, and ſubtile Prince, partly by power and partly by policy he kept the Engliſh under the yoke, and continued to ſtrengthen himſelf in the New acqueſts, and to form the Laws and Manners of This Countrey after the Norman faſhion: That the next King (viz. Henry I.) was a Mild Book-learned Prince, and reigned likewiſe for ſeveral years under a diſputed Title; that He continued, as far as his affairs would permitt, to eſtabliſh the Norman Laws and cuſtoms, as KK. William I. and William II. had done; that in his time, many of the Anglonorman Lords, who had great eſtates in Normandy as well as in England, might probably be, and were, inclinable to favour the Title and intereſts of Robert Earl of Normandy, which might give umbrage to K. Henry; That K. Henry, to win the affections of the Engliſh Natives who made the Bulk of the People, and thereby to check or ballance the Anglonorman Lords, commanded a Body of Laws to be compiled, which were agreeable to the Laws of the old Engliſh or Angloſaxon Kings, and were called the Laws of K. Henry I. (g); that however theſe Laws of K. Henry I. relate chiefly to Criminal matters, and were never, for ought that appears, duly publiſhed, much leſs put in practice amongſt the Engliſh: That the reign of the next King (viz. Stephen) was nothing elſe in effect but a ſtate of War: That K. Henry II. the next Succeſſour, came to the Crown by an undoubted Title, and ſurpaſſed all his Anceſtours in Power and extent of Dominion; for he was King of England, Earl or Duke of Normandy, Lord of Ireland, Anjou, and the Aquitanick Tract of Land; inſomuch that he was the greateſt King at That time in Chriſtendom: That this Prince did put the laſt or finiſhing hand to the Norman Eſtabliſhment, and in ſpecial to the alteration thereby made in the Engliſh Laws: as will in ſome meaſure appear from theſe conſiderations following, namely; The Statutes or Conſtitutions of Clarendon, made in or about the eleventh year of K. Henry II, are, both for phraſe and ſubſtance, more entirely Normannick than any Laws or Publick Acts from the Conqueſt to That time; And Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who was the firſt Native Engliſhman that had been Archbiſhop of That See ſince the Conqueſt, oppoſed certain articles of thoſe Conſtitutions, as they were, in his opinion prejudicial or derogatory, to the ſuppoſed rights of the Clergy, and to the old laws and uſages of the Engliſh nation; Add hereto, that the Norman laws and cuſtoms were ſettled by conſtant uſe during the reign of K. Henry II; and that at the latter end of his reign, Ranulf de Glanvill, a great man in the Law and a Juſticier, drew-up a compendium of the Laws of England, fitted for publick uſe; Which he probably did by the Kings command, (h) that it might ſerve as a CHAP. IV. Code or Syſteme for the direction of ſuch as dealt in Law-proceedings; and this Syſteme of Glanvills, is in effect nothing elſe but a tranſcript of the Norman Law; as will readily appear to any man who pleaſes to compare it with the Grand Cuſtumier of Normandy: In fine, that this Normannick modell of Laws continued, and was indeed firmly ſettled in England, during the reigns of K. Henry II, and his two Sons Richard and John, and of the ſucceeding Kings; bating the alterations that were made therein, at the end of the reign of K. John, in the reign of K. Henry III, and in the ſubſequent ages.

Having ſaid this, I reſume the thred of my Diſcourſe. Let us, if you pleaſe, try a parallel caſe Abroad, in another Climate. As the Normans when they won England made great Alterations There, they did the ſame thing in another Countrey which they alſo won by their Arms; that is, in the Kingdom of Naples. When they planted themſelves in That Countrey, and by divers ſucceſſes obtained the Soveraign Power There; they introduced many of the Norman Laws and Cuſtoms, forming That Court and Countrey after the Norman model: Which Laws and Cuſtoms were not Before in uſe There; for the Normans won That Countrey after it had been poſſeſſed by Greeks and Saracens, whoſe Law and Goverment were very Different from Thoſe of the Normans. In Naples they eſtabliſhed the Like Great Officers of their Court as were in Normandy (and after the Conqueſt, in England); and with the Like Powers: Namely, The Grand Juſticier (i); The Conſtable (k); The Seneſchall (l); The Mareſchall (m); The Camarlingo or Chamberlain (n); The Chancellour (o); The Admirall (p); And the Hoſtiario or Uſher (q). Theſe were ancient Officers in the Kingdom of Naples. And ſome of them were (if I am not miſtaken) Hereditary. Several of the ſame Officers ſubſcribe as Witneſſes to the Charter of William King of Sicily made to K. Henry II. of England. Amongſt Them are the Vicechancellour, the Admirall, Seneſchall, Conſtable, and Juſticier (r). In or about the year 1144, Roger King of Sicily or Naples held his Court at Capua; whereat were preſent, the Princes his Sons, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, and Barons. And there, a great Conteſt or Law-ſuit between John Biſhop of Averſa and Walter Abbot of St. Laurence of Averſa, was accorded; Which Accord the King confirmed by his Charter, which was made Bipartite, And one part of it delivered to the Biſhop, the other to the Abbot (s): They had There their Aſſizes, taken in the ſame ſenſe as anciently in Normandy and England (t); Their Baronies and Fees held in Capite (u); Aids to be rendred by Tenants to their Lord, For ranſoming his perſon,

In Burgundy, the Full Age of Male children (to ſome purpoſes) was 14 years, and of Female 12 years (e): If a Baſtard dyed without lawful heirs of his body, all his Goods came to the Duke of Burgundy (f); nor could a Baſtard ſucceed ab inteſtato to his Father or Mother (g): A Widow after her husbands death was to be endowed of the Moiety [in Normandy and England of the Third part] of the ancient inheritance of her husband whereof he dyed ſeiſed, to enjoy the ſame during her life (h): Minors were not to do Homage to their Lord till they were out of wardſhip or tutelage (i): An Inheritance could not Aſcend in a Right Line; that is, in a Paternal or Maternal heritage the Father or Mother could not ſucceed to his or her Son or Daughter or to their Children (k): Inheritances, as to the Deſcent of them, followed the line of the Trunk or Stock from whence they iſſued (l): Amortization turned a Fee into a kind of Allodium (m): Partition of a thing holden in Fee did not prejudice the Lord of the Fee, but each Parcener was to continue Vaſſal of ſuch Lord for his ſeveral part or portion (n):

A Married woman remained in the power of her husband, ſo that ſhe could not Plead or be Impleaded without him, nor make any Teſtament or Diſpoſal of her goods by Laſt Will, without his Licenſe and authority; nor could make any Contract inter vivos without him, Unleſs ſhe was a Publick Trader; and in That caſe, onely in things touching her Merchandiſe (o): The husband without the wife might appear and act as Demandant or Defendant in the poſſeſſory rights of his wife and in perſonal actions (p): Men Profeſſed in Religion could not ſucceed to Father or Mother or other Collaterals; [but the Ciſtercians (it ſeems) claimed a Privilege and uſance to the contrary (q)]: In a word, they had in Burgundy their haute Juſtice (r), their Men that were talliable haut & bas, and juſticiable en toutes juſtices (s), their Talliæ, Præſtantiæ or Emprunts, and Fouages (t), And their Foreſts and Parks (u). The Burgundian Cuſtoms and Manners being formerly not-unlike to Thoſe of the Normans, and of the Engliſh after the Conqueſt, in theſe and ſome other particulars; Shall we therefore ſay, The Burgundians, received the ſame from the Normans, after the Normans had received them of the Engliſh. Or is it not far more probable, that they were the Cuſtoms and Uſages ab antiquo both of the Normans and Burgundians (two neighbouring Countries, whoſe vicinity might produce a ſimilitude of Laws and cuſtoms).

Secondly, Let us ſee, Whether it be not Probable, that the Exchequer in England was erected by the Normans. It hath been ſhewn in this ſection and the next before it, that the Exchequer of Normandy and That of England were Ancient Courts; and, though they might in ſome things Differ, were in many reſpects ſo like to one another, that tis natural to ſuppoſe, that either the Exchequer of Normandy was the Original and Pattern to the Exchequer of England, or elſe the Exchequer of England to It. By the Records which have been preſerved in England referrible to this ſubject, one would at firſt be enclined to think the Engliſh Exchequer was the more Ancient, and the Pattern to the Norman. For it evidently appears from Records, that there was an Exchequer in England in the Reign of K. Henry I: Not ſo evidently from Records, that there was one in Normandy at That time or Before. Nevertheleſs, if we come to look more narrowly into this matter, perhaps we may find this Objection much overballanced. In the 4th ſection of this Chapter, a Record relating to Richard Baſſet and Aubrey de Ver has been produced, to ſhew that there was an Exchequer in Normandy in the 5th year of K. Stephen: Between whoſe Reign and That of K. Henry I, the difference in point of Priority is not worth mentioning. But if the Great Roll wherein That Record is contained, ſhould prove to be (inſtead of 5° Steph.) a Great Roll of ſome year in the Reign of K. Henry I (w); Then this Objection will vaniſh. Again; ſuppoſe it could not be evidently proved from any Records now extant in England, that there was

was an Exchequer in Normandy before the Reign of K. Henry II. next Succeſſour to K. Stephen: There would hardly be room enough to conclude from thence, that the Exchequer of England was more Ancient than That of Normandy, and the Original or Pattern to It. Let it be conſidered: If we ſuppoſe the Norman Exchequer to be an ectype or derivative from the Engliſh Exchequer, How comes it to paſs, that there is no mention made (for ought we know) of a Scaccarium or Exchequer in any Angloſaxon Hiſtory or monument of antiquity written before the Conqueſt? How comes it to paſs, that the very name of it, Scaccarium and Exchequer, and likewiſe the Officers and Perſons acting at the Exchequer, and in effect all the Terms of art uſed There, are Normannick? On the other hand: if we ſuppoſe, that the Exchequer of England was formed or derived from That of Normandy (amongſt other Alterations introduced into England by the Normans), there ſeems to be nothing abſurd or harſh in the ſuppoſition. It was not till after the Conqueſt that we hear of an Exchequer in England. The Great Officers, who preſided in the Exchequer of England were All or moſt of them New, that is had different functions or powers from thoſe which the Great Officers of the Kings Court or Palace had in the Engliſh or Angloſaxon times: namely, the Kings Chief Juſticier, His Conſtable, his Mareſchall, his Chamberlains, his Treaſurer and Barons. Some of theſe, together with the Oſtiarius or Uſher, were Hereditary Officers in the Exchequer of England: Which was according to the French and Norman cuſtom: Whereas (I think) we do not find theſe Hereditary Officers about the Kings Court in the Angloſaxon ages. Beſides; moſt of the Solemn and Emphatical words uſed in the Exchequer appear to be of Norman extraction: ſuch are, Juſticiarius, Compotus, Finis, Miſericordia, Amerciamentum, Forsifactura, Tallagium, Cuſtuma, Priſa, Balliva, Comitatus, Feffamentum, Serjanteria, Tenura and Tenementum, Homagium, Relevatio or Relevium, Francum plegium, Maritagium, Warantum, Quietantia, Talea, Argentum blancum, Catallum, Aſſiſa, Liberatio, Conredium, Loquela, Breve, Rectum, Saiſina, Diſfortiare, Summonitio, Viſus, Superplus, with many Other: To which may be added moſt of the Terms of the Foreſt-Law, which were often uſed in the Exchequer. So that the Exchequer, if we conſider its Name, its Officers, the Method of Proceeding and the Terms of art uſed There, appeareth to bear evident Marks of a Normannick original and inſtitution. In this enquiry I have no deſign to derogate from the Ancient Angloſaxon nation, or precariouſly to aſcribe to the Normans what does not rightfully belong to them. But as I have an Equal veneration for our Anceſtours of the Saxon and of the Norman race, it had been Equal to me in That reſpect, whether the One or the Others of them had been entituled to the Glory of being the Firſt Contrivers and Inſtitutours of the anciently Great and Noble Court of Exchequer. However, I have been the more copious in this Enquiry, becauſe I found it would give me occaſion to lay before the Reader certain things, which I thought might tend to illuſtrate the Subject, and be proper for Antiquaries to recollect. And ſo I leave this matter to the Readers Judgment.

VI. It may be obſerved, That in England in Ancient times (after the Norman Conqueſt), a Treaſury, Receipt, or Place of Revenue, was often deſigned by the word, Scaccarium, or Exchequer. And as the Kings Exchequer, holden in his Court, was the Chief or Higheſt Treaſury in This Realm: So, the cuſtom of Speaking has taught us to underſtand ordinarily by the word Exchequer, His Great or Royal Exchequer; Including the Receipt, which came afterwards to be called Inferius Scaccarium, as will be noted in its due place. In the Exchequer there were, from Ancient time, Two Notable Terms or Periods of the Year, called the Duo Scaccaria; One of them the Scaccarium Paſchæ, And the other the Scaccarium S. Michaelis. As in the inſtances following; viz. In the caſe of Hugh Bardulf (x), In the caſe of the Citizens of Norwich (y), Of Hugh de Fokinton and his wife (z) of Godfrey

VII. Beſides the Great Exchequer, the King had ſome Subordinate Receipts or Places of Revenue, which were called Exchequers. There was an Exchequer ſet up at Worceſter for receipt of the Kings Money (h). At this Receipt, William de Beauchamp received part of the Kings Revenue, and particularly Scutage-money for That County (i). There was Scaccarium Redemptionis [i. e. Regis Ricardi]. appointed for Receipt of the money raiſed for the Ranſom of K. Richard I. There was a Scaccarium Aaronis. And there were Two Clerks, Joſeph and Roger, employed There for the King (m). By the Exchequer of Aaron might be meant the Place for Receipt of the Revenue accruing to the Crown from the forfeited Eſtate of Aaron the Jew of Lincoln. Of which, ſeveral Accompts may be ſeen in the Great Rolls of K. Richard I. (n). There was a Scaccarium Hugonis de Nevill: Peter de Brus was ordered to pay DCC l which he owed to the Crown, at the Exchequer of Hugh de Nevill; And Hugh was to pay it in at the Exchequer of Weſtminſter (o): Hugh was Accomptable to the King for his Receipts: One of his Accompts may be ſeen in the Tenth Year of K. John (p): About this time He was Juſticier of the Foreſt for ſeveral Years together (q). In Fine, there was alſo a Scaccarium Judæorum. But of that I ſhall ſpeak hereafter in its place. Probably, theſe Places were called Exchequers for one or both of theſe Two reaſons. Firſt, as they were Places for Receipt of Revenue. Next, Becauſe in Places of Receipt or Revenue it was cuſtomary to lay upon the Table a Scaccarium or Chequered Cloth: Which, by reaſon of the Chequering or Diverſity of the ſquare ſpaces wrought upon it, was more commodious for Counting of money, according to the way uſed in thoſe times, than a Plain Board or a Cloth all of one colour (r).

VIII. The King, if he pleaſed, ſat and acted in his Exchequer. About the 11th year of K. Henry II, when Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury was called to an account for his Receipts of the Kings Revenue during his Chancellourſhip, he Pleaded, That he was Diſcharged of all thoſe Receipts and Accounts by K. Henry the Younger, and all the Barons of the Exchequer, and Richard de Luci Juſticier of England (s). And in the Sixth year of K. John, William Mareſchall Sheriff of Glouceſterſhire being charged with xxx l increment for certain Manours in That County, the King who was Then Preſent at the Exchequer, Directed what ſhould be done in the Caſe (t). The King ſat Perſonally in the Exchequer during the Second Period alſo, as may be ſeen in Chapter XX, ſect. 6.

IX. When the Kings Exchequer was holden at Weſtminſter, there were Two Principal Rooms for the Barons to ſit in. One was called Scaccarium, or Scaccarium Baronum: So it was called in the 22th Year of K. Henry II (u), In the 31th

31th and 33th year of the ſame King (w), In the Firſt (x), and other (y) years of K. Richard I, In the Reign of K. John (z), And of Henry III (a): The Other was called Thalamus or Thalamus Baronum; to wit, in the Reign of K. Richard I (b), and K. John (c). And ſometimes the Greater Scaccarium was called Scaccarium in Solio, the Throne-like Exchequer (perhaps becauſe it was framed like a Throne or Court), to Diſtinguiſh it, as one may gueſs, from the Thalamus (d), which was a ſort of a Council-Chamber (e). The Pannus Laneus mentioned in the inſtances above-cited was, probably, a Checquered Cloth. It was wont to be provided for the Exchequer Twice a-year (f). The Sheriffs of London and Middleſex for the time being uſed to provide it at the Kings charges; as appears by the Records here cited and by many others. Beſides the Two Principal Rooms which I have been ſpeaking of, allotted to the Barons of the Exchequer to Sit in, the Barons had (it ſeems) certain Chambers in the Kings Palace or Exchequer. The Chambers of the Barons are mentioned above in the Great Roll 7 R. 1. (g). But whether theſe Chambers were for Lodgings or other uſes, I cannot tell. Although the Exchequer was wont to be holden at Weſtminſter (the Uſual place of the Kings Reſidence), yet it was ſometimes holden in other places if the King pleaſed (h). In the reign of K. Stephen, it was held, as it ſeems, at Wincheſter. For at that time Geoffrey de Clinton Fined to the Crown in ccc and x marks of ſilver, For the Miniſtry of the Treaſury of Winton (i): And about That time, the Earl of Glouceſter and Brien Fitz-Count heard the Accompts of the Treaſury at Winton (k). In the reign of K. Henry II. an Exchange was made at Wincheſter at the Exchequer, before K. Henry ſon of K. Henry II. and his Barons, Between William Earl of Eſſex, And Roger Fitz-Richard (l). In or about the 10th year of K. John, the Exchequer was held at Northampton from Michaelmas to Chriſtmaſs (m). Accordingly, Allowance was made to the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex

Middleſex for the charges of conveying the Rolls and Exchequer of the Barons, and the Exchequer and Rolls of the Jews, from London to Northampton (n). Of the Removal of the Exchequer from Weſtminſter to other places during the Second Period, I ſhall ſpeak hereafter (o).

X. Anciently the Kings Chancery was, as it ſeemeth, ordinarily kept and executed at his Court (p). But the Kings Chancellour performed part of his duty in the Exchequer alſo. He attended ex officio upon the affairs of the Revenue at the Exchequer, and acted of courſe together with the Juſticiers and Barons employed There; as may be ſeen elſewhere in this Volume (q). The Kings Seal (or the Great Seal) was commonly laid up in the Treaſury of the Exchequer (r). Writs of the Chancery were ſometimes made forth at the Exchequer; namely, Writs of Liberate, Computate, and Perdono. When they were made at the Exchequer, it was ſaid, Teſtibus his apud ſuch a place ad Scaccarium, to Diſtinguiſh them from the Writs made in the Kings Court (s). And theſe Writs were ſealed at the Exchequer with the Great Seal; which was often by the Juſticiers command, from the Lower Exchequer [or Receipt] to the Upper Exchequer, in order to diſpatch the buſineſſes of the Exchequer, and then was returned into the Purſe, and the Purſe ſealed-up by the Chancellour &c (t). The Writs of Summonce that iſſued for the Kings Debts and Rights, and the Writs to call Councils and to ſummon Barons and Knights ad habendum ſervitium, were ſometimes made at the Exchequer, and were ſealed There by the Spigurnell or Chaſe-wax [of the Chancery], and afterwards tranſmitted through England by the Uſher of the Exchequer (u). And there was a Clerk conſtantly attending at the Exchequer, called Clericus or Magiſter Scriptorij, who was, as it ſeems, a Chief Clerk of the Chancery (w); and a Clerk called Scriptor Rotuli de Cancellaria (x). The Dialogue ſets forth the Duty of this Clericus Scriptorij, or the nature of his office. “ He was to find fit perſons to write “ the Rolls of the Chancery, and the Writs that were made at the Exche- “ quer, and likewiſe the Summonces; and to take care that the ſame were “ Done Well (y). And in a very ancient Memorial concerning the Conſtitution of the Kings Houſe, which by the care of Alexander de Swereford (z) was regiſtred in the Red-Book, this Clerk is taken notice of amongſt the Officers of the Chancery; and is placed next, in order, to the Chancellour. “ This is, “ ſaith That Book, the Conſtitution of the Kings Houſe. The Chancellour “ has v ſhillings a-day, And ſo much in Simnells, Wine, and other ſmall “ things. Then it immediately follows, “ The Magiſter Scriptorij had at firſt “ x pence

Then it immediately follows: “ The Chaplain [under the Chancellour] who has the care of the Chapell and Reliques: To Him and to the other Under-officers of the Chapell an Allowance was made in the manner hereunder expreſſed (a). In the 14th year of K. Henry III, Robert de St. Medard Clerk was appointed by the King by a Cloſe writ, to Write at the Exchequer for Ralf Biſhop of Chicheſter the Kings Chancellour (b). One would be apt to think, the Chancery was ſeparated from the Exchequer at the latter end of K. Richard the firſts reign, or at the beginning of K. Johns: Becauſe about That time they begann, as it ſeems, to make diſtinct Rolls of the Chancery in a ſeries of years, to wit, Charter-rolls, Patent-rolls, Fine-rolls, and Cloſe-rolls; and to eſtreat or certify the ſame into the Exchequer. I cannot find, that in the preceeding times That method was uſed. Nor indeed doth there ſeem to have been a neceſſity for eſtreating the Chancery-rolls, whilſt the Chancellour with the Great Seal was uſually reſident at the Exchequer, and whilſt the acts of the Chancery cogniſable in the Exchequer were tranſacted at the Exchequer. Let me propoſe a Conjecture. It appears (c), that when K. Richard I. was in foreign parts, William de Longchamp the Kings Chief Juſticier and Chancellour, was put out of his office of Chief Juſticier by the power and intrigue of John Earl of Moreton. After which, although he continued Chancellour for ſome ſhort time, it is likely he did not attend and act at the Exchequer as before. By which means, the buſineſs of the Chancery which uſed to be done at the Exchequer might, probably, be done in another place, or might be put into a new method. In which new or ſeparate method it might afterwards continue; as in truth it hath ever ſince continued, in this particular. I cannot ſay, that the ſeparation of the Chancery from the Exchequer was brought about purely by the means or in the manner here mentioned. However, it is, I ſuppoſe, a happy thing in the event: Becauſe thereby the publick have gained many bundles of Chancery-Rolls, which are very Hiſtorical and Inſtructive.

CHAP. V.

Of the Perſons who Sat in the EXCHEQUER during this Firſt Period.

I. Explication of the Terms here uſed.
II. Of the Chief Juſticier.
III. Of Him and the other Barons.
IV. Of the Kings Chancellour.
V. Of the Treaſurer.

I. HAving, in the IVth Chapter, conſidered the Ancient State of the Exchequer, from the time of the Norman Conqueſt, to the End of the Reign of K. John: Let us now proceed to ſpeak of the perſons who Preſided and Sat in the Exchequer during the Same Period. At That time, in propriety of Speech, the Chief Juſticier (in the Kings abſence) Preſided at the Exchequer. For which reaſon the Dialogue uſually ſtyleth him Preſident (a). But with Him ſeveral Others uſed to Sit There. Sitting at the Exchequer is here to be underſtood of the Barons or Superiour Officers; Whoſe Service or Attendance There, was commonly (during this Period) ſignified by the phraſe, Sedendi ad Scaccarium (b). In proceſs of time, the phraſe ſedendi or reſidendi ad Scaccarium came to be uſed with more latitude, and to ſignify the Service not only of the Superiour Officers, but alſo That of others of a lower rank: Which Latter were Then frequently ſtyled Reſidentes ad Scaccarium; as may appear hereafter (c). At preſent, I am to ſpeak of thoſe Perſons only, who Sat at the Exchequer as the Kings Great Officers: Who were uſually called Barons of the Exchequer. It is to be underſtood, that the word Baro, Baron, hath been in ſeveral ages uſed in many and different ſignifications. Sometimes, Baro, in Foreign Countries, ſignified a Man (d). So alſo the Majores vaſſalli or Vaſſalli capitales of a Prince have been commonly called Barones; probably becauſe they were the Princes Seigneurial Men or Hommes de Foy; his Principal or Chief Tenants; who held Baronies or large Seigneuries of Him, and were Peers in his Court. And in England theſe Greater Vaſſals were moſt properly or uſually denoted by the word Barones: Which is a thing ſo well known, that one need not produce authorities in proof of it. Again; The Greater Vaſſals or Tenants of Earls Barons and Prelates were ſometimes ſtyled led Barones (e). The word Barones was alſo uſed in a Lower ſenſe, for perſons of comparatively mean condition. The Men of Cities, Towns, and Burghs, are ſtyled Barones, the Barons of ſuch a City, Town, or Burgh. The Citizens of London are ſtyled Homines, Cives, Burgenſes, and Barones, Londoniæ (f). The Men of the Cinque Ports were ſtyled Barones and Homines quinq; portuum (g); The former name continuing in uſe at This day. In fine, as the word Baron ſignified Dignity, ſo it was ſometimes taken in an evil ſenſe. In Italy, That name was given to certain Vagabonds (the Baroni di campo di fiore), who being deſtitute of fortunes or employment, lived by robberies and outrage (h). Thus the word Baron, had anciently an equivocal meaning, and was uſed for perſons of a very different rank and condition. But I leave this matter to the Gloſſariſts.

It may be obſerved, That ſeveral of the Great Men or Peers were wont to aſſiſt, by the Kings command, at the ordinary Pleas and Judgments in His Court; and were ſtyled, ſometimes Juſticiæ and Juſticiarij Regis, and ſometimes Barones or Barones Regis. So it was in the Kings Exchequer. The ſame perſons (or many of them) who were employed as Juſticiers in the Kings Court, were uſually employed as Juſticiers or Barons of the Exchequer. But when they acted at the Exchequer, they were moſt generally ſtyled Barones Scaccarij. Neverthleſs ſometimes Baro and Juſticiarius have been uſed without any perceiveable difference. Thus K. Stephen by his Charter granted and rendred to Miles de Glouceſter and his heirs, the Honour of Glouceſter and Brecknock, and all his other Lands and Tenements, in Sheriffwicks and other things, as fully as he held the ſame on the day of K. Henry the Firſts death: And I have covenanted (ſaith the King in That Charter) with Miles, ſicut Baroni & Juſticiario meo, that I will not implead him for any of the Lands which he held at the time of K. Henry the Firſts Death (i). Robert de Tatteſhal derained the Town of Wutton against againſt William Fitz-Hervy, in the Kings Court, before Walter Archbiſhop of Roan, Richard Biſhop of London, Geoffrey Fitz-Pierre, and others the Kings Juſticiers (& alijs Juſticiarijs Domini Regis); and the ſaid William acknowledged before Them (coram prædictis Baronibus), that the ſaid Town of Wutton was the Right and Inheritance of the ſaid Robert (k). The Perſons then, who Preſided and Sat at the Exchequer during this Firſt Period, were the Kings Juſticier and Barons; or (if you pleaſe) his Great Officers of State and Juſtice both of the Clergy and Laity. There, Sat the Kings Chief Juſticier, his Chancellour and Treaſurer, with ſeveral of the Juſticiers of his Court: And There, ſome other Great Officers of the Kings Palace, to wit, His Conſtable, Marſhall, and Chamberlains, acted, either in Perſon or by their Subſtitutes. And when they ſat at the Exchequer, they have been comprehended under the General name of Barons of the Exchequer.

In the ancient times, the ſeveral perſons who were employed by the King as Juſticiers in his Court or Juſticiers Itinerant, uſed in their reſpective ſpheres or places to take care of the Kings Revenue. They demiſed or let-out the Kings Manours; They aſſiſed the Aids, Eſcuages, and Tallages; They ſeized and certified eſcheats; They admitted Fines and Oblatas; They eſtreated amerciaments and other debts; and the like. However, the care and management of the Crown-Revenue did principally and ultimately belong to the Chief Juſticier, Treaſurer, Barons, and other Great Officers, who were by the Kings command appointed to act at the Exchequer; as appeareth by ſeveral inſtances in this Hiſtory.

II. Firſt, there was the Kings Chief Juſticier. Concerning him, as a Great Officer of the Kings Court, we have already diſcourſed (l). The following Allowances were made to ſeveral Accomptants, either by Writ or Award of the Chief Juſticier: To the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex for the corrody and equipage of an Approver (p); to the Sheriff of Hantſhire, for proviſion for the Kings horſes (q); to the Sheriff of

But it appearing to the Chief Juſticier and other Barons, that This Fine was comprehended in another Greater Fine wherewith Fulk was charged in the Roll of This year, they diſcharged him of the ſaid Leſſer Fine (n). Robert Adamſon had a debt of one hundred fourſcore and eighteen pounds ſix ſhillings and ſix pence ſet-off from him by the Juſticier and Barons at the Exchequer (o). Oliver de Traci was acquitted by the Barons, of xxviij l ſcutage-money (p). Reginald de Argentoem was acquitted by the Juſticier and Barons, of a Fine of x marks (q). IV. Another Great Officer in the Exchequer was the Kings Chancellour. He was One amongſt the Juſticiers and Barons that uſually Sat There. We find him tranſacting ſeveral things in the Exchequer in ſuch manner, as that we may take it to have been anciently part of his Duty to aſſiſt There. In the Fifth year of K. Stephen, Geoffrey the Kings Chancellour was Allowed, in his accompt rendred of the ferms of the Biſhopricks of Coventry and Hereford, and of the Abbey of Chertſey, x l and xv s, for his Livery, for the Forty three days in which he had not attended at the Exchequer, with the Kings other Barons (s). CHAP. VI.

Of the Buſineſs of the EXCHEQUER, during the ſaid Firſt Period.

I. Of Revenue.
II. Of Cauſes or Common Pleas.
III. Of Buſineſs of divers kinds.
IV. Of affairs of Policy.

CHAP. VI.

LET us, for Orders ſake, reduce the Buſineſs uſually tranſacted at the Exchequer during this Period, under theſe Three General Heads, viz. I. Affairs of Revenue with their Incidents; II. Cauſes; III. Common Buſineſs: And then let us ſee, How the caſe will ſtand.

I. Firſt, As to affairs of Revenue. There can be no doubt made, but that Theſe were tranſacted and ordered at the Kings Exchequer. To ſuperviſe, manage, and improve the Regal Revenue, was the Principal buſineſs of this Court; and the Proper care of the Chief Juſticier and Barons There. And This adminiſtred to them a great Variety of buſineſs as Incident thereto. For the Kings Revenue being ſome way or other concerned in the Fees, Lands, Tenures, and Chatells of the Subject, and in almoſt every thing elſe: From That Root a multiplicity of buſineſs ſprung. It is true, all the Kings Courts were in ſome meaſure concerned in his Revenue. The Juſticiers who held Pleas of the Crown, Pleas of the Foreſt, and Common Pleas, either in the Kings Court or in their reſpective Eyres, Recorded in their ſeveral Places the Fines, Amercements, Tallages, Aids, Scutages, and other things ariſing before them, from whence Revenue or profit came to the Crown. But ſuch things as aroſe before Them were ſoon after ſent or certifyed by them into the Kings Exchequer; to which Place, the affairs of the Royal Revenue tended as to their Center. But I forbear to ſpeak here concerning Revenue and Accompts, becauſe they will be treated of hereafter in diſtinct Chapters.

II. Secondly, As to Cauſes: Tis probable, that during this Firſt Period the Exchequer was a Court having juriſdiction in Civil Cauſes, or (as we uſually call them) Common Pleas. Which Cauſes or Pleas might be of the ſame kind with Thoſe, which according to the uſage of That Age were reſerved to the King and his Barons. But there being ſome obſcurity in this matter, I ſhall venture no farther than to eſſay upon it, and ſo leave it to the Readers Judgment. K. Henry I. by his Writ commanded Richard Biſhop of London to Do full right to the Abbot of Weſtminſter, againſt thoſe who forcibly broke his Church of Wutton in the Night time; ſaying, that if He (the Biſhop) did not, the Kings Barons of the Exchequer ſhould, Do Right in the caſe (a). In the reign of K. Henry II, or perhaps Before, a Writ iſſued in the name of Nigell Biſhop of Ely, Baron of the Exchequer (he was Then, I think, the Kings Treaſurer), directed to the Sheriff of Glouceſter, commanding him to cauſe the Monks of Bordeſley to hold peaceably their Land or Manour of Cumbe, whereof they were ſaized by the Kings Writ; and to juſticiate ſuch perſons as diſturbed

(a) Henricus Rex Angl., Ricardo Epiſcopo de Lundonia ſalutem. Mando tibi ut facias plenum rectum Abbati Weſtmonaſterij, de Hominibus qui fregerunt Eccleſiam ſuam de Winton[ia] noctu & armis. Et niſi feceris, Barones mei de Scaccario faciant fieri, ne audiam clamorem inde pro penuria recti. T. &c. Ex Chartular. Cœnobij Weſtmon. fol. 63. a. in Bibl. Cott. Fauſtina A. III.

(b) Nig-diſturbed them in their ſaiſin, contrary to the Kings Writs (b). In the 14th year of K. Henry II, Robert de Haſting Fined in C and vj s and viij d, That the Plea between Him and Ralf Moin might be [delayed till, or] adjourned to the Exchequer (c). In the 16th year, Hugh Bardul Fined in x marks, That a Recognition between him and John Burdun might be reſpited till the [next] Exchequer (d). In the 18th year, Robert ſon of Ernis Fined in v marks, That the Plea depending between him and Hugh Malebiſſe might be brought before the Chief Juſticier at the Exchequer (e). In the 23th year of That King, there were ſeveral Pleas at the Exchequer. And ſeveral perſons hereunder named were Amerced There, for Diſſeiſines, and for other cauſes relating to the ſaid Pleas: Henry de Pirarijs Fined or was Amerced in v marks, for a Default in an Appeal. William ſon of Ailric and others were Amerced There at half a mark, for an Unjuſt Diſſeiſine, Robert de Muntfort at x marks for the like, And others at other ſumms; And divers other perſons were amerced [upon the ſaid Pleas] at divers ſumms and for divers Cauſes (f). But ſome will ſay, by De placitis here, we are to underſtand only pecuniary pains or mulcts which offenders incurr: For ſo the Dialogue explaineth the word Placita (g). To which, I anſwer, That in theſe Revenue-Rolls Placita does in part ſignify Pecuniary matters, ſuch as Fines and Amercements. For as Such (that is, as Revenue) they came to be enterd in theſe Rolls. But we muſt add, that theſe Placita were Fines and Amercements Sett or Enterd-into upon the occaſion or ground of Pleas depending: As may be well collected from the Records here cited touching the Placita ad Scaccarium, and likewiſe from the ordinary import of the word Placitum; Which ſignified primarily, not a Pecuniary pain, but a Plea. Hence in the Revenue-Rolls, by Nova Placita and De Placitis is meant, the Revenue or Profit that aroſe from Pleas. And in That ſenſe Placita is uſed in other caſes. Thus by the phraſe Tertius denarius (that is, de placitis) Comitatus, is meant The Third part of the profit ariſing from Pleas in the Country; And by Placita & perquiſitiones Curiarum, is meant the profit ariſing by Pleas, and the other perquiſites of Courts. So that the words De placitis ad Scaccarium ſignify here, So much in Revenue ariſing from Pleas depending at the Exchequer. To proceed. In the ſame 23d year, there were Pleas at the Exchequer before the Juſticier: Ralf de Bakemore was amerced There at half a mark, Richard Fitz-Brien at xx s, and others in other ſumms of money (h). There were Pleas at the Exchequer before Bertram de Verdun, William Fitz-Stephen, and

And it is likely, this uſage of holding Pleas at the Exchequer, continued till the time when Common Pleas were ſeparated from the Kings Court, by the Great Charters of KK. John and Henry III; And that both the Kings Court and the Exchequer ceaſed to hold Common Pleas at or about the Same time, and by vertue of the Same Prohibition. For there are ſeveral Records (y), which ſay, it was forbidden by the Great Charter (of K. Henry III) to hold Common Pleas in the Exchequer, unleſs they related to the King, or to the Reſidents and Miniſters of the Exchequer. Now the Clauſe in That Great Charter relating to Pleas runs in general words, Communia placita non ſequantur Curiam noſtram; And the Exchequer is not There named. But, it ſeems, the Exchequer was underſtood to be forbidden to hold Common Pleas, by thoſe General words in the Clauſe, which appoint that from thenceforth Common Pleas ſhould not follow the Kings Court, but be held in a Certain Place to wit the Bank. And until That Prohibition Common Pleas were holden both in the Kings Court and in the Exchequer.

III. Thirdly, As to Common Buſineſs; ſeveral ſorts of things, during this Period, were wont to be done at the Exchequer, which had not relation either to Revenue or Pleas. Sometimes charters of Feoffment, Confirmation, and Releaſe; or other Charters, were made and ſealed at the Kings Exchequer before the Barons There. And ſometimes Conventions of divers kinds, and Final Concords, between Party and Party, were made at the Exchequer, with the ratifications thereof by Oath or otherwiſe according to the Cuſtom of thoſe times. Of Charters ſealed and Conventions or Concords made between Parties at the Exchequer, ſeveral inſtances may be ſeen in Books already printed (z). And to them I will add a few other inſtances taken out of Records or MSS. About the Beginning of the reign of K. Henry II, Mabel de Orgers made a Concord (importing a Sale and Releaſe of Land) with Roger de Brai, before the Kings Juſtices [Itinerant] at Dunſtaple; and afterwards granted and confirmed the ſame at the Exchequer, before Richard de Luci and the other Barons of the Exchequer (a). In the reign of the ſame King, William Earl of Eſſex granted to Roger Fitz-Richard and his heirs, the Town of Aynho, in exchange for Cumton: The Charter is without date, and concludes thus, Et notum ſit omnibus, quod iſtud Eſchambium factum fuit apud Wyntoniam ad Scaccarium, coram Domino Rege Henrico

To theſe precedents may be added, if you pleaſe, the Story told by Matthew Paris. A certain Lawyer who lived in the beginning of K. Johns Reign is repreſented by That Hiſtorian as ſuffering grievous Puniſhments after his Death for his Rapine and other Miſdeeds. He uſed (ſaith Matthew) to reſide at the Kings Exchequer, where he often received Gifts from each of the Parties litigant. Ad Scaccarium enim Regis reſidere conſueverat, ubi ab utraq; litigantium parte dona frequenter acceperat. *Matt. IV. Beſides affairs of Revenue, Cauſes, and Common buſineſs: There was (as I take it) ſome buſineſs of an extraordinary kind ſometimes tranſacted at the Exchequer both during this Firſt Period and Afterwards: That is to ſay, The Barons of the Kings Exchequer did ſometimes deal in affairs relating to the State, or Publick Service of the Crown and the Realm. This will not ſeem ſtrange to any man who conſiders, That the Exchequer was anciently holden in the Kings Court, before the King, if he was pleaſed to be preſent: That the Chief Juſticier (who was not only the Chief Judg, under the King, in all Cauſes, but was alſo a kind of Viceroy and Governour of the Realm in the Kings Abſence) Preſided as Such as well in the Exchequer, as in the Kings Court: That the Aſſeſſors at the Exchequer were ſome of the Kings Barons and Great Officers of State, who were his Ordinary Councellours: That in particular theſe Latter were expreſly ſtyled the Kings Council, even when they acted at the Exchequer in the ordinary Cauſes or Affairs to be Conſidered or Adjudged There: And laſtly, That the Exchequer was a Place where the Kings Council frequently met together about the Kings Buſineſs: I ſay, he that conſiders theſe things, will not think it ſtrange that the Barons of the Exchequer ſhould ſometimes be concerned in affairs relating to the Government and Defence of the Realm, and to the Conſervation of the Publick Peace. And this conjecture is ſupported by the teſtimony of the Treatiſe Magiſter & Diſcipulus, which is printed at the end of this Work. That Author ſpeaks thus. “ The Authority of this Court (viz. the Exchequer) is very great, as well in reſpect of the Kings Royal Image ſhining forth in his Great Seal which is kept in the Treaſury There, inſeparable from his other Treaſure, as alſo in reſpect of Them who Sit There; By whoſe wiſdom the whole Realm is preſerved in Order and Safety. For at the Exchequer reſided the Kings Chief Juſticier, who is next to the King in authority and juriſdiction. And There alſo do reſide other Great Men of the Realm, who are of the Kings Private Council &c (x). It is not to be underſtood, that affairs of Policy were the ordinary buſineſs of the Barons or Majores at the Exchequer: But that they attended upon thoſe affairs as occaſion required; and then probably they retired to the Thalamus Secretorum, the Council-chamber near the Great Exchequer, where they took adviſement together upon ſuch things as were proper to be conſiderd privately amongſt themſelves (y). To the teſtimony of this Famous Author, I will add a few other memoires.

In the Reign of K. Henry II, William Baſſet Sheriff of Warwickſhire, by command of the Barons [of the Exchequer], added Two Knights to the Five Knights, and Ten Sergeants who Before kept guard in Warwick-Caſtle (z). In the ſame Reign, Henry de Cornhill, being charged with xxxj l ij s & v d. for the Old Ferm of Kent and other things, alleged that his Father [Gervaſe] had laid out far more than That ſumm, by the expreſs command of the Barons [of the Exchequer], in Liveries or Appointments for Ships, and for Knights, and Serjeants, and others joined with them by order of the Kings Court, in the time of the Late War (a). And it appears, that Gervaſe de Cornhull had been employed in fitting-up of Ships, and providing neceſſaries for Knights in the Caſtles that were within his Bailywick (b). In the Reign of K. Richard I, when the Archbiſhop of Roan was made Chief Juſticier, He would do nothing (ſaith R. de Hoveden) in the Government of the Realm, but with the conſent of his Conjuſticiers, and with the Advice of the Barons of the Exchequer (c). Of the buſineſs and proceedings in the Exchequer during this Period, hitherto.

CHAP. VII.

LET us now ſpeak briefly concerning the Exchequer of the Jews. The King of England was wont to draw a conſiderable Revenue from the Jews reſiding in this Realm: namely, By Tallages, by Fines relating to Law-Proceedings, by Amerciaments impoſed on them for miſdemeaners, and by the Fines, Ranſomes, and Compoſitions, which they were forced to pay, For having the Kings Benevolence, for Protection, for Licence to Trade and negotiate, for Diſcharges for impriſonment, and the like. He would tallage the whole Community or Body of them at Pleaſure; and make them anſwer the tallages for one another. If they made default at the Atterminations or Days of Payment prefixed to them, they were charged with great Fines or Compoſitions for it. In ſumm, the King ſeemed to be abſolute Lord of their Eſtates and effects, and of the Perſons of Them, their Wives and Children. Tis true, He let them enjoy their Trade and acqueſts: But they ſeemed to Trade and acquire for His profit as well as their Own: For at one time or other, their Fortunes or great part of them came into His Coffers. They were a Numerous Body (being ſettled in many, eſpecially the Great Towns of the Realm): And by Traffick, and taking of Uſuries and Mortgages of the Kings Subjects, they became very Wealthy both in Money and Land. But as They fleeced the Subjects of the Realm, So the King fleeced Them. Theſe particulars afford a great variety of matter: Which I muſt draw into as narrow a compaſs as I can. In order to That, I muſt be content to mention ſome things that occur, relating to the Tallages laid upon the Jews, and the Amerciaments and Fines which they were wont to pay upon divers occaſions. In the 5th year of K. Henry II, the Jews paid to the Crown a Tallage or Donum. The Sheriff of Lincolnſhire paid into the Exchequer xl l, which he had levied on the Jews in his County (a). The Sheriff of Oxfordſhire paid-in xx marks, which he had levied on the Jews in his County (b). The Sheriff of Cambridgeſhire paid-in L marks, for the Donum of the Jews of Cambridg (c). The Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk paid-in the ſeveral ſumms hereunder mentioned, levied on the Jews of Norwich, Thetford, and Bongey, for their reſpective Donums nums (d). The ſame K. Henry II, anno Regni 33 circiter, took of the Jews a Fourth part of their Chatells by way of Tallage (e). In the Firſt year of K. Richard I, Iſaac ſon of Rabbi Fined in CC l, That he might be quit of [his part of] the Tallage impoſed upon the Jews by K. Henry II. at Geldeford (f): He anſwered great part of this Tallage in the next year (g). In the Third year of K. Richard I, Joſce ſon of Lic paid C s. towards the Second Donum of M marks charged on the Jews (h). Anno Domini 1210, K. John impriſoned the Jews throughout England, and took from them 66,000 marks (i). In the 12th year of K. John, at Briſtoll in the feaſt of All Saints, a Tallage was aſſeſſed upon the Jews. To this Tallage, Iſaac the Chirographer fined in five thouſand and one hundred marks, for himſelf his wife and children; And other Jews in their reſpective ſumms. Part of this Fine, together with ſeveral ſumms due from other Jews, was anſwered by John Fitz-Hugh in the Thirteenth year of K. John (k): And other part, together with other ſumms due from the Jews for the ſame Tallage, was anſwered by the ſaid John Fitz-Hugh in the fifteenth year of the ſame King (l). And in the 14th year of That King, xx l and odd was paid-in for an arrerage of the ſaid Tallage aſſeſſed at Briſtoll upon the Jews of London (m). In or about the 11th year of K. Henry III, a Tallage was impoſed impoſed on the Community of the Jews. The Jews of Canterbury made a Promiſſum or Fine for their contingent of it, by the hand of Walter de Kyrkeham and Simon de Hales (n). In the 14th year of K. Henry III, the Jews had Reſpite given them till the octaves of St. John Baptiſt, for payment of the reſidue of the Tallage lately aſſeſſed on them; provided, that at That time they paid Three parts of the ſaid reſidue, under pain of Doubling it; and as to the other Fourth part, for ſecuring the payment of It, they were to have the Bodies and Chatells of the reſt of the Jews (o). Aaron the Jew of York gave Lx marks, To be quit of the Tallage aſſeſſed in the xxjth year of K. Henry III, and four hundred and fourſcore marks for his Areres [of Tallage] for eight years paſt (p). In the 25th year of K. Henry III, a Precept was ſent to certain Jews of Exeter, to take care, at their peril, about levying and anſwering to the Crown their Contingent of the Tallage of twenty thouſand marks aſſeſſed on them, at the Terms appointed for That purpoſe (q). The Like Precept was ſent to the Jews of Winton; and to the Jews in Wilteſhire, Dorſetſhire, and other Counties (r). For the aſſeſſing of This Tallage, an Extract or Tallage-Roll was delivered out by the Kings order to the perſons to whoſe care That affair was committed (s). In or about the 28th year of K. Henry III, the Jews made Fine with the Crown in Twenty thouſand marks (t). About This time, there was alſo impoſed upon the Jews a Tallage of Sixty thouſand marks (u). And becauſe ſome of them had not paid their Contingent of This Tallage,

This Debt was required of the whole Body of the Jews, And They were to have Jurnets Effects and Charters to enable them to pay it (i).

Again; the Jews were wont to pay Fines to the King for Law-proceedings. Of This, a few inſtances, out of many, may ſuffice. Abraham and Deuſleſalt gave a mark of gold, that they might recover their Debts againſt Osbert de Leiceſter (k). Rubi Gotſce and other Jews to whom Earl Ranulf was indebted, gave x marks of gold, That the King would help them to recover their debts againſt the Earl (l). Copin the Jew of St. Edmonds gave xx marks, To have Right for the chatells which Slema his mother committed to Santon the Jew (m). Joſce Quatrebuches gave xl marks, That his ſon Hakelin might be dealt with according to Juſtice, in the Plea between Him and Adam de Colebroke (n). Abraham ſon of Rabbi gave ij ounces of gold, That a certain Recognition for the Manour of Maleſwurd, which was ſummoned before Juſtices Errant, might be brought before the Chief Juſticier (o). Benet ſon of Joſce Quatre Buches gave xx l, That the King would hear the Plea which he had againſt Abraham of London (p). The ſaid Benet Fined in CC marks, That he might have the charters and chatells of his Father, and an Accord between him and Iſaac and Abraham ſons of Rabbi; And that he might not (without ſpecial direction from the King) be impleaded for concealing his Fathers chatells (q). Benjamin and other not mentioned (as it ought to have been) in a charter which he had from the Earl of Arundel, that the Manour of Rowell was mortgaged to him (e). Leo of Glouceſter gave xx Marks, for that he was accuſed of being of the ſociety of Outlaws (f). And numberleſs other Fines and Amerciaments were impoſed on the Jews;which need not be here rehearſed.

If the Jews failed in paying the Debts they owed to the King, he treated them with great ſeverity. For example. The Jews of England being indebted to the King in five thouſand marks, the King by his Writ commands the Treaſurer and Juſtices of the Jews, to Diſtrain them for the ſame debts, by their Own bodies and the bodies of their Wives and Children, ſo that the money might not fail of being levyed, and ſent ſpeedily to the King into Gaſcony (g). A Writ iſſued out of the Exchequer to the Sheriff of Glouceſterſhire, commanding him to bring before the Barons on the Morrow of St. Andrew, the bodies of Michael ſon of Iſaac and other Jews, to hear their Judgment de corporibus ſuis, (according to the Starrs they had made to the King) for not obſerving the Days prefixt to them for payment of their Fine of Twenty thouſand marks. And the Sheriff was ordered to bring before the Barons at the ſaid Day, all the Chirographs and Tallies made to the Jews for Debts, that could be found in the Chirographers Cheſts, and to ſeize into the Kings hands all the Lands, houſes, and chatells of the Jews, the ſame having been forfeited by their Default of payment of the ſaid Fine (h). K. Henry III. borrowed of Richard Earl of Cornwal five thouſand marks ſterling: And, for ſecuring the repayment thereof, aſſigned and ſet-over all his Jews of England to the ſaid Earl; and bound them to pay the Earl three thouſand marks which they owed to the King, at certain terms or days, under pain of forfeiting five hundred pounds for every default of payment; and gave the Earl power to diſtrein them by their chatells and bodies for the ſame (i). brew, ſometimes in Latin, and ſometimes in French. Some were written All in Hebrew: Others had only an Hebrew Subſignation. Of the Former ſort was That made between the Priour of Dovor and Jacob ſon of Melk (r); And Mr Selden hath publiſhed two others (s). Beſides which, ſeveral of That ſort may be ſeen in Repoſitories. Again; ſome of them were in French (t); And others in Latin. The moſt Ancient Jewiſh Charter that I have met with (to my remembrance) is That of Aaron the Jew of Lincoln, made about the year 1176 (22 Hen II.), the tenour whereof is entred in the Great Roll of the 9th year of K. Richard I. It is a kind of a Releaſe; And may be ſeen in the Margin (u).

V. When the Jews made any Charter or Contract, one part of it was to be laid up in a Publick Cheſt provided for that purpoſe, called the Cheſt of the Chirographs or of the Chirographers. This part of the Chirograph was called Pes Cirographi. Of This I ſhall ſpeak by and by (w). In the mean time let us mention the other Officers of the Judaiſm. Beſides ſeveral Clerks who were employed in writing the Rolls and Memoranda of the Judaiſm, there were certain Officers called Chirographarij, Chirographers, and Coffrarij, Cofferers; who had the cuſtody of the Cheſts above mentioned, and of the Chirographs and charters made between the Jews, or between Them and Chriſtians. It is likely, they made liſts or dockets in writing of all the chirographs that were put-into or taken-out of the Cheſts. In the archive of the Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter, there is a Roll containing dockets or memorandums of divers chirographs or ſecurities made to the Jews. It conſiſteth of ſix membranes: and beginneth at the Top with the year of the King: being digeſted by the days of the month; as appeareth hereunder in the margin. It beginns at the Ninth year of K. Henry III, and ſo goeth forward (x). This Roll was, probably, a Roll made by ſome Juſtice of the Jews, or by ſome Chirographer, or Clerk of the Judaiſm. and heir of Robert de Hereford paid the Debt to Aaron on Rogers behalf, as appeared by a Starr of Releaſe made by Aaron and enrolled in the Rolls of the Judaiſm. Hereupon, the Juſtices of the Jews were commanded to deliver up the ſaid Charters to Adam. And in regard one of the ſaid Charters lay in the Old Cheſt of the Judaiſm, the King now commands the Barons of the Exchequer, to open That Cheſt, to take out the Charter, and to deliver it to Adam on Rogers behalf (l). Whereas William le Brun and Iſolde his wife had ſatisfied for certain debts which they owed to the Jews, the King by his Writ commanded the Barons of the Exchequer and the Juſtices of the Jews, to cauſe all the Writings and Starrs relating to thoſe debts, that could be found in the Chirographers Cheſts, to be taken out and delivered cancelled to the ſaid William and Iſolde (m). If a Charter made to a Jew (was loſt, or) could not be found in the Cheſt: it was uſual for the Jew to whom it was made, when he was ſatisfyed the money due upon it, to come and make an Acknowledgment in the Exchequer by way of Releaſe to the party. Thus, Leo ſon of Creſſe came before the Barons of the Exchequer, and declared that he had cancelled a certain charter of Mortgage made between him and Richard de Weſtmylne, and had releaſed the debt to Richard and his heirs; and granted withall, that if the ſaid Charter hapned to be found in the Cheſt of Chirographs or elſewhere, it ſhould be of no force (n). For this method of having one Part of the Jewiſh Charters or Chirographs laid up in the Kings Treaſury, there ſeems to have been Two Principal Reaſons: One, To prevent the Falſity of the Jews; The Other, To enable the King to recover the Eſtates and Credits of the Jews, and get them into his Coffers, whenever they ſhould become (as they often did) Forfeited or Devolute to the Crown.

It hath been ſaid before (o), that there were ſeveral Clerks in the Exchequer of the Jews, for expediting the buſineſs There, beſides the Chirographers. The Juſtices of the Jews had Clerks under them (p). There was a Cuſtos Rotulorum. William de Middelton was Cuſtos Rotulorum & Brevium in the Judaiſm, and received of the King Ten pounds a-year for his Salary (q). William de Derby and Nicolas de Kyngeſton officiated in the Judaiſm, about levying the Tallage aſſeſſed upon the Jews by Frere Joſep de Chauncy and Pain de Chaworth; and had four

VI. The Judaiſm ſeems to have been guided in general by the Law and Uſage of the Exchequer: Save that in ſome caſes there was a peculiar Law or Rule, which was called the Law, Aſſiſe, or Cuſtom of Judaiſm. Some of the Cuſtoms and Laws that obtained as well amongſt the Community of the Jews, as alſo in the Judaiſm at the Exchequer, may be collected from the precedents which I ſhall offer in this ſection. The Jews had certain Chapters or Meetings for affairs relating to themſelves. Lia the Jeweſs of Briſtoll Fined in x Beſants, That a Convention, made between Her and her Children Before the Jews, might be Holden (t); and Judas a Jew of Briſtoll Fined in two ounces of gold, That it might be Found by Enqueſt in a Chapter of the Jews, Whether a Jew might take Uſury of a Jew (u). Benet the Brother of Aaron the Jew of Lincoln Fined in xx marks, To have a Verdict or Declaration upon Oath according to the Cuſtome of the Jews, To Find whether Urſell the Jew of Lincoln was a Forger or not, in ſuch manner as it was uſual to convict Jews of Forgery (w). Simon de Kyme gave xx marks, To have a Jury of lawful Chriſtians and Jews, to Find, Whether or no Philipp de Kyme Simons Father owed, at the time of his death, to Deodonate Biſhop of the Jews, and to other Jews a Debt which Thoſe Jews demanded of Simon, upon certain Charters which they pretended were made to them by Philipp de Kyme (x). In the Reign of K. Richard I, certain Rules, entituled Capitula de Judæis, were made and given in charge to the Juſtices Errant. They contain ſeveral Items, for regulation of the Jews, their Debts, impreſts, and charters; together with other things relating to the Judaiſm:

rendred an Accompt in the Exchequer, of the Chevage of the Judaiſm (b). In the ſame Kings Reign, the matter of a certain Falſity committed in the Judaiſm, was, at the inſtance of the Queens Attorneys, brought before the Treaſurer and Barons to be examined and rectifyed. They went and ſat in the Exchequer of the Jews. And finding that Robert de Ludham a Juſtice of the Jews had committed the Falſity, they put him out of his Office, and committed him to Priſon (c). At the ſame time, Hamond Hauteyn another Juſtice of the Jews was called to an account by the Treaſurer and Barons. And being convicted before Them of ſeveral miſdemeaners, he was by Them ſuſpended from his office (d).

VIII. Before I conclude, I will take leave to mention a few things relating to the Jews; which were not well reducible to the foregoing heads of this Chapter, and may therefore be ſet down here in a miſcellaneous way. In general, the King was wont (as hath been ſaid before) to uſe the Jews with ſeverity; eſpecially when they were refractory: Howbeit, when they were obedient and complyant, he ſhewed them favour, and gave them proofs of his Lenity. K. John, in the ſecond year of his reign, granted a Charter of Liberties to the Jews of England and Normandy: to wit, That they might reſide in the Kings Dominion freely and honourably; that they might hold of K. John all things which they held of K. Henry I, and which they now rightfully hold, in lands, fees, mortgages, and purchaſes; and that they ſhould have all their Liberties and Cuſtoms, as amply as they had them in the time of K. Henry I; that if a plaint was moved between a Christian and a Jew, he who appealed the other ſhould produce witneſſes to deraigne his plaint, namely a lawful Christian and a lawful Jew; that if a Jew had a Writ concerning his plaint, ſuch Writ ſhould be his Witneſs; that if a Christian had a plaint againſt a Jew, the plaint ſhould be tried by the Jews peers; that when a Jew died, his body ſhould not be detained above-ground, and his heir ſhould have his chatells and credits, in caſe he had an heir that would anſwer for him and Do right touching his debts and forfeitures, that the Jews might lawfully receive and buy all things which were brought to them,

The ſame King granted to Elyas le Evesk the Jew, that for four years then next following, he ſhould not be tallaged at above C l. by the year (g). The King had cauſed Proclamation to be made in the ſeveral Counties of England, that all perſons who owed Debts in the Judaiſm, ſhould come before Him, and make a repreſentation of their caſe, in order to obtain relief and favour therein. This Proclamation was iſſued, to the intent that the Jews of England, being terrified with the Kings diſpleaſure, might the more willingly and ſpeedily pay-in their Laſt Tallage. But in regard Maſter Elias the Jew had acquitted himſelf to the King by punctual payment of his proportion of That Tallage; the King by his Writ commanded the Barons to cauſe Proclamation to be made, that Elias his Debtors ſhould not come to the Exchequer, to have their Debts either compounded or transferred to others, but ſhould pay their reſpective Debts to Elias himſelf; And ordered the Barons, not to intermeddle with his Debts or chatells under colour of the Firſt Proclamation (h). K. Edward I. by his Writ commanded the Barons to Atterminate certain Jews, in reſpect of their poverty, for the Debts they owed to the Crown (i): In the ſame Kings reign, Belia the Jeweſs complained to the King, That whereas the Community of the Jews had Fined to his Majeſty in Twelve thouſand pounds, the Aſſeſſours of That Fine had tallaged her ſo rigorouſly, that ſhe had nothing left to live on, and that her ſons and daughters were likewiſe impriſoned for the ſame cauſe. K. Henry III, out of his Royal grace to the Jews, and for the ſupport of ſuch of them as embraced the Chriſtian Religion and were deſtitute of livelyhood, founded a Houſe at London called Domus Converſorum, The Houſe for the Converts; and endowed it with a competent Revenue. Which Houſe was wont to be committed by the King to the care and rule of ſome Clergyman of Diſtinction, who was ſtyled Cuſtos Domus Converſorum and Gardein des Converſes. It was ſcituate in Chanceller-lane near the New Temple; and hath been called in the modern times The Rolls. I have not met with the Charter or Inſtrument of Foundation of this Houſe. But K. Henry III, by Patent, granted to Nicolas the Goldſmith and Maud his wife, Converts, eight pence per week, out of the Rents of the Houſe of Converts, which the King had founded de proprijs bonis & elemoſinis ſuis (l). And in the ſubſequent times, in divers Patents and other Publick Acts, mention is made of K. Henry the Thirds foundation of the Houſe of Converts. K. Edward I. granted to the Cuſtos and Converts of the ſaid Houſe fourſcore marks, to be received yearly at the Exchequer during his Pleaſure, out of the Fines, amercements, forfeitures, and other iſſues of the Judaiſm, for the ſupport of the ſaid Converts and of the Fabrick of their Chapell (m). And K. Edward II. granted to William de Ayremynne, then Clerk or Keeper of the Rolls of the Chancery, the Cuſtody of the Houſe of Converts at London, To hold during his life: And the Converts of the ſaid Houſe, and all the tenants of it, were commanded to be intendant and reſpondent to the ſaid William as Keeper of the Houſe and Converts aforeſaid, in all things relating to the ſaid Cuſtody (n).

Of the RECEIPT of EXCHEQUER.

I. Of Payments in Theſauro.
II. Of payments in Camera Curiæ.
III. Of the Scaccarium Receptæ.
IV. Of payments in the Wardrobe, the Tower of London, and the New Temple.

I. EXCHEQUER, was at firſt a General Name, ſignifying as well the Place where the Kings Revenue was ſupervised and managed, as That where it was wont to be paid-in. In the Early times, That part of the Exchequer, where the Kings Treaſure was Told Repoſited or Iſſued, was uſually called Theſaurus. When a man paid money into the Exchequer, it was ſaid In Theſauro liberavit So much. Which phraſe was conſtantly uſed to ſignify actual payments made at the Exchequer; as may be ſeen in numberleſs inſtances: And the ſame phraſe continueth in uſe at this day. Again; ſometimes when Rolls were delivered into the Exchequer, containing debts to be put in Charge pro Rege, or as Records to be repoſited There, they were ſaid to be liberati in Theſauro, delivered into the Treaſury or Exchequer. Many inſtances hereof may be found in This Volume; particularly, as to the Rolls delivered-in by Sheriffs and Juſtices Itinerant. In proceſs of time, the Receipt of Exchequer was uſually called, Inferius Scaccarium, Scaccarium de Recepta, Recepta Scaccarij; as will hereafter appear.

II. Although the Exchequer was the Great or Principal Place, at which the Kings money was to be anſwered and paid: Yet we find that anciently, the Kings money was ſometimes paid into the Camera Curiæ or Camera Regis; And was ſometimes iſſued Thence. Of this I will give ſome examples; and then conſider, How they are, probably, to be underſtood. Robert de Montfort paid Lx s to William Malduit, ad Cameram Curiæ (a). The Sheriff of Kent paid x l. to Warin Fitz-Gerold, in Camera Curiæ (b). Simon Fitz-William paid C and xlvij l. and odd into the Receipt, And xxviij l. to Ralf Fitz-Stephen, in Camera Curiæ (c). The Biſhop of Durham paid v marks of gold to the King himſelf in Camera Curiæ (d). Richard ſon of Turſtin paid vij l and xvj d. at the Treaſury, And x marks to the King himſelf in Camera Curiæ (e). Payments were made in the Camera Curiæ or or Camera Regis, in like manner; by Ralf Briton (f), Gilbert ſon of Fergus (g), Geoffrey le Blund (h), Jurnet the Jew (i), William de St. Maries Church (k), Hugh de Fokinton (l), Henry de Oili (m), The Executours of Philipp Biſhop of Durham (n), Nevill (o), Robert de Viepont (p), Ralf Aſwi (q), Reginald de Paris (r), John Birkin (s), Colinus de Breautee (t), and others. So alſo, the Sheriff of Dorſet and Somerſet Received money de Camera Regis (u). Next; let us enquire, What was, probably, meant by the Camera Curiæ or Regis. By It may be meant, in theſe inſtances, Either the Kings Court and Palace, Or his Treaſury. We have obſerved before in another place (w), that Camera has been ſometimes uſed in much the ſame ſenſe with Palatium or Curia Regis. In That ſenſe it is uſed by William of Malmesbury; who ſays, that the Biſhop of Salisbury was arreſted in Camera Curiæ, in the Kings Court or Palace, and the Biſhop of Lincoln in his own Hoſtel (x). And even in the modern ages Camera hath been ſometimes uſed to ſignify ones Houſe (y). Again, by Camera was ſometimes meant a Treaſury, ærarium, or theſauraria: From whence the Officers called Camerarij, who dealt in Revenue, had their Name; as it hath been obſerved by Sir H. Spelman (z); and may be confirmed ſeveral other ways. The queſtion then may be, Whether by Camera Curiæ and Regis in theſe inſtances, was meant, the Kings Treaſury, and that part of the Exchequer which was afterwards, in the reign of K. Henry III. and downwards, called the Receipt: Or whether by It was meant the Kings Palace or Court. Perhaps, it may be thought that by this phraſe Camera Curiæ, the Receipt of Exchequer may be meant; becauſe in ſome of the inſtances juſt above cited, the money mentioned to be paid in Camera Curiæ or Regis was paid to the Kings Chamberlains, who had in part the Care of the Kings money at the Receipt: For William Mauduit and Ralf Fitz-Stephen were reſpectively Chamberlains (a); and I think,

Turpin de Camera abovenamed (b) was alſo one of the Kings Chamberlains. But upon the whole matter, I preſume, we ſhall judg moſt rightly, if we take the Camera Curiæ here for the Kings Court or Palace. For Firſt, ſome of the payments in Camera abovecited being made to the King himſelf: it ſeemeth moſt natural to ſuppoſe, they were made in his Palace or Court; eſpecially conſidering that the payment in thoſe caſes is certified to the Barons per Breve Regis; which was according to the Courſe of Certifying things done at the Kings Palace; whereas the uſual Courſe of getting a Payment which had been made at the Receipt, to be Allowed at the Exchequer, was by producing a Tally before the Barons. Secondly, it is obſervable that in ſome of the inſtances abovecited, the Camera Curiæ is expreſsly diſtinguiſhed from the Theſaurus or Treaſury: As, where it is ſaid (c), that Richard ſon of Turſtin paid ſo much in Theſauro and ſo much in Camera Curiæ. Thirdly, we find Revenue was ſometimes anſwered in Camera Regis, as a Place diſtinct from the Exchequer or Receipt, even long after the times wherein there is frequent mention made of the Recepta and Scaccarium de Recepta. As in the reign of K. Edward II, in the caſe of Geoffrey de Weſton: Who paid money in Camera Regis, and had received Two Tallies teſtifying his Payment: But Thoſe Tallies being loſt, he vouched the Countertallies; which were produced in the Exchequer by the Clerk of the Kings Chamber (d): And in the caſe of Richard Squier; who rendred an Accompt and fully anſwered in the Kings Chamber, the iſſues of a Manour committed to him by Privy Seal (e): And in the caſe of the perſons who had the Cuſtody of certain Lands forfeited or eſcheated to the Crown; Who anſwered the iſſues thereof in the Kings Chamber (f). Beſides; it appeareth, that anciently there were certain Clerks belonging to the Kings Chamber, who were ſtyled Clerici de Camera (g): and that there was Then alſo a Treaſure or Treaſury called Theſaurus Cameræ (h). So that upon the matter, it is likely the Payment in Camera was a more Private and unſolemn payment than that which was made at the Receipt of Exchequer, and Different from It. And according to this conſtruction, a payment de Camera is ſometimes uſed, as it ſeems, to ſignify a payment out of a mans Private purſe, in diſtinction from a payment to be made out of Land or a like viſible Fund. So, William de Braioſa granted to Oliver de Traci xx l. Sterling, to be received yearly of William

III. During the Second Period, the Receipt was ſometimes called Scaccarium Receptæ or de Recepta (l), Recepta Scaccarij (m), and Inferius Scaccarium (n). In the 5th year of K. Edward II, Walter de Langeton Biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield Treaſurer, and the Barons, ſitting at the Receipt to take the Profers of Accomptants in the Utas of Eaſter, ſeveral Great Men came Thither, and with threats enjoined the Biſhop not to act any longer in the Treaſurers Office. The Barons thereupon certified the King of the whole matter at large, and prayed the King to let them know his Pleaſure therein. The whole proceeding in this caſe appears in the Record hereunder cited (o).

IV. It is to be underſtood, that the King had ſeveral Treaſuries. For though the Receipt of Exchequer was the Principal place where his Treaſure was to be paid-in: Yet it was ſometimes paid and repoſited (at leaſt for the preſent) in ſome other places: For inſtance, in the Kings Wardrobe, in the Tower of London,

CHAP. IX.

Of the CROWN-REVENUE.

I. Of the Species wherein the ancient Crown-Revenue was uſually paid.
II. Of payment ad penſum, Blank, and by Tale.
III. Of the Combuſtion, Examen, and Aſſay.

CHAP. IX.

I. WHILST I am diſcourſing of the Kings Exchequer, I am obliged to give ſome account of the Revenue which was managed There. It is not my deſign to form a juſt diſcourſe concerning the Revenue; but to handle it only as it is incident to the main argument. In this Chapter I will ſpeak briefly concerning the Species wherein the Crown-Revenue was in Ancient times generally rendred: And in the following Chapters will mention ſome of the principal Parts or Branches of which the Crown-Revenue conſiſted; in order to ſhew in general How it aroſe. In the early days next after the Norman Conqueſt (if we are rightly informed) there was very little Money in ſpecie in the Realm. Then, the Tenants of Knights fees anſwered to their Lords by Military ſervices; and the Tenants of Socage-lands and Demeanes (in great meaſure) by Work and Proviſions. The ingenious Authour of the Dialogue concerning the Exchequer tells us, That from the time of the Norman Conqueſt, till the Reign of K. Henry I, the rents or ferms due to the King were wont to be rendred in Proviſions and Neceſſaries for his Houſhold (a): And that in K. Henry the Firſts time, the ſame were changed into money. Afterwards, in the ſucceeding times, the Revenue of the Crown was anſwered or paid-in Chiefly in Gold and Silver: Sometimes in Palfreys, Deſtriers, Chaſcurs, Leveriers, Hawks and Falcons (to wit, in Horſes, Dogs, and Birds for Game, of divers ſorts); and in Things of other kinds. All which, may be comprized under the General name of Revenue; the ſame having been rendred by the Party, and accepted by the Crown as Such. Sometimes an entire Payment or Render was made, both in Gold or Silver and in Horſes, Dogs &c together: And ſometimes in Horſes, Dogs &c Singly. Of which matters there are many inſtances to be ſeen in this Volume: and ſome may be here ſubjoined. Bernard the Scribe Fined in a Palfrey for the Grant of certain Land (b). Outi of Lincoln Fined in one Hundred Norway Hawks and one Hundred Girfals; Four of the Hawks and Six of the Girfals were to be White ones; If he could not get Four White Hawks, he was to give Four White Girfals inſtead of them (c). Ralf ſon of Drogo made fine in five hawks and five girfalcons for himſelf, And in two hawks for Nicolas de Sigillo: Maurice de Creon in one Norway hawk and one Girfalcon (d): Stephen de Dammartin in one hawk and one girfalcon (e): Walter Cnot in three hawks and three girfalcons

And others in like manner. When a Render was to be made in Horſes, Dogs &c, it was frequent to change the ſame into money, viz. So much for a Hawk, or So much for a Palfrey, or the like; that is, in caſe the King would accept of ſuch commutation; for the Thing was to be rendred in Kind, if the King ſo pleaſed. As in the caſe of William Earl of Arundel (n). But to omitt theſe things; let us proceed to ſpeak briefly concerning the Revenue which was paid in Gold or Silver. There being ſome obſcurity in this ſubject, I ſhall treat of it barely in a miſcellaneous way, obſerving only the order of time in ſetting down what I have to offer.

II. In the moſt ancient times next after the Norman Conqueſt, payments at the Exchequer were made ad ſcalam and ad penſum; and in Blank ſilver and Money numero or by Tale. I will here firſt ſet-down a conjectural explication of this matter; and afterwards will recite ſome Records and memorials tending to illuſtrate or confirm it. The Payment ad ſcalam was payment by Weight; and ſo was the Payment ad penſum. When money was paid by weight, and the Kings officers accepted vj d over and above each pound or xx s of ſilver paid-in, it was called Payment ad ſcalam. This kind of payment was very ancient. And in thoſe early times, when there was but little of the Silver ſpecies running, and the arts of depraving it were not yet invented, it was thought ſufficient that vj d advance ſhould be paid for every pound or xx s, to make good the Weight. This vj d per pound ſeems to have been of the like nature with the Trebuchet uſed in France, that is, Vantage-money, or ſo much added to turn the Scale. When Payment was made ad penſum, the perſon paying was to make good the deficiency of Weight, though it was more than vj d per xx s. But in regard money paid-in by the Kings Fermers might happen to be deficient in Fineneſs as well as Weight, it was found neceſſary to uſe another method of Tryal in payments, and That was by Combuſtion or melting-down part of the money paid-in, and reducing it to Veſſel or Plate of the due Fineneſs.

CHAP. IX.

Fineneſs. The Payment by Combuſtion was twofold, Real and Nominal: Real, when a Sample of the Ferm paid was put into the furnace and melted: Nominal, when a Twentieth part or i s per xx s was paid and accepted in lieu of actual Combuſtion: This latter ſeems to have been admitted, to prevent the trouble, charge, and inconvenience of actual Combuſtion. When the Ferm paid-in was Melted-down, or the ſupplement made by adding j s to each xx s, the Ferm was ſaid to be dealbated or blanched. As, ſuppoſe a Ferm of C l was paid into the Exchequer; after the Combuſtion it was ſaid to be C l Blank. Nevertheleſs, it is (I conceive) to be underſtood, that in ſome particular times, if there was cauſe, namely if the Ferm paid-in hapned to be of baſer allay than ordinary, the Kings officers at the Exchequer required more than j s per xx s for combuſtion-money. The Payment made numero or by Tale needs no explication; it being according to modern uſage. What I have here ſaid agrees in ſome meaſure with the account, given by a late Worthy Authour, of the payment ad ſcalam and ad penſum (o). He ſaith, the ſolutio ad ſcalam, was by paying ſixpence per pound with every pound paid-in by Tale. “And this is, ſaith he, the meaning of that frequent expreſſion in the ancient Pipe-rolls, In theſauro C l ad ſcalam; which ſeems to be one hundred pounds and one hundred ſixpences. The ſolutio ad penſum, he ſaith, was the payment of money into the Exchequer by full weight, viz. that a pound, or xx s in ſilver numero by tale, ſhould not be received for a pound unleſs it did exactly weigh a pound weight Troy, or twelve ounces; and if it wanted any, that then the Payer ſhould make good the weight by adding other money, although it amounted to more or leſs than vj d in the pound (which was the ſolutio ad ſcalam). And thus frequently occurs in the Pipe-rolls, In theſauro C l ad penſum, or full weight (p). In this caſe it may be obſerved, that there is frequent mention made in the moſt ancient Pipe-rolls, of payment ad penſum; but not (that I know) of payment ad ſcalam. On the other part, his obſervation touching the payment ad ſcalam, viz. in the ſix pence per pound advance, is (I believe) juſt. It is confirmed by the caſe of the Prioury of the Trinity of London; which I ſhall here ſet-down. In That inſtance it appears, That xxv l ad ſcalam was the ſame with xxv l xij s vj d numero or by tale; and was ſo accounted for many years together, namely from the Reign of K. Henry I, to the end of the Reign of K. Edward I, perhaps longer; The xij s vj d Advance upon the Payment by Tale being vj d for every Pound reſerved ad ſcalam. The caſe was This. K. Henry I. granted and confirmed to the Prioury of the H. Trinity in London, for the Soul of Q. Maud his Wife, xxv l ad Scalam per annum, de reditibus ipſius Reginæ in Exonia, quas prædicta Regina Matilda eis dedit in vita ſua (q). This xxv l ad Scalam is expreſsly called xxv l Blank in a Writ of K. Henry I, as appears hereunder (r). In this Writ the King, reciting that he had confirmed Queen Mauds Grant to the Canons of the H. Trinity in London, of xxv l Blank the Ferm (or part of the Ferm) of the City of Exeter, Commands his Chief Juſticier and Barons of his Exchequer, to conſtrain the Sheriff of Devonſhire to pay the ſame to the ſaid Canons. For this xxv l Blank there was paid to the ſaid Canons, in the 5th year of K. Stephen, by Tale xxv l xij s and vj d; As appears by the Accompt of Geoffrey de Furnellis Sheriff of Devonſhire (s). And the like Payment of xxv l xij s and vj d by Tale, was made to the Canons in the reigns of ſeveral ſubſequent Kings: Namely, in the 12th year of K. Henry II (t): In the 30th year of K. Henry II.

Of Payments made ad penſum there are ſeveral inſtances in this Volume.

In the ancient times, Payments or at leaſt Computations were made by Marks and Half marks, Ounces and Half ounces, of Gold &c: And in Pounds, Marks, Half marks, ſhillings, Pence, &c, of Silver. The Mark of Gold was equivalent to Six pounds (or Sixſcore ſhillings) of Silver (c). The Abbot of Thorney Fined to K. Stephen in one mark of gold, for a Market at Jakeſley. For That mark of gold he paid ix marks of ſilver (or ſix pounds) to the Kings uſe, and was Quit (d). Peter Tark paid vj l in ſilver for one mark of gold (e); And others in like manner. The ounce of Gold was equivalent to fifteen ſhillings in ſilver (f). The Pound of ſilver by tale was xx ſhillings, the mark of ſilver xiij s iiij d, and the ſhilling conſiſted of xij pence. There was a Coin called Denarius, a Penny, in the Reign of K. Stephen. Algar and Sprackling were Amerced at x marks of ſilver, for a miſdemeaner [in coining or utterting] of Falſe Denarij (g). Unleſs you think, Denarij here ſignifies Money at large, and not Pennies or any particular Piece of Coin. Creſſelin the Jew of Wincheſter was amerced C marks, He paid the King C beſants, and was acquitted of the C marks (h). But in this caſe perhaps the King accepted of the beſants ex mera gratia. For, as I take it, a beſant was of the value of ij s. And ij s was anſwered in lieu of a talent, being the yearly rent of land in Hameldon (i). In the 5th year of K. Richard I, Benet ſon of Iſaac a Jew ſtands charged with a hundred pounds and one mark of Gold de obol. Muſce or Muſcij, for a Fine (k). And in a Chara Charter of K. Henry III, mention is made of xxiiij oboli de Murce, payable to the Church of Weſtminſtre (l). But what was meant by oboli de Muſce or de Murce, I do not know. In the 4th year of K. Henry II, William de Caiſnei Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk accompted for xl s de commutatione monetæ of the town of Ipſwich (m): And the Sheriff of London for xij l by tale, pro commutatione monetæ (n).

In or about the year 1175 (22. Hen. 2.) New money was made in England, as the Norman Chronicle relates (o). In the 29th year of K. Henry II, Hugh ſon of Gernagan was to pay CCCC l of the Old money, for his Donum: He paid CCC xliij l xv s xj d in the New money, for CCCLxxv l iij s ix d of the Old; and the remainder, to wit, xxiiij l xvj s iij d, he paid in Blank ſilver. Ralf de Crammavill was to pay C l of the Old money, for his Donum: He paid fourſcore and ix l xj s viij d in New money, for C l of the Old money. Hugh de Verli was to pay C l of the Old money, for his Donum: He paid fourſcore and ix l xj s viij d of the New money, for C l of the Old. Richard de Wivill was to pay C l of the Old money, for his Donum: He paid fourſcore pounds and Lxvj s viij d of New money, for the C l of the Old (p).

Somewhat muſt be ſaid here concerning the argentum blancum, and the Dealbation (q). In the 4th year of K. Henry II, the Sheriffs of London paid to Roger the Goldſmith five marks of ſilver for his Livery, and ſeven marks of ſilver and ſeven ſhillings and four pence in argento blanco for work to be done upon the Kings Chapell (r). In the 15th year of That King, Walter Hoſe accompted for ninety pounds the Ferm of Trentham for three years. He had certain Allowances made to him: And was charged with iiij l x s pro Blanco firmæ; which was one ſhilling per pound (s). In the 17th year of the ſame King, the Sheriffs of London paid, by the Kings order, xxij s for gold to gild the Goſpell uſed in the Kings Chapell, and xx s in argento blanco for a ſilver Cenſer and pix for the Kings Chapell (t). Anno 26. H. 2, the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex accompted for ix l and v s and iiij d in Pennies [or Money], and v marks in Blank Silver, and nine ſmall Gold Rings, and three Gold Fermailes (or Claſps), being the Chattels of Ydonea who was executed for Clipping the Denarij [or Money] (u). Anno 23° of K. Henry II, Walter de Grimesby had forfeited to the King

King his Chatells, which confiſted in Blank Silver. And the ſame were anſwered to the King in Blank ſilver (w). In the 30th year of the ſame King, the Sheriff of Devonſhire paid-in at the Receipt viij s and ix d in Blank ſilver Examined, [made out of ſome pieces] of the Old Money; which became forfeited to the King, becauſe Richard de Stokes an Exchangeour uttered it contrary to the Aſſize lately made touching the Money (x). In the 33th year, the Sheriff of Devonſhire paid-in xxvj d in Blank ſilver examined, made out of certain pieces which were found in the earth (y). In the eighth year of K. Richard I, allowance was made to Odo le Petit in his accompt for the profits of the Kings Cambium, for making a Huch and a Fabrica [or Forge], and for utenſils and neceſſaries for blanching of ſilver (z). In the ſame 8th year, the Sheriff of Worceſterſhire accompted for xl l xiij s and vj d Blank, de remanenti firmæ of his County. He paid xij l, part of it, to Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury by Tale; and the Album of That xij l, or the Combuſtion-money requiſite to make it xij l Blank, he paid at the Exchequer: And ſtood charged with xxviij l xiij s vj d Blank, the reſidue of the total ſumm (a). Thomas Baſſet accounted for the ferm of Benſenton, for the tenth year of K. John. Upon his accompt, C s vij d ob. were diſcompted to him for the Album of Lvij l viij s for Benſenton, which he had paid in his own wrong in preceding years (b). Again. Album hath been uſed (as it ſeems) to ſignify Rent paid or other payment made in Money. K. Henry III, commanded the Sheriff of Notinghamſhire, not to demand any Album of William Daubigny for the Manour of Oskinton; becauſe the King had granted him That Manour, to hold by Knights Service (c). The Dialogue concerning the Exchequer ſpeaks alſo of the dealbation of the Sheriffs ferm (d). Walter de Bathe Sheriff of Devonſhire accompted to K. Kenry III. for xxv s j d the profits of the Contract for digging the Black Mineral, other ſumms for the iſſues of the Greater and Smaller Coinage, and Lxxix s pro minera dealbanda and for Tin that was ſold (e). III. Sometimes (as hath been ſaid above), when money was paid-in or tendred at the Exchequer, it was brought to the Fire to be Tryed. The Tryal by Fire was called Combuſtio, Examen, and Aſſaium or Aſſaia. When a Combuſtion was made, ſo much per pound was, as I take it, wont to be paid for the Combuſtion. For example. In the Third year of K. Henry II, Richard de Luci Sheriff of Eſſex was allowed, upon his Accompt, xl l x s x d for ſo much by him paid by Tale to Earl Geoffrey for the Third penny of That County. And at the ſame time, Richard paid into the Receipt xv s ix d for the Combuſtion (g). It ſeems there were at ſome times General Combuſtions made at the Exchequer, of the Ferms of All or moſt of the Counties and Towns in England. For example. There were Combuſtiones in the 11th year of K. Henry II; They are ſpecifyed in a Cedule annexed to the Great Roll of That year (h): And likewiſe in the 21th year of K. Henry II (i): And in the 25th year of That King (k): And in the 8th year of K. Richard I, in Eaſter term (l): And again in the ſame year in Michaelmaſs term (m): And in the 7th year of

of K. John (n). In the 14th year of K. Henry III, the Sheriffs of London paid at the Exchequer 214 l 6 s 3 d part of the Ferm of That City. The money was Right by weight. But being brought to the Examen of Fire, it lacked upon the Firſt Aſſay xiiij d per pound, and upon the Second Aſſay xij d. The Sheriffs challenged Both Aſſays; And deſired a Third. But That was Reſpited till further Order (o). There were alſo Combuſtions in the 35th year of K. Henry III, for the money of ſeveral Counties and Towns (p): And in other years. All theſe abovementioned were, as I underſtand, Combuſtions of Silver. But upon occaſion, Gold was alſo brought to the Combuſtion. As appears in the caſe here ſubjoined. In the Reign of K. John, Nigell Ruffus and Odo le Petit accompted for the profits of the Cambium of London. Upon their Accompt ſeveral Allowances were made to them: viz. For working of Lxv l of gold, for Crowns and other ornaments made againſt the Kings Coronation, Lxv l; viz. xx s per pound: For working fourſcore and ſix pounds five ſhillings and three pence [of ſilver], for ſeveral ſilver ornaments, vj l ix s; viz. xviij d per pound: For gold weighing xxj s and viij d, which they took out of their own ſtock and uſed about the ſaid Works, x l: For ſilver of their own which they uſed in the ſaid works, xj l ij s x d: And for the Deficiency (in lacco) of the ſaid Lxv l of gold after Combuſtion (which Deficiency or Laccum was xxxij s and vj d), xiiij l xij s vj d (q).

It muſt be remembred, that ſome Ferms were reſerved to be paid at the Exchequer Blank, and others Numero, by Tale. It ſhall be left to the Reader to judge, What the Difference in ſome caſes was between the payment Blank, and the payment Numero. I ſuppoſe it cannot well be adjuſted. For as the money was at ſometimes more corrupt than it was at other times: So, it is likely the Difference varied in ſome meaſure after That proportion. I will here venture venture no further than to recite ſome precedents wherein thoſe two ſorts of Payments are compared together. For example. In the 11th year of K. Henry II, the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex had a Surpluſage of xxxix l v s x d Blank, in their Ferm: Which Surpluſage was to be Allowed or ſet-off to them in the Aſſiſe of the City of London (that is, in the Aid for the Army of Wales): And accordingly, in their Accompt for That Aid, they were Allowed xlj l v s ij d numero, for xxxix l v s x d Blank (r). In the 20th year of K. Henry II, CCiiij l xj s viij d by Tale are accompted-for, as equivalent to CLxxxxiiij l xvj s xj d Blank: And CCxix l x s xj d by Tale, to CCix l xxiij d Blank: And CCxxxviij l x s by Tale, to CCxxvij l xj s xj d Blank: And CLxxxxv l xv s iij d by Tale, to CLxxxxvj l viij s xj d Blank (s). In the 21th year of K. Henry II, Gervaſe de Cornhill Sheriff of Kent rendred, in the Ferm of That County, CCxlvij l xv s vj d numero, for CCxxxv l xix s vj d Blank (t). In the 22th year of K. Henry II, the Fermer of the town of Hamton had xx l by Tale diſcompted to him for xix l vij s Blank (tt). In the 29th year of K. Henry II, xxiij l xiiij s j d by tale were Allowed to the Sheriff of Somerſetſhire, for xxij l xj s vij d Blank (u). In the Firſt year of K. Richard I, William ſon of Iſabell Sheriff of London was Allowed upon his Accompt xxxv l iij s x d Blank, for xxxvij l x d numero, which he had paid by the Kings order to the Earl of Clare (w). In the ſame year, there is charged on the Burgeſſes of Cambridg the total ſumm of CCLxx l Blank; which is (ſaith the Record) CCLxxvj l xv s numero by combuſtion of vj d (x). In the 4th year of K. John, Reginald de Cornhull Sheriff of Kent had upon his Accompt a Surpluſage of xxxj l xj s v d Blank, d (b). The Purſe of Norwich lacked j d (i). The Purſe of Colcheſter lacked iij d ob.; And That of Ipſwich j d (k). The Purſe of Norwich lacked j d; And the Purſe of Ipſwich ij d (l). The Purſe of the City of Hereford lacked iiij d; And That of Northampton iij d (m). The Purſe of the Town of Colcheſter lacked iij d (p); And That of the Town of Notingham iij d (q). When it is ſaid, that ſuch a Purſe lacked iij d, it is, I think, to be underſtood, that there was, upon the Combuſtion, a deficiency of iij d per xx s in the ſumm paid into the Receipt. It is mentioned to be ſo, in the Great Roll of the Firſt year of K. Richard I, in the caſe of Ralf Fitz-Stephen (if I underſtand it right). There, the Combuſtion was computed at ſix pence in the pound (r).

As the Revenue in Ancient times was wont to be paid-in at the Exchequer, ſometimes by Weight, and ſometimes by Tale: So, there were Proper Officers and Utenſils provided There, for Weighing, Telling, Eſſaying, and Laying-up of the Money. There was a Peſour or Weigher, a Fuſor or Melter, Goldſmiths, and others. In the 26th year of K. Henry II, there were (it ſeems) Two Fuſors; for Gilbert the Fuſor had Livery from the King for his ſervice [at the Exchequer]; And in the ſame year, Coals and other neceſſaries were provided at the Kings charge for making the Aſſays [at the Exchequer] (s): And Uchtrede Stede the Kings Fuſor had Livery in the ſame year from the King for his Service; And Coals and other Utenſils for his ſaid Office were likewiſe provided for him at the Kings charge (t). In the Firſt year of K. Richard I, foruli and other Conveniences were provided [at the Receipt] for Weighing and for Telling of the Revenue paid-in (u). And in like manner other Allowances and Proviſions were made for other Officers concerned in the Receipt of the Kings money. Theſe Officers received Salaries or Stipends of the King for their Service. The offices of the Peſour and Fuſor were Serjanties. Of Them we ſhall ſpeak in another place (w). Of the Goldſmiths no more needeth to be ſaid here, than that there were ſuch perſons uſually employed at the Exchequer,

The Purſe of the Town of Colcheſter lacked iij d (p); And That of the Town of Notingham iij d (q). When it is ſaid, that ſuch a Purſe lacked iij d, it is, I think, to be underſtood, that there was, upon the Combuſtion, a deficiency of iij d per xx s in the ſumm paid into the Receipt. It is mentioned to be ſo, in the Great Roll of the Firſt year of K. Richard I, in the caſe of Ralf Fitz-Stephen (if I underſtand it right). There, the Combuſtion was computed at ſix pence in the pound (r).

As the Revenue in Ancient times was wont to be paid-in at the Exchequer, ſometimes by Weight, and ſometimes by Tale: So, there were Proper Officers and Utenſils provided There, for Weighing, Telling, Eſſaying, and Laying-up of the Money. There was a Peſour or Weigher, a Fuſor or Melter, Goldſmiths, and others. In the 26th year of K. Henry II, there were (it ſeems) Two Fuſors; for Gilbert the Fuſor had Livery from the King for his ſervice [at the Exchequer]; And in the ſame year, Coals and other neceſſaries were provided at the Kings charge for making the Aſſays [at the Exchequer] (s): And Uchtrede Stede the Kings Fuſor had Livery in the ſame year from the King for his Service; And Coals and other Utenſils for his ſaid Office were likewiſe provided for him at the Kings charge (t). In the Firſt year of K. Richard I, foruli and other Conveniences were provided [at the Receipt] for Weighing and for Telling of the Revenue paid-in (u). And in like manner other Allowances and Proviſions were made for other Officers concerned in the Receipt of the Kings money. Theſe Officers received Salaries or Stipends of the King for their Service. The offices of the Peſour and Fuſor were Serjanties. Of Them we ſhall ſpeak in another place (w). Of the Goldſmiths no more needeth to be ſaid here, than that there were ſuch perſons uſually employed at the Exchequer, Exchequer, who had Livery or Allowance from the King. Thus, in the 5th year of K. Stephen, Allowance was made to the Sheriffs of London for the Livery of the Kings Goldſmiths, and for the Coals uſed by them (x). In the 22th year of K. Henry II, Allowance was made out of the Ferm of the City of London and County of Middleſex, for John the Goldſmith, and likewiſe for the Coals uſed by the Kings Goldſmiths (y). The like Allowances were made in ſeveral other years of the ſame King and his Succeſſours (z).

It is to be underſtood, that there were Mints in ſeveral places of England; and officers employed in the Coinage there; of which ſort were the Moneyours, Eſſayers, and Cuſtodes cuneorum. Theſe Mints and Officers were under the ſuperviſal and direction of the Chief Juſticier, or the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer. In the 9th year of K. John, the Moneyours, Eſſayers, and Cuſtodes Cuneorum of London, were commanded by Writ Patent to appear at Weſtminſter in the quinzime of St. Denys, to receive There the Kings Command; and to bring thither all their Dies ſealed-up with their ſeals, and to ſummon all the Workers of Money of London, and other perſons who were skilled in the art of making money, to appear there at the ſame time. And the like Writs iſſued to the Moneyours, Eſſayers, and Cuſtodes Cuneorum, of Wincheſter, Exeter, Chicheſter, Canterbury, Rocheſter, Ipſwich, Norwich, Lenn, Lincoln, York, Carlile, Northamton, Oxford, St. Edmund, and Durham (zz).

There were alſo Aſſays, made at the Exchequer, of the Money minted at the reſpective Mints. K. Edward I. (anno 9. or 10.) by his Writ commanded the Barons, to take with them Gregory de Rokeſle, and ſtraitway before they retired from the Exchequer to open the Boxes of the Aſſay of London and Canterbury, and to make the Aſſay in ſuch manner as the Kings Council were wont to do, and to take an account thereof, ſo that they might be able to Certify the King touching the ſame whenever he ſhould pleaſe (a). In the 24th year of K. Edward I, an Aſſay of ſome ſilver brought from the Mine of Byrlande in Devonſhire, was made in the preſence of Peter de Wylughby the Treaſurers Lieutenant Chancellour of the Exchequer and John de Cobham Baron of the Exchequer (b). In the 12th year of K. Edward II, an Aſſay was made of the money minted in the Exchanges of London and Canterbury between the 11th day

Upon this Aſſay, it was found, that the ſaid Money was too Weak and of a greater Allay than it ought to have been of, by Two hundred fifty eight pounds five ſhillings ten pence halfpenny; as appeared by the Rolls of the ſaid Aſſays remaining in the Receipt. For which Defects the ſaid Giles was bound to anſwer to the King, for himſelf and the ſaid Terrick, as he acknowledged before the Treaſurer and Barons. And beſides, the ſaid Giles was bound to anſwer to the King for C l of melted ſilver delivered to him to be minted by Auguſtin le Waleys Keeper of the ſaid Exchanges, as the ſaid Giles likewiſe acknowledged. The total for which the ſaid Giles was to anſwer to the King, was Three hundred fifty eight pounds five ſhillings and ten pence halfpenny. Of this ſumm, one hundred pounds were aſſigned to the Biſhop of Ely, in part of the debts due to him from the King, by Bill of the Wardrobe. The ſaid Giles was commanded to ſatisfy the ſaid Biſhop for the ſaid Hundred pounds and the King for the reſt. Giles alleged that he was unable as yet to pay the ſame. CHAP. X.

I. MANY were the ſources from which in ancient times the Royal Revenue aroſe. The principal parts or branches of it were theſe: I. The Demeanes of the Crown. II. Eſcheats; ſuch as 1. Honours, Baronies &c. taken into the Kings hands, and not being ancient Demeane; 2. Vacant or ſeized Biſhopricks or Monaſteries. III. The Feudal and other profits ariſing out of the Ancient Demeane and Eſcheats; viz. Reliefs, Wardſhips, Mariages &c. IV. The yearly Ferms of Counties, and of Towns or Burghs. V. Fines and Amerciaments of many kinds, in Civil and Criminal caſes, and for the Foreſt. VI. Aids, Scutages, Tallages, and Cuſtoms. VII. Caſual profits of divers kinds; ſuch as Treaſure trove, Waif, Wreck, Goods of Felons Fugitives and Outlaws; and other things. Firſt, Of the Ancient Demeane of the Crown. It appeareth that at the time of the Conqueſt, and during the reigns of ſeveral of the next ſucceeding Kings, the Demeane-lands of the Crown were very conſiderable for extent and income. The great and memorable Survey of the Lands holden in Demeane within this Realm (which was finiſhed in the year 1086 (a), and is called Domeſday-book) ſheweth under the Title Terra Regis, What and Which the Demeanes of the Crown were at That time and in the time of K. Edward the Confeſſour: and hath been ever ſince counted the Great Index to diſtinguiſh the Kings Demeanes from his Eſcheats and other Lands, and from the Lands of other Men. But What part of thoſe Demeane-lands did in proceſs of time paſs away from the Crown, by Grant, Exchange, or otherwiſe, And What part thereof afterwards (during this Period) remained in the Crown, it is not needful for me to enquire.

II. Another part of the Crown-Revenue aroſe by Eſcheats. Under the Term, Eſcheat, I deſire to comprehend not only thoſe Lands which were moſt properly called Eſcheats, but alſo Thoſe which, at ſundry times after the Conqueſt became veſted in the Crown, either by Devolution, Forfei-

Forfeiture, Seiſure, or perhaps by ſome other Title. If we look into the Revenue-Rolls of the Pipe, of the reigns of KK. Stephen and Henry II. (which next to Domeſday-book are the moſt Ancient Rolls of Record now extant); and likewiſe into Thoſe of the next ſucceeding Kings, we ſhall find the Crown was then in poſſeſſion of ſeveral Great Honours, Baronies, and Lands, of That ſort: Which are uſually ſtyled Honor, Baronia, or Terra of Such a one, ſometimes with the Addition of quæ eſt in manu Regis; without expreſſing by what Title they became veſted in the Crown. Theſe Great Eſcheats were in the Ancient times uſually committed by the King to certain perſons in Ferm or Cuſtody: The Fermer or Cuſtos anſwering at the Exchequer yearly for the Ferme or Iſſues thereof. I will here mention (for a Specimen) ſome of the Baronies or Great Fees which eſcheated or devolved to the Crown, and became part of the Revenue thereof. And it is to be noted, that the words which I cite out of the Records upon this occaſion, are only the Heads or Titles (in the Revenue-Rolls) under which the Accompts of the reſpective Honours or Lands are placed; Citing of theſe Titles being ſufficient (I ſuppoſe) to ſhew, that the Lands mentioned were Then in the Kings hands. In the 5th year of K. Stephen, amongſt other Baronies or Lands then in the Kings hands, there were Theſe: viz. The ſeveral Baronies or Lands, of Berchelai (aa), of Otuer Fitz-Count (b), of William Peverell of London (c), of Roger de Molbrai (d), of Eudo the Dapifer (e), of Simon Cheiſneduit and others (f). In the 19th year of K. Henry II, there were in the Kings hands, The ſeveral Honours or Baronies, of Earl Conan (g), of the Earl of Boloigne (h), of William de Curci (i), of William Peverell of Notingham (k), of the Earl of Leiceſter (l), of Earl Giffard (m), and of William Fitz-Alan (n). In the 31th year of the ſame King, there were in the Kings hands the ſeveral Baronies or Fees, of Gutbleu (o), of Striguil (p), of William de Veſci (q), of Ralf de Caugi (r), of Ralf ſon of Mein de Foreſt (s), of Albert Greſle (t), of Thomas de Muſcamp (u), of William Painell (w), of the Earl of

There were, in moſt parts of the Realm, Offices and Serjeanties, as well of a Civil nature as pertaining to the Foreſt, that were Hereditary; Which frequently devolved, by ſome means or other, to the Crown: Of which, by their yearly income, or by Fines paid either by the Owners for Reſtoring them, or by the Committees for the Cuſtody of them, the Crown made Profit. The Greater Eſcheats were were wont to be Let at Ferm or put into Cuſtody to particular Fermours or Cuſtodes, like as the Kings Demeanes. And the King had the Relief, Wardſhips, Mariages, and other Profits belonging to them; and (in truth) the full Dominion or Property in them (l); inſomuch that ſometimes, after they had been long veſted in the Crown, they were hardly to be diſtinguiſhed from the Kings Ancient Demeane. About the latter end of K. Henry the Seconds Reign (if I do not miſtake) they begann to form an Eſcheatry. For we find that at That time the Eſcheats lying in ſeveral Counties were placed together in the Revenue-Rolls, and particular Rolls made of them (m). In the Reign of K. Richard I, the Smaller Eſcheats in the ſeveral Counties were committed to one or more perſons who anſwered for the profits thereof. For example. Many of the Smaller Eſcheats were committed to William de St. Mary-Church and Hugh Bardolf; who accompted for the profits of them in the 6th, and 7th years of K. Richard I (n): And the Rolls of their Accompts are called Rotuli de Eſcaetis (o). In the eighth year of the ſame King, Hugh Bardolf accompted to the Crown for the iſſues of Eſcheats in the Northern and Midland Counties hereunder mentioned (p). In ſubſequent times (I think) the Eſcheatry was managed by Officers, called at Firſt Cuſtodes Eſcaetarum or Eſcaetriæ, and afterwards Eſcheatours. However, anciently ſome of the Smaller Eſcheats were uſually holden by the Sheriffs of the Counties wherein they lay. And the Sheriffs anſwered for the yearly Profits of them under the Title, De Propreſturis & Eſcaetis; as appears by the Great Rolls of every year, in the Reigns of KK. Henry II, Richard I, and John. And when Eſcheats came to the Crown, it ſeems the Juſtices Itinerant took care within their ſeveral Circuits, to have them ſeized for the Crown, and put in charge to Sheriffs or other Officers for the Kings profit. This was done, in the Reign of K. Henry II, touching Elveſton the Land of Robert de Joy (q); and touching an Eſcheat in Alencheſter (r); an Eſcheat in the City of Lincoln (s); the Eſcheat ſeized by William de Pirou (t); ſeveral ſmall eſcheats in New Caſtle upon Tine and Baenburc (u); and in many other like caſes. In the 3d year of K. Henry III, there were Cuſtodes Eſchaetarum. Simon Truſſebut was then Cuſtos Eſchaetarum in Lincoln; and Gilbert Cuſin in Lancaſter (w). (x) Huwas ſeized into the hands of K. Richard I, becauſe That Abbot was a Subject of the King of France (x). When Normandy (which had for a long time been annexed to the Crown of England) was ſeized by the King of France, a very great number of Lands became veſted in the Crown of England by way of Eſcheat or Seizure. For it is to be underſtood, that whilſt England and Normandy were conjoined under the Obedience of the King of England, the Lands of the Engliſh and Normans were Common; that is, the Engliſh held lands in Normandy by hereditary Right, and the Normans held Lands in England in Like manner. But when, upon the ſeparation of Normandy from England, the King of France ſeized the Lands which the Engliſh held in Normandy, the King of England in like manner ſeized the Lands which the Normans held in England. By this means, the Lands in England holden by Normans became veſted in the King of England as Eſcheats, under the name of Terræ Normannorum. And Then the King of England (as he ſaw cauſe) granted them out to Engliſhmen (or Others not being Normans) under a ſort of Condition, namely, quouſq; terræ Anglorum & Normannorum ſint Communes; or quouſq; rectis hæredibus reddiderimus per pacem, &c; that is, untill the Lands of the Engliſh and Normans ſhould be Common, ſo that the Engliſh ſhould hold their Lands in Normandy, And the Normans ſhould hold their Lands in England, as they mutually did before That interruption. Which Community of Lands between the Engliſh and Normans was never afterwards reſtored. Upon this occaſion (I ſay), a great many Lands became devolute to the Crown of England as Terræ Normannorum. I will give one or two inſtances of this, for a ſpecimen. K. Henry III, in the 2d year of his Reign, granted to Robert Marmiun Junior, the Cuſtody of the Caſtle of Tamworth and of the Lands which were lately his Fathers on the day of his Death, To hold to Robert untill the Lands of the Engliſh and Normans ſhould come to be Common again, as they formerly were; and under certain other proviſions (ſpecified in the Contract hereunder cited), made between the King and the ſaid Robert the Younger (y). In the third year of K. Henry III, the rent or ferme of Binteworth in Hantſhire, which belonged to the late Archbiſhop of Roan a Norman, was paid into the Receipt of Exchequer (z). The ſame K. Henry III. granted to Margaret Counteſs of Wincheſter, the Lands of the Normans that were within her Fee; To hold to her for her Life, and after her Death, to Roger de Quency her ſon and heir; Unleſs the King ſhould reſtore the ſaid Lands to the Right heirs of them per pacem &c (a). granted to William Earl of Albemarle the Manour of Derteford which was lately the Earl of St. Pauls, To be holden by William, of the King and his heirs, untill the King ſhould reſtore it [upon Treaty or Peace] to the Earl of *S. III. Some Revenue likewiſe accrued to the Crown from Vacant Biſhopricks, and from ſuch Vacant Monaſteries as were of Royal Foundation and Patronage. For in the Ancient times, when a Biſhop, or an Abbot of a Houſe of Royal Foundation, hapned to Dy, the King uſed to ſeize the Temporalties of ſuch Biſhoprick or Abbey into his own hands, and to receive the Profits thereof till the Vacancy was filled. In What Age, or upon What Title or Pretext, this practice of ſeizing of Temporalties, firſt Begann, I will not poſitively ſay. Ordericus Vitalis aſcribeth the introducing of it to K. William II (d). He ſays, Before the Norman Invaſion, the Cuſtom in England was, That upon the Death of an Abbot, the Biſhop of the Dioceſe took care of the Revenues of ſuch Abbot; and upon the Death of a Biſhop, the Archbiſhop took care of the Revenues of ſuch Biſhop, till the Vacancy was filled again. But this Cuſtom (adds he), William Rufus aboliſhed by the perſuaſion of Flambard, and kept the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury void three years (e). It ſeems, in the Council holden at Clarendon A. D. 1164 (10. Hen. II), it was amongſt other articles Decreed, That when an Archbiſhoprick, Biſhoprick, Abbey, or Prioury, of the Kings Foundation became Void, the ſame ought to be in the Kings hand, and the King might receive all the Rents and iſſues thereof, as if he had held them in demeane (f). And ſo, I think, the uſage was, both before and after the time of That Council. For example. In the Fifth year of K. Stephen, the Manours of the Biſhoprick of Durham which was then Vacant, are ſaid to be in Dominio Regis, and for That reaſon were diſcharged of Danegeld (g). An Amercement being impoſed on the Wapentake of Flaxwell, the Lands of the Biſhoprick of Lincoln were diſcharged of their quota thereof, the Biſhoprick being Then Void and in Dominio (h). And it appears by many inſtances that when Archbiſhopricks, Biſhopricks, &c, were Void and in the Kings hands, he uſed to have, as Immediate Lord, the Reliefs, Wardſhips &c of the Military Tenants holding of ſuch Archbiſhopricks and other Prelacies, together with other profits ariſing out of the ſame. For it is to be underſtood, that the King was Founder and Patron of all the Biſhopricks, and likewiſe of many of the Monaſteries. For example. In the Statute De Proviſoribus made in the 25th year of K. Edward III, it is declared, That the Holy Church of England was founded in the eſtate of Prelacy by the Ancient Kings of England, and by the Earls, Barons, and Nobles of the Realm, to inform Them and the people of England in the Law of God, and to Do Hoſpitalities, Almſdeeds, and other works works of Charity in the places where Churches were founded: That certain ample poſſeſſions were aſſigned to the Prelates of That Church by the Founders, for the good purpoſes aforeſaid: That the ſaid Kings, Earls, Barons, and Nobles, as Lords and Advowees, had and ought to have the cuſtody of the ſaid Prelacies during the Voidances thereof, and the Preſentations and Collations of ſuch Prelacies: And that the Kings of England uſed in ancient times to have the greater part of their Council compoſed of ſuch Prelates, for the profit and ſafety of the Realm (i). And in the ſame Statute it is expreſsly ſaid, that the King of England was Paramount and immediate Advowee [or Patron] of the Holy Church of England (k). So that it ſeems not-unlikely, that the Kings of England uſed, upon an avoidance, to ſeize the Temporalties of Biſhopricks and of Abbeys of Royal Foundation, upon the title of Seigneury as Immediate Lords, or if you pleaſe, by vertue of their Royal prerogative. Geoffrey Supprior of Canterbury ſeems to have been of this opinion in a Letter which he wrote on behalf of the Prioury and Monks of his Houſe to K. Henry II. He alledgeth there, that the Prioury did not hold their poſſeſſions of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, but of the King in Capite, as the Archbiſhop himſelf held; which is manifeſt (ſaith he) from hence, that when the Archbiſhops of Canterbury dy, their Lands are ſtraitway confiſcated [or ſeized into the Kings hands] (l). So alſo the Earls, Barons, and others, uſed to have the cuſtody, during an avoidance of ſuch Prelacies as were of Their own or their Anceſtours Foundation, by like title of Seigneury: But the King uſed to have, during avoidances, the Cuſtody of Prelacies of the Foundation of private Lords, in caſe He had the Founders heir in Wardſhip. Tis true, the Clergy uſed to complain heavily of the practice of keeping Biſhopricks and Abbotricks Void: And there might be Cauſe of Complaint: For ſometimes both Abbeys and Biſhopricks have been kept Void for ſeveral years together: But I do not remember, that they uſe to call in queſtion the Kings Right of ſeizing Temporalties upon a Voidance; provided he filled the See or Abbey again within reaſonable time, and thereupon reſtored the Temporalties to the Succeeding Prelate. However, ever, let that matter be as it will; In Fact, the Crown was wont to take into its hands, in the caſes before mentioned, the Temporalties of Biſhopricks and Abbeys becoming Void. Which Temporalties were generally, during this Firſt Period, committed to a Cuſtos: who accounted to the Crown for the ſame. And afterwards, when the Office of Eſcheatry was introduced and ſettled, the reſpective Eſcheatours uſed, upon an Avoidance, to ſeize the Temporalties for the King, and to anſwer or account for the ſame as part of their Eſcheatry. And when the Temporalties had been once ſeized into the Kings hands, the King had ſuch a Poſſeſſion of them, that the ſucceeding Biſhop or Abbot could not enter upon or intermeddle with them, without a Writ to give him poſſeſſion thereof; Which Writ was called a Writ of Reſtitution of Temporalties; And continues in uſe (in the caſe of Biſhops) to this day. But to return to the point of the Regal Revenue in this caſe: I will ſtraitway give a few inſtances of the manner, How Biſhopricks and Abbeys were during this Period committed by the Crown to the Cuſtodes; and how the Revenues thereof were by them anſwered. It may be obſerved, that albeit this part of the Crown Revenue was in it ſelf purely Caſual: Yet, as the Kings in Five or Six Succeſſions after the Conqueſt ordered matters, one may gueſs they made it a Conſiderable Revenue. For the Biſhopricks and Abbeys in England of Royal Patronage being Numerous, And the Kings uſing to keep ſome of them (eſpecially the Rich and Well-endowd ones) Long Void, As they had generally Some or Other of them in their Hands, So the ſame amounted in the whole to a Fair Revenue. Hereof ſome few inſtances may be produced.

In the 5th year of K. Stephen (if we do not miſtake in the time) there were or had lately been in the Kings hands, The Archbiſhoprick of York (m), the Abbey of Glaſton (n), the Abbey of Eveſham (o), the Biſhoprick of Durham (p), the Biſhopricks of Coventry and Hereford, and the Abbey of Chertſey (q). In the 16th year of K. Henry II, the Biſhopricks and Abbeys following were or had then lately been in the Kings hands: To wit, The Abbey of Hulme (r), the Biſhoprick of Hereford (s), the Biſhoprick of Bathe (t), the Abbey of Malmesbury (u), the Abbey of Thorney (w), the Biſhoprick of

K. Edward I, received the iſſues of the Abbey of Wherewell during the vacancy of it, untill the time when he reſtored the Temporalties to the ſucceeding Abbeſs of That Houſe (f). The ſame King received the iſſues of the Abbey of St. Auſtin at Canterbury during the avoidance of it, and untill a new Abbot was put in by Papal proviſion and the Kings Writ Patent (g). The ſame King granted the iſſues of the Biſhopricks of Ely and Worceſter being then Void to Amadeo of Savoy (h). When a Biſhoprick or an Abbey of Royal foundation became Void, the Eſcheatour was wont to take the Temporalities thereof into the Kings hands ex officio, and to account for the ſame at the Exchequer. But the King, if he thought fit, ſometimes joined another with the Eſcheatour in the cuſtody of ſuch Temporalities, and ſometimes committed the ſame to another perſon. K. Edward I, in the 14th year of his reign, when the Biſhoprick of Ely was lately become void by the death of Biſhop Hugh, commanded Henry de Bray the Eſcheatour to ſeize into the Kings hand all the chattells of the late Biſhop and likewiſe the Biſhoprick it ſelf, ſo that he might anſwer for the ſame at the Exchequer. And the King aſſociated William de Middelton to the ſaid Eſcheatour in the cuſtody of That Biſhoprick during the preſent avoidance (i). K. Edward II, [anno regni 1°] committed to John de Foxle the Cuſtody of the Temporalities of the Abbey of Weſtminſter (which was Then void and in the Kings hands by the death of Walter late Abbot There) for ſo long as the King pleaſed, during the avoidance of the ſaid Abbey. The ſaid John was to be anſwerable for the iſſues thereof at the Exchequer. And Walter de Glouceſter the Kings Eſcheatour was commanded to deliver the cuſtody of the ſaid Abbey to the ſaid John (k). In the firſt year of K. Edward II, Walter de Glouceſter Eſcheatour on this ſide Trent, had in his cuſtody the Biſhoprick of Worceſter, which was then void and in the Kings hands, by the death of William de Geynesbourgh late Biſhop. And the ſaid King, by Writ of the Exchequer, committed the Cuſtody thereof to William de Brikehull Clerk, during pleaſure; and commanded the Eſcheatour to give him poſſeſſion thereof (l).

There was alſo Profit made by the King by Seiſures of mens Lands for Treſpaſſes or Miſdemeaners; which were of ſo many kinds, relating to the Crown or to the Foreſt, that they are not eaſily to be enumerated. And ſometimes, where Lands were ſeized for a Treſpaſs, it doth not particularly appear by the Record, Of what ſort the Treſpaſs was; As where it is ſaid, Pro Tranſgreſſione ſua, or pro Exceſſu ſuo. In theſe caſes, if the party whoſe Lands had been ſeized, got Reſtitution of them, it was uſually by making Fine to the King, under the Terms, Pro habenda Benevolentia Regis, or pro habenda ſaiſina, &c. The Sheriffs of the Counties of Buckingham and Bedford levied the iſſues of Peter Morells land, which was ſeized into the Kings hands, becauſe Peter went into Ireland againſt the Kings prohibition (m). In the reign of K. Henry III, William Yſenbert was ſeiſed in fee of the Mills of Pacheford with certain lands to the ſaid Mills belonging. William was hanged. Whereby the King had the Year and Waſt of the ſaid Mills and premiſſes. The King, for a Fine of Lx marks, granted the Year and Waſt to Robert de Maneby; Saving to the Lords of the Fee their right after the Year and Waſt (n). Add hereto ſaying a Pater noſter and an Ave Maria every day, made Fine for his Relief at Two Pater noſters to be ſaid by him every day (p). Peter le Chaumberlein Fined in half a mark for his Relief for certain Land in Faintre (late the Inheritance of Adam de Faintre) which he held of the King in Capite, by the Serjanty of Uſhery to the King in his Army (q). Henry ſon and heir of William le Moigne Fined in xviij l for Relief of his Land of Eyſtan which he held of the King in Capite by the Serjanty of the Kings Lardinary. Ralph le Moigne anceſtour of Henry held the Land by the ſame Serjanty, and the Land was worth xviij l a-year, as appeared by the Roll of Teſta de Nevill (r). In the 35th year of K. Edward I, John de Ratynden Couſin and heir of Alice Mucegroſs paid xj l ij s ij d ob. q. Relief for all the Lands which Alice held of the King in Capite, viz. for the Sixth part of the Barony which Hugh Dyue formerly held. In the 21th year of K. Edward I, Alice was charged with xxv marks Relief for the ſaid Sixth part of a Barony; the Relief for a Whole Barony being Then charged at C l. But now, by the Magna Carta Regis de Libertatibus Angliæ (which Charter the King by his Writ, quod eſt inter Communia de anno xxix°, commands to be obſerved in all points), the King would take but C marks for the Relief of a Barony: And therefore John de Ratynden is charged for the ſame portion of the Barony at the ſaid rate of C marks, & non de tanta ſumma pecuniæ as Alice was charged at, viz. C l (s).

It is to be underſtood, that there was a great difference in quantity or extent, between ſome Baronies and others, and between ſome Knights fees and others; ſome Baronies being larger than others, and ſo of Knights fees; as may appear by comparing of Barony with Barony, and of Knights fee with Knights fee. This Difference, I think, aroſe from the reſpective Charters of Feoffment by which the Baronies or Fees were granted-out by the Crown. For if the King enfeoffed a man of Forty Knights fees, To hold by Barony; or of Ten Knights fees, To hold by Barony; the Tenure was Barony in each caſe, notwithſtanding the difference in number of Fees. So alſo, if the King enfeoffed a man of twenty carues of land, To hold by the ſervice of one Knight; or of forty carues of land; To hold by the ſervice of one Knight; the feoffee had, in each caſe, one Knights fee. For this and other reaſons, at certain times, a diſtinction was made between the Baronies and Fees of the Old Feoffment and Thoſe of the New. And accordingly the Barons and Tenants in Capite, did by the Kings command, certify their Fees of of each Feoffment apart. The Baronies and Fees of the Old Feoffment were (if I have obſerved right) commonly larger in quantity or extent than thoſe of the New. And beſides, when Baronies conſiſted of Fees which lay in ſeveral Counties or places, the Kings officers were the better enabled, by the Certificates of the Feoffment of erection of ſuch Baronies, to charge the Barons or Great Tenants in Capite with their reſpective Fees, in the ſeveral Counties wherein the ſame lay. But notwithſtanding the abovementioned difference in point of extent, the Relief of a Barony was, I think, the ſame in value, whether it was a Greater or Smaller Barony: and ſo of Knights fees. However, where the King enfeoffed one man of one Barony and another man of another Barony; if afterwards theſe Two Baronies come to be veſted in one man;

V. Another branch of the Crown-Revenue conſiſted of the Ferms of the Counties of the Realm (when they were letten to Ferm), or the Iſſues of the Cuſtody of them (in caſe they were put into Cuſtody). From the reign of K. William I, down to the ſucceeding times, the King (who was Lord of the Great Seigneurie of this Realm) uſed to let-out the ſeveral Counties of England upon a yearly Ferm or Rent concerted between the Crown and the Fermer, or elſe to commit them to Cuſtody: The Fermer or Committee, reſpectively, rendring to the Crown, at the end of his Year or Term, an Accompt of his Bailywick either as Fermer or as Cuſtos. And ſuch perſon, whether Fermour or Cuſtos, was uſually ſtyled Sheriff. The Ancient Revenue-Rolls evince, that the ſeveral Counties were conſtantly Let out from year to year, and brought a yearly Revenue to the Crown. For example. In the reign of K. Stephen, Moſt if not All of the Counties were Let at Ferm; Warin was Sheriff or Fermour of Wiltſhire, Dorſetſhire, [and Somerſetſhire] (p); Bertram de

So it was alſo in the Ferm of Towns and Burghs. Simon de Kyme advanced CCC marks a-year in the Ferm of Lincolnſhire (z). And many others did the like. The Crementum of Counties was ſometimes anſwered in other things than money: to wit, in Palfreys, Hawks &c. And in like manner for Towns and Burghs. William Ruffus rendred x l and four Hawks Increment for the County of Bukingham: And William Fitz-Richard thirty nine Hawks Increment for the ſame County (a). The Sheriff of Worceſterſhire was to pay xiiij l for a Summaire and a Hawk, the Old Increment of That County (b).

Another part of the Ancient Crown-Revenue aroſe out of the yearly Ferms of Towns, Burghs, and Gilds. If I do not miſtake, in the moſt ancient times after the Conqueſt (as far as we can find by Records) ſeveral Towns of England were in the hands or poſſeſſion of Private Lords. But of Them it is not my buſineſs to treat. The Towns Burghs and Villates of England which were in the hands of the King, were commonly let to Ferm. And the Ferms of them were anſwered to the Crown, either by the Sheriff of the County wherein the Towns lay, as included in the Corpus Comitatus or as ſuperadded to it; or elſe by the Townſmen themſelves per manum ſuam, either by the name of Homines Cives or Burgenſes of ſuch a Town Burgh or Villate, or under the name of the Provoſt or other particular Cuſtos or Fermer. Some examples hereof may be ſet-down. In the 5th year of K. Stephen: The Ferm of Warengeford was anſwered to the Crown by Brient Fitz-Count (c), The Ferm of the Burgh of Northampton by Robert Revell (d), And the Ferm of the City of Colcheſter by Hamon de St. Clare (e). In the Reign of K. Henry II, the Ferm of the Burgh of Southamton was anſwered by Roger ſon of Folcher as Cuſtos (f), The Ferm of the Burgh of Glouceſter by Oſmund the Provoſt (g), The Ferm of the City of Lincoln by Warner and Ralf Melecumbe and of other lands, all which were committed to him at Ferm during the Kings pleaſure (c).

By the inſtances produced above in this Section, it appeareth that the Towns and Burghs were wont to be let-out at ferm (like as the Kings Manours or lands), to ſuch perſons and upon ſuch terms as the King accepted. This was the uſage after the Norman æra: But I have not obſerved that the ſame method was uſed before That time. In the early times after the coming-in of the Normans, the Towns and Burghs were moſt of them (if I have obſerved right) let-out at the Kings pleaſure: In the ſucceeding ages, ſome of them were let-out in Fee, or as they called it in Fee-ferm; particularly to the Men or Burgeſſes of the reſpective Towns: Which cuſtom, as it ſeems, ſo far prevailed, that in proceſs of time moſt of the Towns and Burghs in England came to be let to the reſpective Townſmen or Burgeſſes at Fee-ferm; as will, I ſuppoſe, appear to a diligent obſerver. Let it ſuffice at preſent to take notice, that anciently the Towns and Burghs were wont to be put in Cuſtody or let to Ferm, upon ſuch terms and conditions as the King or the Great Officers of his Court or Exchequer on his behalf thought fit to accept; as may be ſeen in two or three inſtances following. The Men of the Town of Derby Fined in xl marks, That William the Falconer might not have their Town at ferm (d). Peter de Brus Fined in CCCC marks, That he might have the Wapentake of Langeberge with the appurtenances, to Hold to him and his heirs of the King and his heirs, Rendring the accuſtomed and ancient ferm, and likewiſe xx l Increment, for all manner of Service. Provided, that in Pleas of the Kings Crown, they ſhould anſwer before the Kings Juſtices holding the Iters in thoſe parts; that the Attachments of thoſe Pleas ſhould be made by the Sheriff and Coroners of the County; And that in other Pleas belonging to the Sheriff, they ſhould anſwer before the Sheriff (e). Upon the foot of this Contract (as it ſeemeth), Peter de Bruis and his heirs held the ſaid Wapentake long after; to wit, in the 31th year (f), and 52th year of K. Henry III (g). In theſe caſes the King was wont to ſhew himſelf a kind and equitable Lord: And to make Abatement or Allowance to his Fermers, when by the calamities of War or other accidents they were rendred unable to pay their whole Ferm. In the Reign of K. Henry III, the Citizens of Wincheſter had their Town in Cuſtody. Upon their Accompt, the King remitted to them part of the Ferm or Iſſues of their Town, becauſe of the deficiency hapning at That time in certain profits out of which their Ferm uſed to ariſe (h). K. Henry III, abated or remitted to the Citizens

Citizens of York xl l part of their Ferm, during his pleaſure, for cauſes to him ſeeming meet (i). The ſame King granted to the Citizens of Wincheſter, in compaſſion to the poverty they then laboured under, that they ſhould render to the King yearly for the ſpace of one and twenty years then next coming C marks, at the ſame Terms at which they were wont to render Fourſcore pounds for the Ferm of their City (k). The Mayour and Citizens of Wincheſter ſet forth by their humble petition to K. Edward I, that K. Henry III, was pleaſed to releaſe to them xx marks yearly of the ferm of their City for the ſpace of one and twenty years, and that the ſaid one and twenty years were now expired: And therefore prayed, that he would either reſtore the ſaid City to them with the ſaid Abatement, or aſſign them a Cuſtos of their City. The King had for ſome time delayed to do this: but afterwards he commanded the Barons of the Exchequer, either to commit the ſaid City to the Citizens for the ſaid ferm or ſome other ferm that would be for the profit of the King and of the Citizens, or elſe to aſſign them a Fit Cuſtos, if they ſhould think That to be moſt expedient (l).

To the Ferms of the Counties and Towns may be referred the Ferms or Yearly payments made to the Crown by the Gilds of Merchants in ſeveral towns of England. For example. In the 5th year of K. Henry II, the Weavers of London ſtand charged with four marks of gold for the ferm of their Gild for two years: The Bakers of London with one mark and ſix ounces of gold (m). In the 11th year of the ſame King, the Weavers of London rendred xij l per Annum for the ferm of their Gild, and the Bakers vj l per annum for theirs (n): And the like in the 15th (o), and 24th years of the ſame King (p). In other years of That King, the Weavers rendred xij l per annum for their Gild (q): They

They did the like in the Reign of K. Richard I (r). In ſome part of the Reign of K. Henry III, the Weavers of London paid xx marks per annum for their Gild (s). In the 12th and 14th years of K. Henry II, the Weavers of Oxford paid vj l for their Gild, and the Corveſers of Oxford xv s in lieu of one ounce of gold for their Gild (t). In the 31th year of the ſame King, the Weavers of Oxford paid vj l in lieu of one mark of gold for their Gild: And the Corveſeri of Oxford xvj s in lieu of one ounce of gold for theirs (u). In the Reign of K. Henry III, the Weavers of Oxford paid vj l per annum for their Gild; to wit, in the 29th (w), 31th (x), and 41th (y) years of That King. This mark of gold rendred yearly by the Weavers of Oxford for the ferm of their Gild, was afterwards reduced to xlij s yearly Rent. The caſe was this. K. John had by his Charter granted to the ſaid Weavers their Gild, and all the Liberties and cuſtomes which they had in the time of KK. Henry I and II; And that nobody ſhould work in their Craft within five leagues of the Burg of Oxford, like as they had this privilege in the times of the ſaid KK. Henry I and II; The ſaid Weavers rendring yearly a mark of gold: And K. Edward I, at the beginning of his reign, being given to underſtand that the ſaid Weavers when they undertook to pay the ſaid yearly ferm of a mark of gold, were above Sixty in number, and that they were now ſo poor and decayed that they were ſcarce fifteen in number, ſo that they had not for a long time paſt paid the ſaid ferm, and at preſent were unable to pay it; The ſaid K. Edward I, in compaſſion to their poverty, pardoned to them the ſaid yearly Rent of a mark of gold with the arreres thereof, and granted, that they might, for the future during his Pleaſure, render xlij s yearly by the hand of the Mayors and Bailiffs of Oxford, at Michaelmaſs and Eaſter, in like manner as they were wont to render the ſaid mark of gold (z). an Uſurer (s); The Sheriff of Wiltſhire for the chatells of Eſtrild an Uſureſs (t). In like manner in Normandy, the chatells of Uſurers were wont to be conſiſcated. The chatells of two perſons hereunder named who lived and died in the practice of Uſury were paid-in at the Exchequer There (u). Again; in England the King had in ſome caſes the Lands of perſons condemned, for a year and a day after their condemnation; which was uſually called the Year Day and Waſt. Robert de Tindeſlegh was condemned for cutting off a mans Foot and Hand. And the King was to have his Land for a Year and a Day (w). The Land of Thomas de Stureſgate an Outlaw was in the Kings hands for a Year and a Day (x). Geoffrey de la Pomeray fined in xx marks, To have the Kings Year in the Land of William de Strete and his Corn and chatells (y). Margery de Wytelesbury Fined in CCC l, to have the chatells of her late husband a Felon de ſe, ſaving to the King the Year, Day, and Waſt of his Lands (z). To theſe other inſtances might be added. In the caſes abovementioned, relating to the chatells of Felons, it is (I think) to be underſtood, that upon the Parties conviction, his chatells became forfeited. For if the Party died after the Felonious Fact, and before Conviction, his chatells were not by the Common law forfeited to the King. So it was held (in the 2d year of K. John) in the caſe of Robert de Goſinton, who was impriſoned for Burning a Houſe, and died in priſon before Conviction (a). Again. In the 33th year of K. Edward I, John Berthaud accompted for the profits of the lands of William Berthaud an Idiot; which were ſeized into the Kings hands for the ſaid Williams Idiocy (b).

IX. Now we are upon the ſubject of the Regal Revenue, we muſt do ſome right to the Piety of our Anceſtours. Upon peruſal of the Ancient Revenue-Rolls, it appears that in Thoſe times, many Branches of the Kings Fixed Revenue were charged with Alms. Out of the Fixed or Settled Revenue there was generally ſome portion conſecrated to Pious uſes. This Alms was called Eleemoſyna Eleemoſyna conſtituta, the Settled Alms. To which may be added the Decimæ conſtitutæ. Theſe the Accomptant conſtantly paid out of the Revenue within his Receipt to which they were affixed, and had an Allowance thereof upon his Accompt, by the uſage of the Exchequer without being obliged to ſue-out a particular Writ or Warant of Allowance in that behalf. The Famous Authour of the Dialogue concerning the Exchequer takes notice of This (c). And there are many inſtances of the Eleemoſynæ conſtitutæ and Decimæ conſtitutæ cited in this Volume. The Knights Templars had a yearly Alms called Eleemoſyna conſtituta charged on moſt of the Ferms of Counties in England (d). The Canons of Saresbury had a Decima conſtituta payable to them out of the Kings Foreſts (e). Theſe Alms and Charities with others of the like kinds were disburſed out of the Kings Wardrobe. And Allowance was made for them to the Keepers of the Wardrobe upon their Accompt rendred at the Exchequer. In the Reign of K. Henry III, in the Accompt of Walter de Kyrkham for the Wardrobe, the Settled and the Foreign Alms, the Oblations, and other Charities done in the Kings Houſhold are ſet-down and Allowed (p). Accompts of other Keepers of the Wardrobe. But I forbear to enlarge on This.

X. When Perſons made Fine with the King for ſeveral purpoſes, they paid to the Queen a Duty or Summ called Aurum Reginæ, over and above their Fine to the King. However, the money paid to the King and the Aurum Reginæ were, both together, counted One Fine (q). I ſhall here only mention this Duty curſorily, becauſe Mr. Prynn hath publiſhed a Treatiſe expreſsly upon the ſubject. It ſeemeth, that Queens gold was payable eſpecially by the Kings Tenants in Capite: But whether by them only, and by no others, I cannot determine. In the 13th year of K. John, Geoffrey de Luvers was charged with four marks and a half mark for Queens gold: But (ſaith the Record) he ought not to be ſummoned or diſtreined for it, becauſe he holdeth nothing of the King in Capite (r). On the other part, In the 10th year of K. John, William Morant Fined in L marks, For ſeiſin of his Land; And paid half a mark of gold as Aurum Reginæ with the ſaid Fine (s). In the 13th year of K. John, James de Novo Mercato was charged with five marks and half a mark of gold of Aurum Reginæ, for his Fathers and Brothers Relief and his own (t). In the tenth year of the ſame King, Ralf de Hoſdeng paid eleven marks and forty pence for Queens-gold (u). And ſeveral other perſons were charged in the Great Roll and Memoranda of the Exchequer for Queens gold; namely, Adam Painel (w), Robert de Archis (x), Henry de Nevill (y), Henry Bloio (z), and Wiſcard Laidet (a). In the firſt year of K. Edward I, Walter Archbiſhop of York, by the Kings appointment, came before the Barons of the Exchequer, and there preſented Walter de Aubeny to be Collectour of the Aurum Reginæ due to Alienor the Kings Conſort (b). And in the ſame year, the King commanded the Barons to admit Maſter Walter de Gudeford, to receive at the Exchequer the Aurum Reginæ for Alienor Queen Conſort (c). In the 7th year of K. Edward I, John de Whattele was

In the ninth or tenth year of the Reign of K. Edward I, Eleanor the Queen Dowager appointed Walter de Caſtel to be Cuſtos and Receiver of her Gold, and likewiſe her Attorney in the Exchequer to proſecute and manage her Pleas and other affairs There. This Appointment ſhe Certified to the Treaſurer and Barons by her Letter (e). When men were indebted to the Queen for the Aurum Reginæ, the Queen her ſelf ſometimes attermined, reſpited, or pardoned [and diſcharged] the Debt, as ſhe thought fit. The Queen gave reſpite to Imayne de Sulley for xxx marks which he owed her for Queen-gold (f). And the Queen pardoned to Patrick de Chaurces C s which he owed to her for Queen-gold (g). In the 22th year of K. Henry III, Thomas ſon of Aucher had reſpite given him for payment of ten marks due for a treſpaſs of the Foreſt, and of the Aurum Reginæ parcell of the ſame Fine (h). In the 38th year of K. Henry III, the King commanded the Barons of the Exchequer, to put in execution forthwith a certain Judgment which they had given for payment of Aurum Reginæ due to the Queen from the Citizens of London, being part of a Fine which they had made with the King for reſtitution of their Liberties (i): And in the 39th year, the Sheriffs of London were commanded to diſtrein the Communa of the City for Queens gold (k). In the ſame 39th year, the Sheriff of Yorkſhire was ordered by writ, to ſummon William de Laſcell, to anſwer to the King, for departing from the Exchequer without leave of the Barons, when he was a Priſoner for non-payment of Queen-gold (l). In the 3d or 4th year of K. Edward I, a Decree or Proviſion was made by the King and his Council, concerning the Aurum Reginæ: Which Decree the King tranſmitted to the Barons of the Exchequer, commanding them to ſee it obſerved. It is ſet-forth hereunder in the margin (m). Here endeth the diſcourſe concerning the Kings Demeanes, Eſcheats, and Ferms.

XI. In the foregoing Chapter I have ſpoken concerning the Regal Revenue in general; in This, concerning ſeveral particular branches of it: I will now briefly treat of the manner of Levying or bringing-in the Kings money; and afterwards of the manner of Iſſuing it. Firſt, as to the Levying of it. When debts due to the King had been put in charge in the Revenue-Rolls, they were ſent-out in proceſs to be levied. The perſon principally entruſted with the levying and collecting of them, was the Sheriff of each County; who in the old times was an officer of great authority and power. The moſt ancient proceſs that was made uſe-of for this purpoſe, was the Summonce of the Exchequer (n); which iſſued twice in the year, into all the Counties of England, and was returnable againſt the times of holding the duo Scaccaria. This Summonce hath been called the Summonce of the Great Roll or of the Pipe. Iin the 32th year of K. Henry III, the Summonce of the Great Roll for Northamtonſhire was delivered to the Sheriff of That County, by the hand of John le Franceis a Baron of the Exchequer (o). In the 49th year of That King, the Summonce of the Great Roll for Lancaſhire was delivered to Alexander de Elleſwik the Sheriffs Clerk (p). Afterwards, we find mention is made of another ſort of Summonce, called the Summonce of the Greenwax or of the Foreign eſtreats; but the Summonce of the Great Roll ſtill continued in uſe; as it doth at this day. In the 27th year of K. Edward I, Thomas de Warblinton Sheriff of Hantſhire ſat rendring his accompt at the Exchequer. He was oppoſed before Peter de Leiceſter one of the Barons, upon certain Summonces of the Exchequer ſent to him under Green wax, by four Rolls entituled as is ſpecified hereunder in the margin (q). In the 12th year of K. Edward II, mention is made Memorandum quod cum Thomas de Warblinton Vicecomes ſederet ſuper Compotum ſuum redditum hic de eodem Comitatu, in craſtino Aſcenſionis Domini hoc anno, & oppoſitus fuiſſet coram Petro de Leyceſtre Barone de Scaccario, de quibuſdam Summonitionibus Scaccarij ei miſſis ſub Viridi Cera, per iiij^{or} Rotulos Summonitionum de Scaccario ſic intitulatos, Unum ſcilicet Rotulum de Extractis Exituum & Amerciamentorum coram Rege de diverſis annis & diverſis Comitatibus, Et alium de Extractis Exituum & Amerciamentorum coram Rege de anno xx°, Et tercium de Extractis Exituum & Amerciamentorum coram Rege de anno xxj°, Et quartum de Extractis Exituum & Amerciamentorum coram Rege de anno xxij°, ut idem Vicecomes de debitis in eiſdem Rotulis contentis de eodem Comitatu ſe oneraret & Domino Règi ſatiſfaceret de eiſdem, Idem Vicecomes reſpondit & inſtanter aſſeruit, quod hujuſmodi ſummonitiones de eiſdem quatuor Rotulis nunquam ad manus ſuas vel Clericorum ſuorum hactenus devenerunt, propter quod de debitis in Rotulis prædictis contentis neq; onerari neq; ſatisfacere debuit illa vice. made of the Greenwax within the Honour of Wallingford (r). At the Two Terms of Eaſter and Michaelmaſs, in which Terms the Summonces were reſpectively Retornable, Sheriffs and other Accomptants came to the Exchequer to pay-in part of their Fermes and other iſſues of their Bailywicks. In Michaelmaß term anno 14 & 15 E. 1, the Sheriff of Yorkſhire came and paid D L marks, viz. C L marks of his Ferm, and the reſt of the Summonces (s). The Sheriff of Lincolnſhire came and paid DC xxxv marks; whereof part was for his Ferm, and other part was for the Summonce of the Exchequer, and other part for the Summonce of the Judaiſm (t). The Sheriff of the Counties of Warwick and Leiceſter Paid in like manner (u). At Eaſter anno 15 E. 1, the Sheriff of Yorkſhire paid CCCCL marks, viz. CCCCL marks of his Ferm, and CCC marks upon the Summonces (w). The Sheriff of the Counties of Warwick and Leiceſter paid C quater xx l, viz. Lxxv l of his Ferm, and fourſcore and ten pounds upon the Summonce, and xv l of the Judaiſm (x).

There were alſo ſeveral other Officers beſides the Sheriff of each County, that anſwered for ſuch part of the Crown-Revenue as was within their care. For example; The Eſcheatours, Foreſters, Cuſtomers, Fermers of divers ſorts; and in ſucceeding times, the Collectors of Tallages, Diſmes, quinzimes, &c; and others. But in caſe Theſe officers could not juſticiate or enforce the Kings debtors to make payment, the Sheriff of the County was armed with power enough to do it. I have been ſpeaking here of the ordinary and ſettled proceſs of the Exchequer; howbeit, if the King wanted money very urgently, he ſometimes iſſued-forth ſpecial Writs to Sheriffs and other Officers concerned in collecting his Revenue; commanding them to get-in money with all Speed. Thus, a Writ was ſent to the Sheriff of Northumberland, enjoyning him (as he tendred his Perſon, his honour, his Lands and chatells and all that he had) to make ſuch effectual Diſtreſs for the Kings Debts, that he might be able to pay the ſame into the Exchequer at the times preſcribed by the Writ: And the like Writs were ſent to all the Sheriffs of England (y). A Writ was ſent to the Sheriff of Northamptonſhire, Commanding him to pay forthwith into the Exchequer the Debts therein mentioned; Or elſe the King would ſo chaſtiſe him, as to make him an Example to all the Kings other Bailiffs Boſton to Weſtminſter about the Kings buſineſs, they had a Letter of Safe Conduct for themſelves and their followers, directed to Sheriffs, Bailiffs, and all other the Kings Liege-men (r).

It hath been ſaid, that the Queens-Conſort of England were, by the law or uſage of the Exchequer, entituled to have the Prerogative-proceſs to iſſue for recovery of their Aurum and other Credits. For proof of this, Mr. Vernon (s) cites a Writ out of the Exchequer, of the 14th year of K. Edward I. I cannot at preſent (upon ſearch) find this Writ in either of the Two Remembrancers offices. But it appears, that K. Edward I, in the 13th and 14th years of his reign, ſent a writ to the Barons of the Exchequer on behalf of Queen Alianor his Conſort. That writ imports, that the King had granted to Her all the iſſues of fines, amerciaments, chatells of fugitives, condemned perſons and others, within the Hundred of Gattre, ariſing in the laſt Iter of the Juſtices for the County of Leiceſter; the ſaid Hundred being then in Her poſſeſſion by the grant of K. Henry III: And by That writ, the King commands the Barons, to cauſe the ſaid iſſues to be levied by the eſtreats of the Exchequer, and to be delivered to John de Berewick Keeper of the Queens aurum, to Her uſe (t). And in the ſame year the King calls the debts due to the Queen his Own debts (u). In the 14th year of That King, ſeveral beneficial Charters and writs were made-out for Queen Alienor. They are entred with Both the Remembrancers (w). In the 9th year of K Edward II, a Writ was ſent to the Barons of the Exchequer, reciting, that the King, with the aſſent of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and others of his Council, aſſembled in his Parliament holden at Lincoln, had, of his ſpecial grace, granted to his Mother Margaret Queen of England (amongſt other franchiſes), that She ſhould have the ſame means to recover her debts in the Exchequer, as the King had to recover His: And the King, by That writ, commands the Barons, to let her have the ſaid means of recovery accordingly (x). The ſame K. Edward II, granted to the Executors of (x) Cum de aſſenſu Prælatorum, Comitum, Baronum, & aliorum de Conſilio Regis, in Parliamento Regis apud Lincolniam exiſtentium, de gratia ſua ſpeciali Rex conceſſerit Margaretæ Reginæ Angliæ, Matri ſuæ cariſſimæ ——, that ſhe might Tallage the Demeane Lands which ſhe held in Dower, as well in Cities, of his Mother Margaret late Queen of England, That all Debts due to her ſhould be levied in like manner as the Kings debts (y); And a writ iſſued to the Barons of the Exchequer, ordering them to aſſiſt the Executors of the ſaid Queen therein, as fully as for the Kings own debts (z). So alſo, K. Edward I, granted to his Son Prince Edward certain Debts due to Himſelf: and by a Cloſe writ of the Great Seal commanded the Barons, to cauſe Summonce of the Exchequer to be made out for the Prince, to recover and get-in the ſame (a). K. Henry III ſent a writ to the Barons of the Exchequer, reciting that he had granted to Alienor, Conſort of his Son Prince Edward, Lxj l due from the Men of Sumerton, for the arrerages of their ferm; and commanding the Barons to cauſe the ſame to be levied according to the law and cuſtom of his Exchequer and to be paid to the ſaid Alienor (b).

XII. As to the manner of paying-out or iſſuing the Kings money: It is to be underſtood, that That was done ſeveral ways. Of This, I will give ſome inſtances; and will treat of them pretty copiouſly; in regard they ſhew, not only the method of the Exchequer, but alſo the cuſtome and uſage of the elder times. Whilſt the Kings money remained in the hands of Sheriffs, Fermers, or others, it was uſual for the King, his Chief Juſticier, other Great Officers of his Court, or the Treaſurer or Barons of the Exchequer, to order ſuch Sheriffs or others, to make Proviſions and Payments divers ways, out of the Kings money reſting in their hands. This was commonly done by vertue of a Writ from the King or ſome of his Miniſters. Which Writ was ſometimes called Warantum, the Sheriffs Warant; for upon producing of It, he had Allowance made to him de tanto upon his Accompt. During the Firſt Period it was Uſual for Sheriffs, and for Fermours of other part of the Land-Revenue, by Appointment of the King or the Chief Juſticier, to make Proviſions and Payments of divers kinds, both in War and Peace, out of their Ferms, or other Revenue within their Receipt: For example. They uſually made payment of the Eleemoſynæ conſtitutæ, and of the Liberationes conſtitutæ. In the 5th year of K. Stephen, Robert Revell Farmer of the Burgh of Northampton diſburſed viij l ij s j d in Settled liveries, and xx s in Settled Alms to the Monks of Northamton (c). In the 11th year of K. Henry II, Reiner ſon of Berengar and William ſon of Iſabel, Farmers or Sheriffs of London, paid two marks to the Knights of the Temple for their Settled Alms (d). In the 19th year of K. Henry II, John Bucuinte, Baldwin Criſp, David de Cornhill, and Roger Blund, Sheriffs or Fermers of London, paid in Settled Alms and Liveries, for one fourth part of the year, x l ties, Burghs, Towns, Hundreds, as in other places, which were wont to be tallaged by the Kings Progenitors: And that when Scutage ſhall happen to be levied of the Knights Fees held of the King, to his or his heirs uſe, the Queen ſhould have to her uſe Scutage of the Knights fees held of her; And that ſhe ſhould have the ſame means to recover her Debts in the Exchequer, as the King had. So the King commands the Barons, to let her have the ſaid Tallages, Scutages, and recovery of her Debts; ipſam Reginam contra eaſdem conſuetudines non inquietantes in aliquo ſeu gravantes. T. In the 7th year, W. Archdeacon of Taunton and two others accompted to the King for MM marks, which they had received of the Treaſurer and Chamberlains, for the uſe of the Biſhop of Wincheſter (c). In the 8th year, Peter de Rupibus received CCCC marks of the Treaſurer and Chamberlains, by way of Impreſt (d). In the 5th year of K. Henry III, Hugh de Balleol owed to K. John CC l, which that King had impreſted or lent to him upon all Hughs Land in England (e). In the 6th year of K. Henry III, the Citizens of London yielded an accompt for CC marks which the King impreſted to them for walling of their City (f). In the 9th year of K. Henry III, William Mareſchall Earl of Pembroke accompted for divers impreſts, to wit, for money impreſted to him at ſundry times, out of the Kings Treaſury, out of the Quinzime, and out of the Mint (g). In the 20th year of the ſame King, A. Counteſs of Penbroc accompted for Impreſt-money (h). In the 28th year of the ſame King, a Writ of Diſtringas iſſued againſt the heirs and executors of Brian del Iſle, to bring them to account for xlvj l impreſted to Brian in his life time by the hands of the Templars (i). In other years of That King, John Fitz-Bernard (k), and B. Biſhop of Rocheſter (l) reſpectively accompted for Impreſts. In the 9th year of K. Edward I, the Community of Gaunt owed K. Edward I. five hundred marks, impreſt-money (m). In the 18th year of the ſame King, Richard Foiun accompted for ſeveral ſumms of the Kings money, which he had received of Henry de Bray Eſcheatour, for the expenſes of the Kings horſes (n).

According to the uſage of the elder times, it ſeemeth that the Kings Treaſure was to be iſſued by vertue of a Writ or Mandate from the King. Such Writ or Mandate was uſually under the Great Seal, or the Privy Seal; and was ſometimes directed to the Chief Juſticier and Barons of the Exchequer; but

(n) Compotus Ricardi Foiun, de denarijs receptis de Magiſtro Henrico de Bray tunc Eſcaetore Regis citra Trentam, ad moſt commonly to the Treaſurer and Chamberlains of the Receipt. And the Writ or Mandate was founded upon a Bill or Certificate from the Exchequer, or from the Wardrobe, or upon ſome other matter of Record. But the Writ moſt generally uſed for Iſſuing the Kings money out of his Exchequer, was the Liberate, directed to the Treaſurer and Chamberlains. It was ſo called from the emphatical word liberate, deliver ye, uſed in it. This Writ was of two ſorts: One, a Liberate for paying a ſumm hac vice only; the other, a Liberate Current or Dormant, for paying in continuance or oftner than Once. Some inſtances of theſe matters muſt be ſhewn-forth. King John ſent his Writ to the Chief Juſticier and the Barons of the Exchequer at London, intimating that he had taken Alard de Eſtrepi for his Man, and had granted to him the Fee of xxv l ſterling, and thereupon commanding them to aſſign unto him the ſaid xxv l before the next Michaelmaſs, and if they could not aſſign it to him within That time, then to pay him ſo much out of the Exchequer at Michaelmaſs aforeſaid; and between that time and the Michaelmaſs next following, to aſſign to him Land of the ſame yearly value for his better encouragement in the Kings ſervice (o). The ſame King by Writ commanded his Chief Juſticier [and Barons of the Exchequer], to repay forthwith to the Abbot of St. Oën at Roan C marks, which he had lent to the King for his urgent occaſions (p). K. Henry II, by his Writ of Liberate commanded Richard the Treaſurer and William Malduit and Warin Fitz-Gerold his Chamberlains, to pay out of his Treaſury to the Carthuſian Friers xxv marks part of the L marks payable to them yearly by vertue of the Kings Charter (q). K. John by writ of Liberate, commanded his Treaſurer and Chamberlains to pay out of his Treaſury to the King of Man, thirty marks which K. John had granted to him (r). K. Henry III, by Writ of Liberate commanded the Treaſurer and Chamberlains, to pay out of his Treaſury unto Baldwin Emperour of CP, five hundred marks and xx l towards his expenſes; both which ſumms the King had given to him. They were directed to pay it out of the Beſt money they had (s). The ſame King by Writ commanded the Treaſurer and Chamberlains to pay to Maſter Henry the Kings Poet, C s, due to him for the arreres of his ſtipend. And they were to pay it without delay, although the Exchequer was then ſhut (t). A Liberate iſſued for the Prioureſs of Morlawe, for paying her at the Receipt So much, in lieu of the ſame ſumm, which the King had

Of FINES and AMERCIAMENTS.

I, II. Of Fines for Liberties.

CHAP. XI.

I.

FINES Oblatas and Amerciaments made another part of the Crown-Revenue. Which Revenue, in the yearly amount of it, was very conſiderable; eſpecially during the Firſt Period. Tis ſurprizing to ſee, how Numerous the Fines and Amercements appearing upon the Revenue-Rolls of the Ancient times, were, and how many various ways they aroſe. It muſt not be expected, that I ſhould go about to enumerate all the Kinds of them; Or that I ſhould exhibite an Hiſtorical deduction for each Kind which I ſhall take occaſion to mention. Let them therefore, if you pleaſe, for orders ſake, be reduced to Two general claſſes, viz. Fines and Amercements for the Foreſt, and Fines and Amercements in Civil and Criminal caſes. As to Fines and Amercements for the Foreſt; it will not, I conceive, be neceſſary or very uſeful, to ſpeak largely concerning Them. It may ſuffice to obſerve, that by the Revenue-Rolls of KKK. Henry II, Richard I, and John, they appear to be Many and Great; ſo that from the Foreſt Counties, by Treſpaſſes, Defaults, Purpreſtures, and otherwiſe, an ample Revenue was yearly raiſed. As to Fines and Amercements in Civil and Criminal caſes, I will treat firſt of Fines, and afterwards of Amercements. What I would ſay concerning Fines, ſhall be reduced to theſe Three General heads: viz. Fines for Liberties, Fines in Law-proceedings, And Fines in general or of a mixt nature. Under the Head of Miſcellaneous Fines (a), we will treat of theſe following, viz. Fines relating to Offices, and to Trade; Fines for Licences of ſeveral ſorts; And Fines for Benevolence, for Protection and Aid, for Seiſin of Lands, &c. Upon each of the general heads above mentioned, I muſt beg leave to be Copious: partly, becauſe I would make it appear, that the Revenue ariſing this way was Conſiderable; but eſpecially, becauſe by the account I ſhall give of theſe matters, there will be ſo much of the Ancient Law and uſages of this Realm laid open, that I ſuppoſe the Reader will find in it ſomething not only New but alſo Curious and Uſeful. In reference to the Profering, Accepting, and Paying of Fines, ſeveral things may be obſerved. For inſtance. After a Fine had been profered and accepted, if it fell out that the party could not have or obtain the thing for which he Fined, he was Then to be acquitted of the Fine. In which caſe, in the ancient times, his acquittal was uſually entred in the words, ſed non debet inde ſummoneri, together with the cauſe of ſuch acquittal, Quia non habuit rectum nec habere potuit, Quia non habuit pro quo promiſit, or the like. But ſometimes, where the party was for That cauſe to be acquitted of his Fine or oblatum, he was obliged to pay a new Fine for ſuch acquittal. Robert Fitz-Ralf owed xxv marks, That he might have a Record. But becauſe he could not have the ſaid Record, it was adjudged by the Barons of the Exchequer, that he ſhould be acquitted of the xxv marks Nevertheleſs, he paid a new Fine of xl s, for ſuch acquittal (b). If the party obtained the thing for which he Fined, as ſoon as he had either perpaid or ſecured the ſumm of ſuch Fine, he was wont to have

(a) I call them Miſcellaneous, becauſe they are of ſeveral kinds; and are, for Methods ſake, reduced here to one head.

(b) Robertus filius Radulfi filij Bernardi debet xxv marcas, pro habendo recordo, ſicut continetur in Rotulo viij°. Sed quia non potuit habere recordum prædictum, conſideratum eſt per Barones quod non debet inde ſummoneri. Five lines lower, Robertus filius Radulfi filij Bernardi r c de xl s, Ut non ſummoneatur de xxv marcis quas promiſerat pro habendo recordo, ſicut continetur in Rotulo viij°; quod recordum habere non potuit; In th l, Et Q. e. *Mag. (c) Johan-have the Kings Charter made to him accordingly. To ſhew the manner in which This uſed to be done, I have, in the Second Section of this Chapter, ſet-down two or three precedents, taken from the Charter-Rolls of K. John: to wit, in the caſe of Gilbert Fitz-Reinfry in the firſt year of K. John; in the caſe of the Burgeſſes of Dunwich in the ſecond year; and in the caſe of the Men of Boſton and of Lenn in the fifth year. If the party Fining failed in payment of his Fine, he could not have his Charter for the thing deſired: As it appeareth in the caſe of the Abbot and Monks of Bec (c), and of the Londoners (d). Again. When a Fine had been profered, and refuſed by the Crown; in caſe the party profered an Addition, That addition was called crementum finis. Robert ſon of Ralf profered firſt Thirty marks, and afterwards encreaſed his profer by adding ten marks more, To have a Concord confirmed (e). Robert Buſſel profered a Fine of C marks, To have an Inquiſition; and afterwards added xx marks by way of crementum finis (f). Robert de Stokeport added two palfreys to a Promiſſum which he had made to obtain a Confirmation for certain Lands (g). The like was done by others.

II. Manifold Fines were paid for Grants and Confirmations of Liberties and Franchiſes of ſundry kinds: In the Fifth year of K. Stephen, the Londoners Fined in C marks of ſilver, That they might have Sheriffs of their own chooſing (b). Lucia Counteſs of Cheſter Fined in C marks of ſilver, That ſhe might Do Right in her Court between her Vaſſalls (i). Uctred ſon of Walleof in xx marks of ſilver and iij palfreys and iij chaſcurs, For the Liberties of Soke and Sake (k): And Ranulf Avenell in x marks of ſilver, For the like Liberties (l). Thomas ſon of Ulivet Fined in one Chaſcur, That he might be Alderman in the Merchant-Gild of York (m). In the Reign of K. Henry II: The Citizens of York Fined in xl marks of ſilver for Reſpite, that they might not be impleaded out of their County, untill the Kings Return (n). The Burgeſſes of Bedford Fined in xl marks, To have the ſame Liberties as the Burgeſſes of Oxford had (o). The Burgeſſes

(w) Adam de Vallibus & Thomas de Beuveys of Favereſham Fined in D marks, That they might have a Charter of divers liberties granted to them by the King; and a Pardon of certain amercements incurred by them [in the Court holden] before the King, and [in the Court holden before] Robert de Burgheſſe Warden of the Cinque ports; and likewiſe a Pardon of certain treſpaſſes which they had done to the King, in preſumptuouſly uſurping ſundry Royal liberties [without any Grant thereof from the King] (x). The Abbeſs of Romeſeye Fined in xx l, To have the Next Vacancy of the Abbey, Saving to the King Knights Fees, Advouſons &c (y). In this manner the Subjects of England obtained Franchiſes of divers kinds at the hand of the Soveraign: The Grants whereof brought Revenue into the Exchequer. It may be noted, that when the King granted Liberties to any of his Demeane Manours or Towns, he was moved to it by two reaſons: One, the Fine paid in hand; The other, the Improvement or (as they anciently called it) the Amendment of the Kings Manour or Town. Of this matter there are ſome inſtances already ſet-down in this Chapter. To Them I will add another, which is pretty full and formal. In or about the 26th year of K. Edward I, the Men of Kingſton upon Hull and the Men of Ravenſore exhibited their ſeveral Petitions to the King and his Council, praying the King to grant them certain Liberties. The Men and Tenants of Kingſton upon Hull prayed, That the King, for his own profit and for the mendment of his ſaid Town, would make the Town a Free Burgh, and that they might have the franchiſes which belonged to a Free Burgh, that the Town might be kept by a Warden whom the King ſhould place there, that they might deviſe their tenements lying in the Town by their laſt Will, that their Warden might have Return of Writs for the Town, that they might not implead or be impleaded out of their Town, for their tenures, treſpaſſes, or contracts, that they might have a Coroner for their Town to be choſen by themſelves by vertue of a Writ of the Chancery, and to be preſented and ſworn into his office before the Warden, that the King ſhould have in the Town the Priſon and Gallows to puniſh offenders, and the Warden Infangthef and Utfangthef, that the King ſhould have in the Town yearly a Fair, for thirty days beginning at the feaſt of St. Auſtin, and alſo a Market on Tueſday and Friday every week, that the ſaid Men might be quit of duties and cuſtomes throughout England, as the Men of Scardeburgh are, and likewiſe through the Kings whole Seigneurie, And that no perſon might enjoy the Franchiſes aforeſaid, except the Tenants of the Town, and ſuch as are and will be at Lot and Scot with them. The Petition of the Men of Ravenſore was of a like tenour mutatis mutandis. The matter of theſe Petitions was referred to the conſideration of the Kings Council. The Treaſurer and Barons called to their aſſiſtance the Juſtices of the Common Bench; and afterwards certified to the King, that it would be for his profit and the improvement of his Rents in the ſaid Towns,

VI. Upon what hath been offered in this Chapter concerning the Fines that were wont to be paid for Law-proceedings, we may here, if You pleaſe, make a ſhort reflection; in order to explain and illuſtrate a Clauſe (hereunder cited) in the Great Charters of KK. John and Henry III. We have ſeen Above, that Some men uſed to pay Fines, To have or obtain Juſtice or Right; Others, To have their Right or their Proceedings or Judgment Speeded; Others, for Stopping or Delaying of Proceedings at Law; And that Others were obliged to pay Great and Exceſſive Fines (viz. a Fourth part, a Third part, or Half, of the Debt they ſued for) to obtain Juſtice and Right according to their ſeveral caſes. So that the King ſeemed to Sell Juſtice or Right to Some, and to Delay or Deny it to Others. Againſt theſe Miſchiefs, a Remedy was provided by a Clauſe in the Great Charters of Liberties made by K. John and K. Henry III. That Clauſe in each of thoſe Charters runs in the ſame or conſonant words; which are theſe, Nulli vendemus, nulli negabimus, aut differemus, rectum vel juſtitiam (o). Here we may obſerve Three emphatical words, Vendemus, negabimus, and differemus. By nulli vendemus, were excluded the exceſſive-high Fines: By nulli negabimus, the Stopping of Suits or Proceedings, and the Denyal of Writs: By nulli differemus, ſuch Delays as were Before wont to be occaſioned by the Counterfines of Defendants (who ſometimes would Outbid the Plaintiffs), or by the Princes Will. And this Clauſe in the Great Charters ſeems to have had its effect. For though Fines for Writs and Proceſs of Law in many caſes, were always a Part of the Crown-Revenue (viz. from the time of the Conqueſt, or ſoon after), and were conſtantly paid, as well after the making of the Great Charters as Before: Yet, if my obſervation does not fail me, the Fines which were paid for Writs and Proceſs of Law, were more Moderate after the making of thoſe Great Charters than they uſed to be Before; And, I think, the actual Denyal of Right, and the Stopping and Delaying of it, which Before, upon paying of Money or Fines, uſed to be practiced, were by thoſe Charters quite taken away, or by degrees brought into Diſuſe.

King commanded the ſaid John to cauſe the ſame to be kept or upheld, and to be ſworn to maintain it as long as he ſhould be Bailiff or Governour in thoſe parts: Saving the Rights which the King already had in the Caſtle and Town of Faleiſe (x). John Mareſchall was at this time Caſtellan of Faleiſe (y). In the ſame year, the King by Letters patent directed to the Steward of Normandy, granted to his Good men of Danfront, That they ſhould have a Communa, in their town and within the Banlieüe of it, during the Kings pleaſure (z). The ſame King by Letters Patent granted to his Burgeſſes of Caen, That they ſhould have a Communa at Caen, with all the liberties and free cuſtoms belonging to a Communa, during the Kings pleaſure (a). The ſame King by Letters patent remitted to Nicolas de Savigney the Legem aquæ which he was to have undergone: and granted to him the liberty of waging Duell within the Kings Dominion of Normandy (b). In theſe four caſes laſt mentioned, it is likely that the parties paid Fines for the privileges granted to them reſpectively. But there are no Norman Fine-Rolls of thoſe years now extant. Hitherto we have treated of the Revenue ariſing by Fines.

CHAP. XIV.

AS I have before given ſome account of the Revenue which aroſe by Fines and Oblata's of divers kinds: I muſt now ſpeak briefly concerning That which aroſe by Miſericordia's or Amerciaments. And I ſuppoſe, there are many Curious things to be obſerved in the Records which will be cited upon This occaſion. But the Revenue ariſing by Amerciaments was ſo like to That which aroſe by Fines, that having treated Largely of Fines, I may be allowed to treat of Amerciaments with the greater Brevity. If ſome of the inſtances here produced as of Miſericordia's or Amercements, ſhould prove to be inſtances of Fines or Oblata's, it will be no wonder. For it frequently falls out, that in the Ancient times Amercements are hardly to be diſtinguiſhed from Fines by a nice obſerver. It may ſuffice then, if the inſtances here produced be of the nature of Miſericordias or Amercements, or reducible to That head. And you may pleaſe to know, that theſe inſtances are only ſome Few gathered out of a Great and immenſe number appearing upon the Revenue-Rolls: It not being my Deſign to ſhew the Quantity or Amount of the Revenue which aroſe This way (for it would be an Endleſs work to offer at That), but to ſhew in ſome meaſure the Spring from whence it flowed, and the manner in which it aroſe.

I. It is likely there was ſome difference between a Miſericordia and an Amerciament. For example. It was called an Amercement, after it was reduced to a certain ſumm; And a Miſericordia, both Before and Afterwards. As in the caſe of Bonefei the Jew: He was put in Miſericordia for a Novell Diſſeiſine; and afterwards Fined in a mark of gold, For Reſpite to be Amerced thereupon before the King Himſelf (a). Richard de Wrotham was ſummoned to appear appear at the Exchequer, To make Fine There, for a certain Miſericordia incurred by him for a Novell Diſſeiſin (b). When a Miſericordia was reduced to a certain Summ, it was ſaid to be Admeaſured or Affeered. For example. Samuel the Prieſt of Pilton was put in miſericordia by [or before] William Fitz-John [a Juſticier] at C marks: And That miſericordia was afterwards upon the oath of his Neighbours admeaſured or affeered [by the Juſticiers] at xl marks (c). William ſon of Henry was affeered at x marks, for a Forfeiture of the Foreſt (d). In the Iter of G. Fitz-Peter, and of E. Biſhop of Ely, and P. Biſhop of Durham Juſticiers, Henry de Puteaco and others, were put in Miſericordia, but were not as yet Amerced or Affeered (e). The Abbat of Furneis was in Miſericordia for the Foreſt; The King amerced him at D marks (f). Warin de Quedic was in Miſericordia; which was reduced by the Juſticier and Barons of the Exchequer to Lx marks (g). Thomas de Columbiers fell into a Miſericordia before the Kings Juſtices; And thereupon he was Amerced at C l (h). The Men of Cambridg were amerced by the Kings Command. Thoſe amerciaments were impoſed on them per Capita by William de Windſor who was ſent by the Barons for That purpoſe (i). The Hundred of Amelberge were charged with an amercement for a Murder; and the ſame was affeered at xx s (k).

II. In the Great Charter of K. John, it is ſaid, Comites & Barones non amercientur niſi per pares ſuos, & non niſi ſecundum modum delicti (l). And K. Henry the Thirds Great Charter of Liberties (as to the amercement of Barons) runs in the very ſame words (m). Afterwards, Henry de Bratton in his Commentary of the Old Law, expreſſes himſelf thus: Earls and Barons are not to be amerced unleſs by their Peers, and according to the meaſure of their treſpaſs; and That by the Barons of the Exchequer, or before the King himſelf (n). matter is clogged with ſeveral difficulties. I will not at preſent offer at removing them. Nor am I ſatisfied, that I am able to do it with ſucceſs, if I ſhould attempt it. Let it ſuffice to ſet down here ſome precedents referrible to this head, which may give ſome light to the ſubject. K. Henry III, (anno regni 3°), by his Writ commanded the Juſtices Itinerant in Kent, To hold all Pleas brought before them which were Plain and ſine contentione, and to Amerce all ſuch perſons as ſhould be in Miſericordia before them in Common pleas, Except Earls and Barons, who (ſaith the Writ) are to be Amerced before Our Council. The King further commands them, that as to all demands of franchiſes, made before them, either by the Lord of Canterbury, the Earl of Clare, or others, that they ſhould reſpite or adjourn the ſame to the quinzime of St. Hilary, before the Kings Council at Weſtminſter; And if any arduous pleas aroſe before them which could not be determined before them without difficulty, or without advice of the Kings Council, that they ſhould likewiſe adjourn ſuch pleas to the ſaid time and place (o). Theobald de Verdun was amerced C s for a Falſe Plaint. He was charged with That Debt in a Roll containing the names of certain Barons that were amerced before the Juſtices of the Common Bench in the ſixth year of K. Edward I (p). In the 8th, 9th, and other years of K. Edward II, ſeveral Earls and Barons were amerced in the Court of Common Bench, in Pleas of Land and pleas of other kinds; namely, Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, the Abbot of Croyland, Robert Fitz-walter, Thomas de Furnivall, Geoffrey Luterel, William de Brewoſe, the Abbot of St. Alban, and Thomas Bardolf. The eſtreats of theſe Amerciaments were delivered into the Exchequer by William de Bereford a Juſtice of the Common Bench; and the ſame were ſent-out in proceſs to be levied for the King (q). The Abbot of Croyland was diſtreined by Writ iſſuing out of the Exchequer for L marks being the total of Two amercements at which he was amerced as a Baron; that is to ſay, he was amerced at xl marks for an unjuſt deteiner of the Advouſon of the Church of Wigtoft, and at x marks for a falſe plaint; as appeared by a Cedule of the Amercements of Earls and Barons in the Common Bench of the 8th year of K. Edward II; which Cedule was affixed to the Originals of the 10th year. In Hilary term in the 12th year of That King, the Abbot came into the Exchequer by Frier Orger de Freſton his Commoigne and Attorney in that behalf, and pleaded that he was unjuſtly and unduly amerced at the ſaid L marks, as a Baron. For (he ſaith) he doth not nor ever did hold by Barony or by part of a Barony. At the ſame time he exhibited to the Treaſurer and Barons a Writ of the Great Seal, directed to them, which was of the following import, that is to ſay: It recites, That the Abbot of Croyland by his Petition preſented before the King and his Council had complained, that although he did not hold any lands or tenements by Barony or part of a Barony, in reſpect whereof he might be amerced as a Baron; nevertheleſs, he was unrightfully amerced as a Baron, to wit, at forty marks in the Plea for the Advouſon of the Church of Wygtoft, and at ten marks in another Plea, for not proſecuting; in regard the Juſtices of the Common Bench, in the Eſtreats delivered by them into the Exchequer, had erroneouſly ſtyled him a Baron: That the ſaid ſumms of money are now demanded of him by the Summonce of the Exchequer, as if he had held by Barony or part of a Barony, and had been duly amerced: The Writ recites alſo, that the King was deſirous, that the Abbot ſhould not in this caſe be unduly charged, but rather, if by miſtake of the Abbots Style or Title, any thing had been unfairly attempted againſt him, that the ſame ſhould be redreſſed: And thereupon the Writ commands the Treaſurer and Barons, that they ſhould conſult, if they thought meet, the Juſtices of the Common Bench, and ſhould ſearch the Book of Knights Fees and other Memoranda of the Exchequer, and if they found that the Abbot held nothing by Barony or part of a Barony, and that he and his predeceſſours were not wont in times paſt to be Amerced as Barons, then they ſhould ſpeedily rectify what had been done amiſs, and ſhould Do to the Abbot full juſtice, and releaſe him of the ſaid Amercements. Upon reading of this Writ, the Abbot Prayed the Court of Exchequer, that when they had ſearched the ſaid Books and Memoranda, they would correct and annull, according to the tenour of the ſaid Writ, whatever ſhould happen to be found erroneouſly done in the premiſſes. And foraſmuch as the ſaid Amercements aroſe before W. de Bereford and his Companions Juſtices of the Common Bench, the Court thought it expedient on the Kings behalf, to conſult with the ſaid Juſtices and others of the Kings Council, and directed that in the mean time diligent ſearch be made in the Book of Fees, and the Rolls and Memoranda of the Exchequer, before they proceeded to diſcuſs the ſaid affair: And gave the Abbot a further Day till the Quinzime of Eaſter; and ordered the Demand of the ſaid Amercements to ceaſe in the mean time. The Abbot had ſeveral Days of Adjournment. Upon Search, it was found in the Roll of Eſtreats of the Iter of John de Vaux and his Companions in Lincolnſhire, in the Tenth year of K. Edward I, that in That Iter the Abbot of Croyland was amerced amongſt the Barons. There is no Judgment entred upon this Roll: The proceedings end There as is ſet-forth hereunder in the margin (r).

Afterwards, in the 15th year of the ſame K. Edward II, the Abbot of Croyland preſented a Petition to the King, ſetting forth therein, that he (the Abbot) held no Lands or tenements per Baroniam vel per partem Baroniæ, nec per aliquod ſervicium per quod tanquam Baro amerciari deberet; That nevertheleſs, he was amerced before the preſent Kings Juſtices of the Common Bench at one time in xl marks and at another time in x marks; and alſo in the time of K. Edward I, in the Eire of John de Vaux at Lincoln, he was unduly amerced as a Baron: Whereupon the King had already commanded the Barons of the Exchequer to ſearch the Book of the Knights Fees and other Rolls of the Exchequer concerning the ſaid Abbots Tenure; And if they Found that the Abbot did not hold by Barony or part of a Barony, or by other ſervice for which he ought to be amerced as a Baron, and that the Abbot and his predeceſſours had not done to the King or his Progenitours any Service in their armies, Then the Barons ſhould correct what had been improvidently done by the Juſtices of the Common Bench, and ſhould diſcharge him if he was wrongfully charged: provided that if it ſhould happen, that the ſaid Abbot was diſcharged of the ſaid Amerciaments, then he ſhould be amerced to the Kings uſe for the cauſes aforeſaid by his Peers according to the tenour of the Great Charter: Now the King being willing to know what had been done at the Exchequer in this caſe, commands the Barons of the Exchequer to certify Him thereof under the Seal of the Exchequer, that He might cauſe to be Done therein what was Rightful and according to the Law and Cuſtom of the Realm (s).

(t) De Thoma de Furnival ſeniore exonerando. Dominus Rex mandavit hic breve ſuum de Magno Sigillo ſuo, quod eſt inter Communia de anno xiiij°, in hæc verba. Edwardus D. g. R. A. D. H. & D. A, Theſaurario & Baronibus ſuis de Scaccario ſalutem. Ex parte dilecti & fidelis noſtri Thomæ de Furnival ſenioris nobis eſt oſtenſum, quod licet ipſe Baro non ſit, nec terram ſuam per Baroniam vel partem Baroniæ teneat, nichilominus idem Thomas pro quibuſdam defaltis, in [quas in] quibuſdam Curijs noſtris incidit ut dicitur, in eiſdem Curijs tanquam Baro amerciatus fuit, & vos viginti & octo libras treſdecim ſolidos & quatuor denarios, per diverſas patticulas ab eo ad opus noſtrum ea de cauſa exigi facitis, in ipſius Thomæ diſpendium non modicum & gravamen, ac contra legem & conſuetudinem regni noſtri: Et quia nolumus quod eidem Thomæ injurietur in hac parte, Vobis mandamus, quod ſi per inſpectionem Rotulorum & Memorandorum de Scaccario prædicto, vel alio modo legitimo, vobis conſtare poterit, præfatum Thomam Baronem non eſſe, nec terram ſuam per Baroniam vel per partem Baroniæ tenere, ut prædictum eſt, tunc ipſum Thomam de viginti & octo libris treſdecim ſolidis & octo denarijs prædictis exonerari & quietum eſſe faciatis; Proviſo quod idem Thomas juxta tenorem Magnæ Cartæ de Libertatibus Angliæ amercietur. T. me ipſo apud Weſtmon. vij die Octobris anno r n quarto decimo. Et modo ad quindenam Purificationis B. Mariæ, venit hic præfatus Thomas per Johannem de Driffeld attornatum ſuum, & queritur ipſum Thomam graviter diſtrictum eſſe per Vicecomitem Eboraci pro Lx s, & per Vicecomitem Notinghamiæ & Derbiæ pro ix l, ad quas ſummas amerciatus fuit particulatim coram diverſis Juſticiarijs tanquam Baro, & hoc injuſte, quia dicit quod non eſt Baro, neq; tenet nec unquam tenuit aliqua tenementa in Comitatibus prædictis per Baroniam nec per partem Baroniæ; Dicit enim, quod tenet Manerium de Sheffeld in dicto Comitatu Eboraci de Domino Rege per Homagium tantum, Manerium de Whyſtan in eodem Comitatu de Galfrido Lutrel, Manerium de Wyrkſop & Greſthorp in Comitatu Notinghamiæ de Rege ut de Honore de Tykhull, per ſervicium quatuor feodorum & quartæ partis feodi unius Militis, Manerium de Eyom in Comitatu Derbiæ de Rege ut de Honore Peverelli, Manerium de Middleton in eodem Comitatu de Thoma de Chaworth; & Manerium de Bracyngton in eodem Comitatu Derbiæ de Honore de Tuttebury; Et dicit quod nunquam tenuit aliqua alia tenementa in eiſdem Comitatibus, nec quod unquam tenuit per Baroniam vel partem Baroniæ, ut prædictum eſt. Et hoc paratus eſt verificare qualitercumq; Curia &c. Et ſcrutatis rotulis ſuper exactione prædicta, compertum eſt quod xij l exiguntur de Thoma de Furnival de diverſis amerciamentis ad quæ amerciatus fuit tanquam Baro, coram diverſis Juſticiarijs quia non venit, videlicet Lx s ſicut continetur in Magno Rotulo de anno xvij° in Eboraco, & ix l ſicut continetur in eodem Magno Rotulo in Not. Derb., & ſicut continetur in Rotulo de amerciamentis Baronum coram diverſis Juſticiarijs de diverſis annis, afforatis anno xv°, qui eſt hic in Theſauro. Et quia Barones antequam ulterius &c, volunt certiorari ſuper ſuperius ſuggeſtis, concordatum eſt quod inquiratur inde; Et quod Robertus de Notingham Rememorator hujus Scaccarij aſſignetur ad capiendam inde inquiſitionem &c, ita quod certificet quid inde quamprimum &c. Et datus eſt dies præfato Thomæ per attornatum ſuum prædictum hic a die Paſchæ in unum menſem, ad audiendum & recipiendum inde quod Curia &c. Ad quem diem idem Thomas venit hic per dictum attornatum ſuum. Et prædictus Robertus miſit hic tres inquiſitiones coram eo captas ſuper præmiſſis, quæ ſunt inter Inquiſitiones retornatas ad Scaccarium hic hoc anno decimo nono, viz. One taken at Roderham in Yorkſhire, By which it is found That Thomas de Furnival ſenior held the Manour of Sheffeld and the aboveſaid Lands in Yorkſhire, by the Services mentioned in the Inquiſition, And that he did not hold the ſame by Barony or part of a Barony, nor held any other Lands beſides Theſe in the ſame County; Another taken before him at Notingham, by his Writ commanded the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer, That if it appeared to them that Thomas was not a Baron, nor did hold his Land by Barony or part of a Barony, then they ſhould diſcharge him of the ſaid impoſed Amercements; Provided, that Thomas ſhould be amerced according to the tenour of the Great Charter of Liberties. As to the caſe of Thomas de Furnivall, I do ſhrewdly ſuſpect that the matter of his Plea, if enquired into, will appear to be Untrue. Thomas de Furnivall the elder and Thomas de Furnivall the younger, both before the time of pleading this Plea, and after, were ſummoned to attend at the Kings Parliaments amongſt the other Barons of the Realm: viz. anno 22. Edw. 1. Dugd. Summ. to Parl. p. 6; anno 23. E. 1. Ib. p. 9, 11, 13; anno 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 30, 32, & 33. E. 1, Ib. ad annos illos; The like in the reign of K. Edward II, and unto the 12*th year of K.* Edward III, Ib. ad annos illos; anno 22. E. 3, Thomas de Furnivall was ſummoned again, and in ſeveral ſubſequent years; Ib. ad annos illos. It is true, holding by Barony, and being ſummoned to attend amongſt the Barons in Parliament, were in thoſe times very different things. I make no inference; but having barely mentioned this matter, do leave it to the Readers judgment.

More immediately as to the Queſtion, Whether Thomas de Furnivall held by Barony or no. I have not leiſure at preſent to collect an account of the Reliefs which were paid to the King by the Furnivalls from time to time. But I will try to ſhew, That the Land or Seigneurie of William de Luvetot was an Honour or Barony, That the Manour of Sheffeld in Yorkſhire and the Manour of Wyrkſop in Notinghamſhire were parcell of the Barony of Luvetot, And that the ſaid Barony was veſted in the Furnivalls: The proving of which, will be more Concluſive than the producing of Reliefs. It is found by the Inquiſition above ſet-forth, that Thomas de Furnivall the pleader of this Plea was ſeized of the Manours of Sheffeld and Wyrkeſop. And I have ſhewn above, that thoſe Manours did belong to the Honour of Luvetot. In this caſe of Thomas de Furnivall, I doubt the King was ill ſerved. For if, inſtead of cauſing Inquiſitions to be taken in the Countrey in the manner above mentioned, Search had been made (which was the moſt proper method) in the Rolls and Membranes of the Exchequer, K. Edward II would, I ſuppoſe, have been ſecure from Wrong, and Poſterity from Deception.

In the 35*th year of* K. Edward I, the Barons of the Exchequer took the Right courſe for the Kings benefit. It was in the caſe of William de Breouſe: which ſtood thus. William de Breouſe, ſon and heir of William de Breouſe, was attached to anſwer to the King for his Relief. William comes and pleads, that his Father on the day of his death held, and he himſelf doth now hold of the King in Capite, the Caſtle of Brembre in Suſſex, and the Manour of Guber in Wales; but that he doth not know How much is due to the King for relief for the ſaid Caſtle, in regard the ſaid William his Father, at the time of his anceſtours death, was under his Full age, and that in like manner for time beyond memory, all his Fathers other anceſtours to whom the ſaid Caſtle deſcended, were under age when their reſpective anceſtours died, and that during all That time, the King and his progenitours had the Wardſhip of the ſeveral heirs of the ſaid Caſtle untill they came to be of Full age: He ſaith, that his Father and his anceſtours, when they were to Do their Service in the Armies of the King and his progenitors, defended the ſaid Caſtle and Land of Brembre by the Service of one Knight: And thereupon he prayeth, that the Rolls of the Exchequer may be ſearched touching the ſaid Relief; he being ready to ſatiſfy the King for the ſame, as the Treaſurer and Barons ſhall adjudge. Search was made in the Rolls and Memoranda of the Exchequer. It was found in the Book of Knights Fees, that Brembre was charged as an Honour. It was alſo found, that William and his anceſtours, as well in the Exchequer as in the Kings other Courts, were hitherto conſtantly amerced and affeered as Barons, and paid their amercements as ſuch, without any gainſaying. The Treaſurer and Barons, having maturely conſidered the caſe, adjudged that the ſaid William ſhould be charged with Relief for the ſaid Caſtle, as for the Relief of a Barony. The Record of this Pleading and Judgment followeth: Suſſexia. De Relevio Willelmi de Breouſe. Howbeit, the Court of Exchequer ordered that Robert de Notingham the Remembrancer ſhould take Inquiſitions concerning the matters pleaded by Thomas. Robert took Inquiſitions accordingly: Whereby it was found, that Thomas held the reſpective Manours hereunder mentioned, by the Services ſet forth in the Inquiſitions; But that he did not hold them by Barony or part of a Barony. There is no Judgment of the Court in this caſe entred upon the Roll.

Touching Amerciaments in general, ſeveral things may be obſerved. It was frequent for ſome perſons to be amerced for the Treſpaſſes or Defaults of others. Lords of Seigneuries were amerced for their Men, and for ſuch as were de manupaſtu ſuo; Tedings and Frankpledges for ſuch as were within their Teding or Frank-pledg; and the like. Of all which, ſeveral inſtances may be ſeen in this Chapter.

III. When General Amercements were ſet upon Hundreds, Towns &c for Murders, or ſuch like, So much thereof as was charged upon Lands within that Hundred, Town &c, which the King held in Demaine, was Diſcharged of courſe. Richard de Luci was charged with xiiij s ij d being Amercements of Former years for Murders. But he was acquitted thereof, becauſe they fell upon the Kings Demeane-Lands (u). Lands holden by the Queen were alſo Free from Common Amercements. Several Barons and Lords of Seigneuries had the like Freedom from Common Amerciaments, by Charter, as I ſuppoſe, from the King. For example. The Sheriff of Northamtonſhire was charged with half a mark an amerciament impoſed by Alan de Nevill on Acheley, twenty ſhillings impoſed on Haringworth, twenty ſhillings impoſed on Fodringhey, and other ſumms, of amerciaments impoſed on other Towns hereunder mentioned; But the King of Scots, who was Lord of the ſame Towns, having Freedom from theſe Common Amercements, the Sheriff was diſcharged thereof (w).

j marca,

In like manner and for the like reaſon, the Sheriff of the Counties of Cambridg and Huntendon was diſcharged of the Amerciaments hereunder written (x); and the Sheriff of the Counties of Werwick and Leiceſter (y); and the Sheriff of the County of Northamton (z). Barons of the Kings Exchequer had Freedom, for their Lands and their Tenants, from Common Amerciaments, by their Privilege of Sitting at the Exchequer (a). Eccleſiaſtical fees or the Lands of the Clergy and Religious (b) were exempt from Common Amerciaments (c). And other perſons were exempted from them by vertue of Charters. The Burgh of Arundel was diſcharged of an Amerciament for a Murder, Becauſe it was Found by Inquiſition made by the County of Suſſex at the command of the Chief Juſticier, that the Burgh was not wont nor ought to be charged therewith (d). Gilbert de Aldermanbury had a Charter from K. Richard I, granting him Freedom from Aſſiſes and Suits to Court, and commanding that if he was to be amerced, he ſhould not be amerced at above half a mark. By vertue of That Charter, he was acquitted of two marks and a half, an amerciament for a Default (e).

IV. Divers Lords of Seigneuries were, by charter from the King, entituled to have to their own uſe the amerciaments that aroſe within their Seigneurie. However, the Lords were to Claim the ſame at the Exchequer. William de Burne and others belonging to the Biſhop of Bathes Fee were amerced for a Diſſeiſin; And That amerciament was admeaſured by the Kings precept; and was ſet-over to the Biſhop of Bathe by vertue of his Franchiſe (f). This is a thing frequently done at this day; and is ſo well known, that it needeth no explanation.

V. There are great numbers of Amercements both in Criminal and Common Pleas put in Charge in the Revenue-Rolls, which are only in general terms De miſericordia, without expreſſing for What cauſe the Amercement was impoſed. As where it is only ſaid, Such a one debet So much de miſericordia: As in the caſe of Robert Fitz-Hugh and others hereunder mentioned (g): To which which, many other inſtances might be added, out of the Revenue-Rolls of KKK. Henry II, Richard I, and John: But I forbear reciting them, becauſe they contain nothing Hiſtorical or Inſtructive. There are likewiſe many Amercements in general terms pro Foreſta: Which being very numerous, brought-in a conſiderable revenue. I will paſs-by theſe Amercements of the Foreſt, as ſoon as I have ſhewn in a few inſtances the manner of impoſing them. In the Reign of K. Stephen, amercements for the Foreſt were ſet upon ſeveral perſons in the Counties of Cambridg and Huntindon, by Geoffrey de Clinton (h); and in Surrey by Ralf Baſſet (i). In the Reign of K. Henry II, amercements for the Foreſt were ſet upon Adam de Brus and a great number of other perſons in Yorkſhire (k); upon Henry de Nonant and others in Devonſhire (l); upon Robert Corbet and others in Shropſhire (m), upon many others in Northamptonſhire (n), upon Gilbert de Munemue and others in Herefordſhire (o), upon William Fitz-Randulf and others in the Counties of Notingham and Derby (p), William de Bracy and others in Worceſterſhire (q), Richard ſon of Heldebrand in Wiltſhire (r), Hamo Peccatum and others in Eſſex and Hertfordſhire (s), and upon ſeveral perſons in Hamſhire (t); and in the reign of K. John, in Yorkſhire &c (u). down in the Records, I ſhall take leave to be pretty Copious in producing examples of That ſort. The Amercements in Criminal and Common Pleas which were wont to be impoſed during This Firſt Period and afterwards, were of ſo many ſeveral ſorts; that it is not eaſy to place them under Diſtinct Heads. Let them, for Methods ſake, be reduced to the Heads following: Amercements, for or by reaſon of Murders and Manſlaughters, For Miſdemeaners, For Diſſeiſines, For Recreancy, For Breach of Aſſiſe, For Defaults, For Non-appearance, For Falſe Judgment, And for not making Suit, or Hue and Cry. To Them may be added Miſcellaneous Amercements, for Treſpaſſes of divers kinds.

VI. As to Amercements for or in reſpect of Murders or Manſlaughters: The Hundred of Faleſley was amerced xx marks, for a Murder; The Sheriff of Hantſhire levyed it, and anſwered it to the Crown. The Hundred of Clere was amerced for a Murder (w): And Amercements for the like cauſe were alſo ſett upon the Hundred of Cheſterton (x); The Hundreds of Berdeſtaple, Northchelmsford, Witham, and Lexden (y); The Hundred of Hertford (z); The Hundreds of Faverſham and Middelton (a); The Judges of the County and of the Hundreds of Suffolk (b); Liulf de Aldredeſley (c); Stephen ſon of Erchembald (d); Odo ſon of Alſi, and others (e); Nigell de Doncaſter (f); The Hundred of Langetrie (g); The Hundred of Black-Hadfeild (h); Ralf de Burguignon and Graham de Graham (i); Walter de Chaiſney (k); The Towns of Rech and Newbigging (l); The

Now we are ſpeaking of Duells, I will lay before the Reader a pretty remarkable Caſe of a Duell that was fought in the reign of K. Henry III. between Walter Blowberme an Approver and Hamon le Stare; together with a [illegible] or Figure of the Duell, as it was drawn at That time. The caſe was This. Walter Blowberme appealed Hamon le Stare of Robbery: alledging, that they were together at Wincheſter, and There ſtole Cloaths and other goods; whereof Hamon had, for his ſhare, two Coats, to wit, One of Iriſh cloth, and the other a party-coat of Cloth of Abendon and Burell of London: And that he (the ſaid Walter) was in fellowſhip with the ſaid Hamon in the ſaid Robbery, he offereth to Prove by his Body, as the Court ſhall award. Hamon came and Denyed the whole. And ſaith that he will Defend himſelf by his Body. Whereupon it was awarded, that there ſhould be a Duell between them. A Duell was ſtruck. And Hamon being vanquiſhed in the combat, was adjudged to be hanged. It was found, that Hamon had no chatells to forfeit to the King. This Caſe is entred in a Small membrane remaining in the Queens Treaſury of Records in the Tower of London. It is written in a Little hand, of the Reign (as I gueſs upon view) of K. Henry III. But the membrane (which contains ſeveral other Appeals beſides this) hath ſuffered by Time or weather, ſo
